An automotive 12 volt, 5 watt bulb (globe) with (usually) a bayonet fitting. You can get bulbs that have dual filaments, one filament for tail lights, the other for brake or indicator lights. The brake/indicator light filament has a higher wattage rating (21 - 25 Watts) so the bayonet typically has staggered locating pins. This prevents the higher wattage rating being used as the tail light filament.

http://www.eziautoparts.com.au/lighting/globes/stop-tail-and-indicator-globes.html

New technology is seeing the incandescent bulbs being superseded by LED arrays.

The theory is they are simple and vandal proof! They also lessen the effect of an external aerial on the aesthetics and the aerodynamics of the car. No wind whistles on these window aerials!

Depends on the size and the source. An H-bomb going off next to you would give you one hell of an EMP, not that you would have time to notice. Modern chips are fabricated with 45nM features and the move is on to 22nM, which means even 1 volt would arc over them.

Thanks for these. IF you are interested in QSLing, Radio Nederland has a convenient 30-minute EE BC via Tinian at 1030z on 11895.

Our best reception of DW out here is via Kigali. Very dependable.

Reception has been abysmal last 36 hours, but have not checked yet today.

But that would most definitely not light from the static electricity induced in an antenna wire on a stormy night and would shunt away much of the wanted signal anyway.

So I think BDK must mean something else.

Either that or he's making it up as he goes.

I admit I am not in one of the best places in the world for old technology.

I recently purchased a used Drake SPR4. Being far too expensive (and too highly taxed) for a native to buy, it was bought by an immegrant from the US who thought he was going to listen to the news in English on shortwave.

In 1976 or so when he bought it he proably was right, but the radio looked like by 1980 it had been placed on a shelf and ignored.

I searched around for #47 bulbs for the dial lights. These are the small bayonet 6 volt bulbs that were in almost everything up until grain of wheat bulbs and LEDs became common.

I found what was probably the only box in the country. I could have ordered them from the US, but the cheapest box I could find was over $25 after I included postage.

Someone recommend a place called SuperBrightLeds.com on another mailing list I am on. They sell replacement bulbs with LEDs instead of filaments. These bulbs work on AC or DC, and can be used by themselves or in series.

The best point for me was they put them in an envelope for $5 shipping.

The drake uses 2 bulbs with a blue filter and one without. I replaced the bulbs that were filtered with blue LED bulbs and the unfiltered one with a white LED bulb. Quite a spiffy result. :-)

Geoff.

I don't think the windshield-internal dipoles work as well on FM as a good external vertical whip of the proper dimension. They are not omnidirectional, nor are they vertically polarized, both of which are helpful for FM in a moving car. The folded ones may have different characteristics that overcome these drawbacks, I don't know for sure.

Moreover, they are not likely the AM antennas at all - almost every car AM radio since dirt has used a ferrite- or air-core coil antenna; far more effective than a whip or wire ever could be. Especially the ferrite, it gets you what a whip cannot - ~ full wave resonance and high relative gain. Match that with a quality AM radio and you'll have a nice MW DX machine in your car. I love listening to stations

Bruce Jensen

1) Those were not dipoles. The use of two wires was for symmetry purposes only. They were not directional at all.

2) The only AM car radios that ever used a loop or loopstick antenna were the "pull-out" portables. Almost every car radio ever made (up until digital readout synthesized units) used variable inductors for tuning, but for tuning only, because they were more stable than variable capacitors.
The antenna was and has always been that whip on the fender/cowl/windshield.
These are far more effective than a loop or loopstick in an automobile, since those type antennas do not work at all well inside a steel structure.
I guarantee you that if you unplug that whip from your car radio, it will go silent (unless you are sitting next to the transmitter site.)

What? Car radios use coil/loop antennas for AM? I think you're mistaken. The metal car body would seem to be a bad environment for such an antenna.

Last week, Senator Bill Nelson, Democrat of Florida, tried to bring a small group of journalists with him on a trip he was taking through the gulf on a Coast Guard vessel. But at about 10 p.m. on the evening before the trip, someone from the Department of Homeland Security's legislative affairs office called the senator's office to tell them that no journalists would be allowed.

"No further elaboration" was given...

"We were questioned extensively. Who was on the aircraft? Who did they work for? The minute we mentioned media, the answer was: 'Not allowed.'"

From the start, the administration has seemed intent on allowing BP to operate in near-total secrecy.

Since dirt until very recently AM car antennas have been active whips.
Note the very tiny center conductor in a car antenna co-ax; because the impedance is so high at 1 MHz. The 31" whip, plus the lead, is your AM antenna. Same as an MFJ or Stoner Dymek active. No difference. Short whip into an FET. The old radios had slug-tuned PTOs. Maybe that's what you're thinking of.

I was told that the secret, in the automotive world at least, to not allow the solder to flow back along the wire from where it is needed, ie. under the insulation. The wire should remain flexible immediately behind the connector and any solder flow would prevent this flexibility.

I have always preferred soldered joints so I'm with you on this one!

Depends on the crimper, but a good one only needs one squeeze and yes the second squeeze can make the joint less secure.

* * * Clarification * * *

Yes the Antenna Wire goes around {thru} the End Insulator first.

It is the free "Tag" End that gets Soldered and Secured to the Matching Transformer Hardware or Wire; or to the Center Wire of the Coax Cable.

Same on the Far-End the Antenna Wire goes around {thru} the End Insulator first. Then the free "Tag" End that gets Soldered about two Inches back for 1/2" ~ 1" and the un-soldered
Tip Wires are spread-out to bleed-off the Static [ESD]

Clearly Solid {Single Strand} Wire does not need to be Soldered.

Most likely common 7-Strand {12-Strand}
Two Layers 1+7 -or- Two Layers 3+9 commercial Electrical Wires may or may not need to be Soldered to get every Strand in the Bundle 'connected' and working as one "Bonded" Antenna Element.

But the 19-Strand commercial Electrical Wires are usually Three Layers of 1+7+12 and not all of the Wires may be 'connected' without Soldering them all together at some point {spot} on the Length to Electrically "Bond" them as one Wire.

Now when using a Stranded Antenna Wire like Flex-Weave with 168 Strands or 259 Strands http://www.radio-ware.com/products/fw.htm
-imho- Soldering can help in getting each and everyone of those 100+ Individual Stranded Wires 'connected' and working as one fully "Bonded" Antenna Element.

The 12 VDC Auto Tail Light Bulb has a Tungsten Element which is a relatively High Resistance and functions as a constant {always-on} bleed resister to drain any static electricity before it could build-up. Cheaper that a Resister and the Mini-Coils of the Tungsten Element was way far beyond the HF Band so it only functioned as a Resister and not a Coil {Inductor} when used with a SWL [HF] Antenna. ~ RHF

Never saw one of these 12 VDC Tail Light Bulbs
'glow' because they were constantly bleeding-off the Static Electricity before it had a chance to build-up -but- using a Neon NE-2 Bulb will 'glow' if the Static Electricity does build-up to trigger it.
That is why using an NE-2 Neon Bulb by itself is not recommended since it is designed to Fire only after the Static is already built-up.

Using a NE-2 Neon Bulb with a Bleed Resister is often done with the idea that the NE-2 is an Overload 'fail-safe' should the Bleed Resister fail of there is a not to distant Lightning Strike.

If you are already using a Matching Transformer
Balun/Unun with your SWL Antenna the the Bleed Resister generally is not needed or required.

- - Do not "double strike" when you crimp.

- On this last, why not?
- Is there some weakening that occurs?

A good solid strong single Crimp 'sets' it's Contact {Compression} Points and nothing more is required. {Optimum}

The second Crimp often disturbs these Contact {Compression} Points and may in-fact reduce the hold {efficiency} of some or all of them.
* Often nothing is gain and sometimes there is a loss of a solid crimp. {bad crimp job}
+ The Double Crimp is twice the work with no real improvement in the product. {wasted labor}

- I was told that the secret, in the automotive world at least, to not
- allow the solder to flow back along the wire from where it is needed,
- ie. under the insulation.

Wanna bet? And the signal loss was minimal on the huge antenna I used it on. Actually, that was a bonus as the signal level on that antenna was really too much for all my receivers. The local AMBC station was so strong here anyway, I needed a BC killer filter plus 10 or 20DB attenuation to keep from hearing it in the background all the time. I was kind of happy when it came apart and I had to redo it, and I basically cut it in half, size wise. I still had more than enough antenna for ute listening. When I cut the size down, I went to the gas discharge tube type arrestors, one for each receiver.

> So I think BDK must mean something else.

Nope.

> Either that or he's making it up as he goes.

Nope again, I got woke up several times when I forgot to flip the short out switch before I went to bed. When it's really cold out, and the wind blows, there's enough voltage to light up a bulb pretty brightly on peaks. It had to be really cold, and really windy for it to light up. In a lit up room, it wasn't very bright, but in the middle of the night, it was hard to miss.

BTW, I didn't use any kind of matching transformer, I had no use for any more signal strength than I had already with just a straight coax hookup. I'm very close to a river and once the eclectic company replaced the bad transformer that was driving me crazy for years, it's a pretty quiet area, RF wise.

BpnJ,

If they were actually interested in how they were 'getting out' with their Message to any Target Area. All they would have to do is call-up one or two of their Embassies in the Target Area for a Radio Check via the Telephone of Internet.

Or may be their merely being On-the-Air is good enough for their government to point to their people that they are getting their Message-Out.

And here was me thinking Gregg had called the trolls off!

Looks like he might have "lost control"!

I keep larbgai on permanent killfile. In his entire history of usenet posting, the ONLY on-topic relevant post he ever made was in soc.culture.thai and related to Thai bargirls, an area of expertise in which he displays considerable experience!

As for the type of joint he is referring to, I have no need of artificial stimulants. At 72, the mere act of waking up in the morning is a good start to the day!

I do find it most interesting that the very same group of people blaming Obama/feds for not doing anything about the worst natural disaster in recent history (or at least one of..) also want the government to step out of the way of the oil companies (and for that mattery ALL corporations) and let them do whatever they want or need to do to supply gasoline (or whatever).

Take a look at the revenues that local, state and federal govt. entities obtain through the taxation of gasoline and oil as a whole and you might just find that they make more of a 'profit' than the oil companies themselves.

All that, and they don't have to explore one single acre, drill one hole, transport one gallon, refine one gallon, and then transport it again.

Such a deal!

I gave a good listen to this BC on June 13, 2010 beginning about 2255z (already well into the EE BC). The music at that time was high, easily copied despite a seriously wavering signal here in California, and the voices heard beginning shortly after 2300 were also at a fair level, although what they were saying was anyone's guess (both OM and YL were talking in short, sometimes repetetive phrases for 13 minutes, but the signal was very low). Then, into a music program with highly variable audio levels and occasional very low audio announcements.

I actually wrote a reception report for this (with somewhat more detail) which I will type up and send tomorrow - we'll see what happens.

And how much indirect cost of producing that gasoline is borne by much are we spending in the Horn of Africa to protect oil companies?

This is definitely the end of an era: AOR UK will cease to exist after June 2010.

See details here: < http://www.aoruk.com/Index.htm >

There is now only one tabletop shortwave communications on the market (so far as I know): the ICOM IC-R75 which is hardly in the class of some of the great tabletops of years past (at least in my opinion) though it's leagues ahead of most portables (and, I believe, can be greatly improved with the addition of the Sherwood SE-3).

Many people have said that the shortwave hobby is dying and I'm afraid I'm now inclined to agree with them. What's really sad (and possibly dangerous) is that, if shortwave communications "goes," how will "captive" countries - and make no mistake: there are plenty of them and there will be many more to come - be reached? Internet is certainly no substitute for shortwave radio.

It's possible that, just when we need shortwave, it may no longer exist.

In any case, if you do own a good tabletop shortwave receiver, hold on to it and keep it in good repair because you probably won't be able to replace it.

I disagree. The market has stratifed into two classes of radios. Portables, ranging from cheap to mid priced, from analog tuning AM only to digital with sync detectors, etc and ham transceivers with full coverage.

For example, Universal sells a new Yaseu FT-817nd for $600, which covers 100kHz to 470mHz (with gaps), receives USB, LSB, CW, AM, FM, W-FM, Digital (AFSK) and Packet (1200/9600 FM).

If you want something a more "desktop" the 857 is $750 and includes DSP.

Universal lists an Alinco not yet available, for probably $650 with a 30kHz to 30Mhz AM/FM/SSB receiver.

The ICOM 706 is $970 and it can be split into a radio and a control head to take less space. $970 sounds like a lot of money, but it's less than a Kenwood R5000 cost in 1991 and about half of what it cost if you added the good AM filter and VHF convertor.

The 703+ which is a similar rig with low power output is only $750. It's limited to 30kHz to 60mHz reception, without the VHF and UHF reception.

Granted anything beyond the 817 needs a power supply but a 3-4 amp one will do for reception.

In 1991 terms the $600 today to buy the 817 would have been about $300 and bought you a Radio Shack HTX-100. A nice 10m SSB/CW rig.

By that reckoning, an NRD-535D with all the extras would be close to $5000 today. How many ham rigs with DC to Daylight reception, DSP, 100 or more memories, computer interfaces etc can you get for that.

Granted some countries, for example the one I live in restricts the ownership of transmitters to hams, but the US does not.

Geoff.

No way was the static lighting up a 12V 5W filament bulb.

You might conceivably seen something if there was a lightening strike closeby.

Or maybe the filament was actually open circuit and you were seeing some kind of gas discharge.

Along the Gulf Coast, crews work around the clock to clean up what seems like a never-ending mess. But sometimes journalists find it difficult to get to the scene to do their jobs. Many reporters have been denied access to public areas by BP contractors and local law enforcement, prompting allegations that the oil giant is trying to control the story. BP denies it.

And at a recent news conference, national incident commander Thad Allen insisted that he's told BP to give journalists access to safe and secure areas. In a piece for Mother Jones, reporter Mac McClelland wrote that she was stymied at every turn by Jefferson Parish sheriff's deputies brought it to supplement the local police. Deputies, she reports, that were following the orders of BP.

AOR does not produce any hf receivers for the hobby,since they discontinued their highly rated 7030. Also, Icom may stop making the misfortunate R75 in the near future. But,we do have Ten-Tec,Palstar,Sangean,NASA (aka AKD,Sitex),Eton (junk). And we also have a whole new breed of SDRs from different places. Sometimes I wonder why Elecraft does not make just a receiver- it could become a real super-seller.

I have an R75, and am generally very happy with it. Nonetheless, an Elecraft RX would be just dynamite.

==========

You are full of shit.

Hey, dipshit retarded one...

Have your sister come over here and blow me, boy.

Obama is a two-bit punk! Heck, he doesn't even care about his relatives who live in squalor. What a guy! He could send his brother $20 which would more than double his income, and, his brother could probably afford a 'double-wide' hut.

You dumb sand niggers (sorry, I categorize ya all this way) need to understand that you need to get your collective shit together...

Obviously another clueless Canadian Cunt.

I'm waiting for Obama to start chucking spears and promising everyone their own hut and and a $12 stipend a year.

Better naked than Marxist!

How the f00k would you know what I intended or not you worthless piece of Canadian excrement?

Tamp some cotton in it, little girl.

In all fairness, it is I who make you drool on command, dumbass.

I'll bet you use those Vise-Grip's when the gerbils get stuck, right?

You were an automatic dumbass at birth.

However, a pile of crap (such as yourself) is an idiot!

Quit crossposting, ya little queer Canuck.

"Do you realize how childish you look?"
Nope, I refuse to look in the mirror.

Take a walk, buttfuck.

Sheesh... another f00kin queer!

I ain't white, but unlike you, I dislike no one.

Come on! How can anyone be straight after free beer and sausages

You are indeed a queer, are you not?

Who will you be bunking with, Bob?

Come lick me homo boy.

Come and arrest me, cockbite.

Yep, the Great Spirit watches over us all!

You are worthless.

Yeah, go ahead, you drooling idiot.

Nope, but you're a faggot now, right?

Yer mama tossed ya because you're a homo boy, ain't that true?

Did I make any distinction with regard to country, you pedantic little cocksucker?

Blow me, faggot boy!

Fuck YOU, and fuck CanaDuh.

Now asswipe, go take your meds.

Take your meds, retard.

Humanity would be better served if 'Eduardo' were to take his shtick to the fields and began picking lettuce.

And, 'Eddy', may I be so bold as to state that the best part of you obviously dripped down your mothers leg.

You are a nice retarded boy.

I don't know, though it might be fun to torture him!

Your move, bitch...

Dumbass Canucks, such as yourself, are not deserving of oxygen.

Even more ironic is that you never dispute the fact that you are a little cocksucker!

Hey, dumbass, I don't watch the Fox News channel. So, you can shove that dumbass idea right up your gaping Liberal ass!

But hey, I made $14,000 trading oil today.. blow me

Funny how the US Govt. sent me over $50,000 last year

LMFAO as I sit and look at my royalty cheques...

I prefer genuine ROLEX!

Shove it up your ass, you faux little SOB.

You're full of shit, SOB.

Jerking off not enough for you, boy?

Do you spit or swallow?

Very tasty!

Actually, I know quite a few homosexuals.

I interact on at least a weekly basis with them, and surprisingly enough, they themselves utter the words 'damn faggots' with those who tend to step out of line.

Is that the gay place to be?

Were you the blower or the blowee?

If you'd like to call me, I'm here to help you until 0330 GMT at:

Ya right, suck my dick...

Stop whining, you pathetic little prick.

I'm gonna go buy a new Stratocaster tomorrow!

You need to buy a chink watch!

I thank the Great Spirit every day for the fact that I'm not white like you.

I know enough to realize that you most likely have BO.

But, let me say this: if we were to find that something was sent into CanaDuh, and it were not checked, and then passed to the USA for bad purposes, you'd be on your knees asking the USA not to give your sorry asses the stomping that you would so rightly deserve, you stupid, fucking, pieces of shit that you are!

I don't watch your youtube crap, cartoon boy!

God 'ol SPAM

Sorry, I'm not a racist like you, Edweenie...

Hey, Chink Boy, I got a real Rolex, still ticking after 33 years.. shove it up your slant eyed ass.

Get the hell out of my country, boy, and head back to where those who appreciate little NAZI bastards such as yourself, you little faux Hispanic piece of shit.

He's a bean blower!

Stuff a burrito in it, 'Eduardo'.

FUCK CANADUH

In your case that must mean Hispanic Retard department.

Proud to be Miami and a blood relative of Abraham Lincoln

I said it before, and I say it again... Vicente Fox is a stinking piece of Mexican shit.

Keep blowing those beans out your sorry, un-american ass, boy.

Our data indicates that humanity would be better served if you were in the fields picking lettuce.

Wonder why.... could it be that the Canucky Niggah is timid, afraid...?

Damn, the Canucky Niggah didn't have a damn thing to say...

Extremely heavy emphasis on the BOY.

Actually VA facilities are quite good, but if you Canucky niggahs poke around one might find a lot of things wrong.

Fuckin' dumbass.

You are certainly an SOB, you stupid, MF'ing, liar and poseur!

WRNO FM 99.5 became Rush Radio today.
Rush mentioned it on the show, and also seemed to say that at least for a while they'd be carrying his show for 18 hours a day.

Your birth trait is that you're a MORON, dumbass.

Something for your faux Hispanic cock sucking brain to think about, eh?

Blow it out yer ass, Canuck!

All your talk comes from within the contours of your ass.

Yes, I am witty, and I am wise!

my mommy blew it out her ass II wrote

True, ain't it, little faux Hispanic BOY.. (Heavy emphasis on the BOY!)

Stuff a taco in it, Ramon!

And don't forget SAMBLA, South American Man Boy Love Association.

Mouth wide open, ready to take a load.

Difficult for moi?

After eating the taco's wouldn't they be capable of gassing themelves?

It is then my patriotic friend, you must reach in the closet, place your hands upon the weapon, and blow the cock sucking, bean blower back into Mary's arms....

They are mere asswipes, suitable for flushing.

How many American lives were affected by the slant eyed shit throughout the entire war?

Dumbass Canucks, sure ain't Rolex wearin' respectable folk...!

Or better yet, go get yourself some IBO Cock!

Yeah, after all, you're the Queen of your drug addled world.

And that has exactly what to do with the fact that CanaDuh is a Third World Country?

Canucks need to be castrated.

Shame? Sorry, I'm not a dumbass Canuck. Blow me, boy.

Hey, buttfuck boy... try to pay attention, you little piece of non-listening excrement.

Why are the retards mostly dumbass Canucks?

Run along little Canucky dweeb.

One of my nicknames, starting around 1975 or so has been 'Raoul'

Well, now you know them, and you know me, Karl Mauritania!

Obviously you're just a retard boy who failed as a corporate manager.

Did I say it was, shit for brains?

Because you're a moron, Druggie!

Ace is doing ok!

They don't call me 'Ace' for nothing!

And you, just another retard on the short bus.

All of my DX is better than your DX no matter what I do.

Well, I cann assure most everyone here that I've done 100% of my DX'ing without the help from anyone here, and I've had a moderate amount of success.

You claim to be 'Cherokee'... I think you're just 'Wannabee'...

No need to do anything more productive than cash the checks, invest the money, do some DX'ing, and rile up the mentally ill Canucks!

Why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (1)

LOLOLOLOLOLOL... what a damn dumb cunt you are!

Now get your homo ass working on that documentation, boy!

Give it a shot queer boys, I dare ya!Very tasty!

Cocksuckers such as your self.

Hit the road, 'tard.

Toss 'em all, especially the Canucks!

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (2)

Now go suck on some sushi, you little miscreant.

I just asked you to have the cunt send me a letter, boy.

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (3)

"I'm so obese I had to get the extra heavy duty plastic blow-up doll"

Let me sum up, you Canucks are assholes!

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (4)

Hit the road, drug addled fool.

Shame on CanaDuh for killing thousands of people every day.

Be sure to tell the bitch to send me that letter, faggot!

get your bitch daughter to send me a letter

Inquiring minds want to know just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (5)

Have the bitch send me the letter!

Well, go tell your other cocksucking countrymen.

Hey, have the bitch send me a letter

I can show her mine, and she can show me yours?

Ain't gonna happen, ya got no air farce, ya got no ne vuy, va goy nuthitin?

If you think for a moment that they'll listen to a drunken dumbass Canuck you'd be sadly mistaken!

Have the bitch send me a f00kin letter!

You folk really think ya got balls?

Now run along to wherever it is you little debutantes run off to...

I'll be waiting for that letter from your daughter, asshole!

Oh yeah, tell me baby...

Hey, little pussy boy, we spell it "cunt" out here, just like I think I spelled it originally, boy.

Never touched the skanky,,,

If I don't get that letter, boy, then you and your daughter must both be drunk, eh?

Finally shut you up, eh boy?

Have the bitch send me a letter on whatever letterhead YOU might make up.

Ain't that just speshul! He's got to go find somewun to fake him a lettter.

Have the bitch send me a letter on her firms letterhead, boy.

Great, then get your bitch daughter to send me a letter on her firms letterhead within the next two weeks!

Have your daughter draw up a contract, BOY!

Hey, 'Edurado', have your daughter get in touch with me, amigo

Guess that shut the little boy up!

Stuff it up your prancing ass, 'Tardo!

I'm LMFAO, since I've busted the f00kin faggot!

You are after all a drug addled 'tard boy who obviously knows little about the SWL/DX hobby.

Go blow some IBO Cock, and leave the real radio hobbyists alone, OK?

Let the faggot boy prove it!

LMFAO at the f00kin faggot

Yes, I learn more and more with each passing day!

LMFAO at the pathological liar!

Lying 'tard boy, much like the other debutante, malcontent, faux boys who inhabit the lace we call RRS.

You, on the other hand are nothing more than a sorry little homosexual 'tard

Liar, liar, pantalunes on fire! (1)

New history will be made when we crush CanaDuh!

Kan you just imagining that, you little faggot Cannucky boy?

Anybody, even Bozo, is worth more than some dumbass, faggot, Canuck!

Get busy, boy!

But you can't prove it, retard boy!

I know you faggots have dreams

Blow it out your ass, you dumbass Canadian! You and the rest of your dumbass countrymen, and women too!

You'd not be very happy if I returned, little bitch boy!

Go get some IBOCock, 'tard boy, and bring home a taste for yer mama.

Go give your boyfriend a blow job!

Talk about misery, you're in f00kin CanaDuh, boy!

Poor little cocksucker just had it handed to him

Eh? You sum dumass Canucuy bithyboy...

As long as it screws you Canucks, I'm a happy camper!

That's because you're a fucking liar!

Cry me a f00kin river.

Awwwww... the poor whiny dumbass Canuck is back at it again today.

Huh... you be just another stupid white boy outta Cleveland...

I suggest you get together with your "significant other" and bump butt with each other,

Because I hate White Boy Canucks who suck cock...

Best you shuffle down the alley! That's what your mama wanted!

Crazy Retarded Australian People?

"Even 2 cents is more than a totally worthless Canuck"

You can preDICK all you want, you fraudulent cock sucking, pathologically lying old bastard boy!

Hey, dumbfuck Canuck, I was not asked to leave!

I don't use Chink stuff

I went and bought ammo... I still gots it case them tard boys such as edweena gets stirred up.

And 10,000 rounds isn't a lot.

It was Russian ammo. I don't like the Chinese stuff.

Now where did I put that other case of ammo..

I don't use Chink ammo.

That's not Canuckian, boy!

Kiss my ass, pedant!

I'm LMFAO, Mr. Gay-Lick!

Obfuscate, you little prancer!

LMAO at the 'tard.

Thing is, you 'tards are pretty fixated upon one set of parameters. That is after all why you are considered to be 'tards!

As always, your head is up your f00kin ass.

You fuckin' Liberal asswipes are always ready to give somebodys else's goodies away...

And, hopefully, my dumbass cousin in Mill Valley will leave me her Corvette.

Obviously, you leep your head up your f00kin ass all day long.

I don't 'fear' homos, oh faux one!

Liar, liar, pantalunes on fire! (2)

Apparently you are the 'bendover boy'....

Oh, I certainly have, time after time.

At least I went farther than you!

Good lubricant for you and the boys?

It's what dxAce uses!

that's good enough for me!

One can never slide the BS by dxAce

Not as well as you, fudge pack.

Go for it, dumbass!

Oh come on... it's Fall forward and Spring back. Everyone knows that!

Hit the road, drug addled fool.

Hey, I love kickin' gay-lick ass!

Pretty much what I indicated to you a while back, you f00kin prancer.

The only thing you know about short wave is that that is what your mother gave you when she sent your f00kin ass packin' outta Cleveland.

Screw the drug addled retards.

Nah, I only attack the messenger when he/she/it is obviously drug addled.

So, beat the rush and get the hell off of RRS, you f00kin retard.

Well, in you, we have a drug addled retard in our midst.

Get over it, you fake Hispanic piece of excrement.

And when you do confront HD, you'll have Cocksucker Dave and
The Prancer Boys to thank for it.

Damn... I'm of mixed race ancestry myself, what ever should I do?

Next time we come over the pond once again to save your sorry ass's we'll have to dismantle that stuff.

Heck, I bought 1000 shares of FSEAX the other day.

Don't do business with the Huntington Investment Company, in particular a fellow named Joseph Klein.

Not at all, we are both Miami Indians. ya got a problem with that, boy?

Then hit the road, you drug addled retard.

Just like you wish that you worked for me, retard!

Proven time and time again, fudge pack.

Get it, retard?

Dey done unnerstannn that us nateev boyyys R real Mericans!

I sure he is.

Insert your Gay-Lick reply here, boy:

And yet another Liberal rant

Nah, he was fake little cock sucker like you!

Your pathological lying is an offense to me, and more than likely an offense to God as well.

No medications here, cock sucker boy..

Stuff a watermelon up it

But that stuff isn't what dxAce uses!

Come on now, you being a nice Liberal, Carbon Footprint, Al Gore, Cock Sucking kinda Canuck Bastard..

I won R plantation up nord, dat dem dum ass Canuckys be oween us, ya be 'standin me?

CanaDuh is stupidity!

Stupid little pussy faggot!

Liar, liar, pantalunes on fire! (3)

Mr. Edweenie, the forces of Good are gonna come visit your sorry fake Hispanic White Boy Ass if you keep it up!

Pay attention, cock sucker...

You've done this before, cock sucker...

LMFAO at yet another dumb friggin Canuck..

I spit a wee bit of Guinness earlier!

Oh damn, I guess we pissed another wanker off, Cuz..

I get my ride be fixed, I be cruisin to be givin ya da shake, yu be knowin, eh?

Try again, shithead.....

Dem Canucky boyz are dumaz rasissts..

Nah, I'm just more intelligent than you are.

We gone be sen u to sumplac bad boy... u be so bad weben the reel Canuckys won wan u.

Fookin bustards! Like Edweenie!

Best you wake up soon... fookin retard leetle beetch..

Fookin 'retard.

Indeed, I'm now at WAR with Canuckistan..

May the Great Spirit help the hapless bastards.

At any rate, I'd bet it beats the Canucky Third World state of care...

CanaDuh sucks...

Wanna go to war, shit head?

Think you might win? Think you got a chance?

If you don't... I'd keep my fookin Canucky mouth shut, boy...

Meanwhile, I plan for the Spring campaign, looking forward to the Blind River Massacre.

I collect stamps!

I really don't want to say this, my many shortwave friends, but I find that I am giving up far to much of my increasingly valuable time here on RRS trying to educate the faux, the debutantes, and those who tote..

Therefore, I've simply decided to give up RRS.

Goodbye, I sincerely hope that you all find your niche in

It lit it up a few times every winter, in the daytime, or with the lights on, it was hard to see, so it might have lit up more often. I saw it in the dark easily enough though.

I don't think so, but I tossed the bulb and the little box and socket when I went to the gas discharge tubes, so I don't know.

BAD,

Katrina was a 'natural' disaster and the Bush Regime was slow to respond for a week or two . . .

The BP Oil Spill is no 'natural' disaster : It Is a Totally Man Made Disaster and the Obama Regime has and is still slow to respond after almost two months of inaction and blaming others while doing nothing itself . . .
It's a Total Man Made Big Government Failure

Day # 56 of the 21st Centuries Greatest Ecological Disaster and while Prez Obama still says that "I'm In-Charge" : Yet still Prez Obama Does Nothing and BP is running the show : This Ecological Disaster grows daily while Prez Obama continues to do nothing butLip-Sync to the Teleprompter and Pose for the TV Cameras. . .

-new- We are about to have an Oval Office Moment with Barack and his O'mazing Technicolor Blame-Coat http://www.musicroom.com/Images/Catalogue/fullsize/RUG37292.jpg

Prez Obama 'jaw-bones' while the Gulf of Mexico and the Life within it is Chemically Burned from the Pollution oozing from the BP Oil Spill :
That's Leadership Failure by Prez Obama
That's Executive Failure by Prez Obama
That's Presidential Failure by Prez Obama
The Obama Regime : Failure after Failure after Failure
BIG GOVERNMENT INACTION ON A SCALE
SOME BIG - It's Criminal and the Government Officials that are allowing it to happen and continue should be hauled before the US Congress to testify; and Tried in the Courts sent to Jail for their Crimes against the Environment and the American People.

Prez Obama's answer to the BP Oil Spill Cap-and-Trade : Limits on Home Utility Use and High Taxes on the Gas and Electricity to make your Home Livable. Prez Obama wants to Tax the Average American Family $1800 just for Living in their own Homes.
...but... still does nothing about Cleaning-Up the BP Oil Spill and Repairing the Damage to the Gulf of Mexico.

shame, Shame. SHAME On You Prez Obama !

thank you very much - prez obama for the continuing story of big government's failure ~ RHF

Yes today is the 15 June 2010 and it is Day # 57
of the 21st Centuries Greatest Ecological Disaster.

Prez Obama still says that "I'm In-Charge" -but- This Ecological Disaster continues to grow daily; all the while Prez Obama does nothing except Lip-Sync to the Teleprompter and Pose for the TV Cameras . . .
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/20784d55228cbb7a
The Real Story is the INACTION of the Obama Administration in dealing with BP and really taking charge and fixing the problem.
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/beae8dcf410ca293
So Prez Obama did not Blame . . . for the BP Oil Spill
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/c292ec2fb3cd44b0
Prez Obama 'fiddles' while the Gulf of Mexico Chemically Burns from the Pollution oozing out of the Oil Spill -that's- failure, Faliure. FAILURE !

More and more of the American Public {Voters} are now Blaming Prez Obama for the 'continuation' of the BP Oil Spill then BP for the 'actual' Oil Spill.

Groundhog is so fat and lazy, he married a pregnant woman.And that's a Fact.

Groundhog was walkin along and he saw Old Hickory.He held a gun on Old Hickory, he said, Now you take a drink of this Whiskey! Old Hickory said, Dang, that's the worst Whiskey I ever tasted! Groundhog handed Old Hickory his gun, he said, Now you make me take a drink of this Whiskey! And that's a Fact.

Dutch Oil Skimmers

The Dutch oil skimmers could have been working in the Gulf of Mexico within three days, three days.The Dutch people offered to fly them in.

And now the ''Administration'' are going to allow Kevin Costner's oil centrifuge devices do some work.

You really have no idea what Obama is doing. Neither does the great bulk of the American public. You are nothing but a demagogue and a shill.

AKA, a troll. Such a proud avocation.

It's quite obvious.

Remember the Greek god Pan? Well, with each purchase, this company supplies little goat like legs to support any other receivers you may connect in a semicircular pattern around the SDR receiver.

The uneducated masses may think that the phrase actually means 'wide ranging', but we know better.

Nah Dave in the 21st Century 'pocket' sized Cellular Phones have made World Wide Communications so very easy and non-technical that to today's young people Amateur Radio has lost it's mystic and a certain je ne sais quoi that it had in the pre-1950s.

Then can along the Boy's Pocket Transistor Radio and Amateur Radio has been in a decline every since.

Followed by the Personal Computer Age and the

Mike [M II],

Many would still ask . . . Where's the Knob ?

For many old time Shortwave Listeners (SWLs)

Listening to the Radio had a certain 'feel' to it.

Plus Turning-the-Knob on a Radio with an Analog Dial/Scale often brought the awe and joy of 'discovery' to the Radio Listener.

While keying in a Frequency Number or having the Computer Scan and Log lacks
the 'bond' between a Man and His Radio.

real radios 'glowed' in the dark ~ RHF

I got that from the first crystal set I built. I was amazed at how something so simple could pull in radio stations from far away, and that wasn't even shortwave! I didn't even consider the deficiencies of the medium such as lack of selectivity. I would listen for hours even when the content of the programs was lacking, such was my fascination with the medium.

It depends upon the era you grew up in. To the tech savvy kids of today, keying in a frequency number is as natural as keying in a phone number on their cell phones.

I'm betting there was a lot more interesting stuff to listen to in those days! TV has had a degenerative effect on the mystique of far flung cultures. Why listen to it on the radio when you can see it all on the news or the documentary channels. Kids these days just don't see the point of shortwave radio. They want high definition 3D realism. That and the total lack of patience with anything that isn't 100% perfect and totally store bought. Fading dx signals, no time for that! You have to build it before you can use it? Get outta here!!

You would have more success with kids from third world countries than you would with kids from our tech-savvy world.

Years ago a panoramic adaptor was a CRT spectrum display usually connected to the receiver somewhere around the first IF stage:
http://oak.cats.ohiou.edu/~postr/bapix/Panadap.htm

Now what you are talking about is using an SDR and computer as a spectrum display with an RS232 connection to a communication receiver or transceiver. The software controls the communication recv. or txcvr. frequency and runs the SDR which displays the spectrum around the tuned frequency.

Of course, if the SDR also receives well, you don't really need the extra receiver.

What's a knob?

Seriously, kids today don't like knobs. They like push buttons and touchpads.

> Listening to the Radio had a certain 'feel' to it.

Which is why I have lots of radios with knobs. In fact in the last 5 years, I've bought 3 radios with PTO's and restrung the dial cord and relamped a fourth.

But will my kids like them? Will they use them? probably not.

They are too spoiled by either picking up a phone and calling anyone in the world (most places they would ever call are included in a montly plan so they "free") or if they don't want to get up off their chair and pause their "computing" using SKYPE.

TV comes directly to their TV on a cable connected to a DBS dish, and if they don't like the programs that are one, there is a large library accessable locally and almost an infinte choice on the internet.

I am sorry to say it, but the current generation has been spoon fed so much awe and discovery that they are not interested in looking for themselves. Ask my kids to define discovery and they will answer "channel 34". :-(

> While keying in a Frequency Number or having the Computer Scan and Log lacks
> the 'bond' between a Man and His Radio.

It's what I call the "Dancing Bear Phenomeon". We were impressed by a dancing bear. Our kids have seen so many they are concerend with the quality of the dance.

For example, I recentyly aquired a Drake SPR-4. IMHO it is the worst ergonmic design I have ever used. To tune a frequency, you have to set the band switch to the correct band (within 500kHz). Then reading the little numbers off of the band switch, there is a SECOND band switch (really front end filters) that needs to be set. Once that is set, you adjust the preselector. A hint is on the bottom of the numbers on the band switch.

Then you can tune in your frequency. On the AM BCB the preselector has to be retuned every 50kHz or so.

I love it, I even invested in colored LEDs to replace burnt out light bulbs with fading filters.

If I want my kids to listen, it either has to be a channel they can enter, a file location they can browse, or a URL. If I'm lucky it they will turn a volume control if it does not have a remote.

IMHO sad. But that's the price of progress. When my mother was their age, her mother owned a candy store and had the only telephone on the block. People used to call neighbors at the store, my mom and her sisters would get a small tip to run and get them.

When I was growing up, we had a telephone. We could make local calls only, a one minute call across the country cost enough to buy hamburgers, fries and 'shakes for 10 at the burger joint across the street from my highschool.

Sexist. My wife used to do the same with old tube AM radios he father would fish out of the trash. When we met she had a Sony IFC-2010 and knew how to use it. :-)

A weakly lit up filament bulb is a deep reddy orange. Is that what you saw?

The Rebe has 120 children also? Wow. Mind you it's not surprising. The Good Book has no real proscription against it. There IS a catch, however. You actually have to be able to FEED and CLOTHE these wives. Bummer. That certainly diminishes the rights that property owners USED to have.

> And what would "Drill Here Drill Now Drill Baby Drill Keep on Drillin" > McCain/Palin have done?

First would be to allow drilling in shallow water and on land, where it's far safer. We didn't see drilling accidents like this happen is Alaska when Governor Palin was in charge.

Next, President Palin wouldn't have filled the Department of Interior with incompetent, corrupt fools like Obama did. McCain/Palin would have made damned certain that the MMS was staffed with people who knew what the Hell they were doing, instead of the politically connected, corrupt seat warmers we are currently saddled with. McCain/Palin's people would have grilled BP endlessly, demanding detailed instructions on the plans. McCain/Palin's people would know the actual risks, and would never have used the Obama rubber stamp. McCain/Palin's people would have also demanded to see a detailed account of their plans if the oil leaked.

You know, their jobs.

The same job that was done under President Bush.

The same job that was done under President Clinton.

The same job that was done under President Bush.

The same job that was done under President Reagan.

The same job that was done under President Carter.

The same job that was done under President Ford.

The same job that was done under President Nixon.

We have to go all the way back to the Johnson administration to find a disastrous drilling leak. Nothing a fraction as bad as this, of course.

WHAT OBAMA DID: Nominate BP for a federal safety award.

2. Under McCain/Palin, Homeland Security would have been properly equited to handle the clean up, and to take over the oil rig if neccessary.
There would have been none of this "we don't have the tools." McCain/

Palin understands priorities.

WHAT DID OBAMA THINK WAS MORE IMPORTANT TO SPEND MONEY ON THAT TO STOP AND CLEAN UP THE DRILLING ACCIDENT:

$50,000,000,000.00 of taxpayers money to pay off the Unions.

3. On the day the oil rig sprung, McCain would have been on the air within minutes, and on AF1 within the hour to New Orleans where he would have and a long, very loud one way discussion with BP executives. If the execs were lucky. If not, they would have gotten Mama Grizzly Palin.

WHAT OBAMA DID: Cracked wise at a Barbara Boxer fund raiser.

4. If McCain/Palin's Secretary of the Interior was stupid enough to go on vacation on the same day as Obama's SOI was, he or she would have been greeted at the Grand Cayon with a dozen members of the Navy Seals who would have "escorted" him back to his job.

WHAT OBAMA'S SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR DID: Sent back a 3D post card to the President of the Grand Canyon, with the inscription; "Having a wonderful time - glad your not here! XXXOOO Kenny"

5. Climbed onto the rig about six hours before it was, strictly speaking, safe to do so. McCain then would have long discussion with the head of the rig. Followed by a quick meeting with each worked, where they would be asked if they were up to the job, and what they needed to get the job done.

WHAT OBAMA DID: Quietly canceled the BP safety luncheon. Then golf.

6. McCain would have then returned to the oval office, where he would have had the weak rig workers replaced, and given BP what it needed to get the job done. Or else.

WHAT OBAMA DID: Sang "Hey Jude" with Paul McCartney,

7. McCain/Palin then would have gone on the air, to talk directly the the American people. he would have called for a massive volunteer effort to help save our coasts. He would have gotten everything that floats to use straw to clear as much oil as possible. There would be church groups that would have filled bags with rocks and sacks, and private citizens with trucks would have delivered them where needed. He would have said something like "I'm not asking your to be a POW for your country. I'm not asking you to die. I'm not even asking you bleed. I'm asking you to sweat al little. To take an early vacation and work for a week or so to help save America.

WHAT OBAMA DID - refuse help from England because they didn't fill out the paperwork properly.

WHAT ELSE OBAMA DID - Refused help from 13 other countries who offered to help.

Under McCain/Palin, the barriers would have been long completed, and would be currently be strengthened to make them hurricane resistant. Dissolvents would have been dropped by federal 130s, and much of the oil would have been removed from the water.

McCain would have appealed to what's best in America. The nation would have risen to the occasion.

WHAT OBAMA DID: Appeal to what's worst in America - finger poiting and calls for borderline fascist demands. "We'll keep our boots on BP's throat."

McCain would have lead.

Abiogenic? I've heard it called Abiotic. It makes perfect sense. Some of the strata where the stuff is located has probably NEVER been exposed to surface life. It isn't like coal with fern leaves in it.

'Peak oil' seems to be a ploy to keep prices up. Fake shortages will do that.

This is all a CROCK of supposition and demagoguery. In order to do what you suggest, McCain would had to have had different info that Obama had - since BP effectively lied (and continues to lie) to everyone about the severity of the leak and accident. Palin never had a problem in Alaska because she QUIT after two grueling years as Governor Barbie. She and that prick Young from Alaska don't even believe that a problem exists, or else they don't care. Who appointed the incompetent oil-industry people in charge at the DoI? Here's a hint - it wasn't Obama and it wasn't Clinton.

Having said that, Obama has blown it with this effort. He should have fired Bush's appointees instantly; he should have gotten a real national interest person instead of that shill Sleazar, and he should REALLY have his boot on BPs worthless fucking throat until they choke to death. He should start demanding a REAL 21st century energy policy instead of the rickety obsolete 19th century shit we're stuck with, and he should start dictating the terms by which we move forward instead of watching the world pass us by.

Kind of a bright orange. Nowhere near bright white, but in a nearly totally dark room with blackout curtains, etc, it was hard to miss.

Suppostion? Well, you asked what I thought McCain/Palin would do in this situation. I made educated guesses based their past behavior. Besides, yelling "this would never have happened if my guy had won" is the consolation prize to the loser.

>...and demagoguery.

Everything I wrote about Obama actually happened. If it's demagoguery to list what Obama's actions.... perhaps you guys elected a demagogue.

Which is why it's essential to staff the MMS and the Department of the Interior liberally with competent, intelligent people who've worked in the oil field instead of socialist pol-sci political appointees, like > a problem in Alaska because she QUIT after two grueling years as > Governor Barbie.

Obama did.

She walked away because little fascists like yourself bombarded her with dozens of nuisance lawsuits which made it impossible for her to govern. (These stunts cost her a half million dollars and she spend three out of every four weeks in court.) Only one lawsuit even went to trial, a case Palin won handily. Sarah's children were attacked and ridiculed on national television, and Democratic state representative Mike Kernell of Memphis sent his weasle son David Kernell to break into Gov. Palin's e-mail account.

So, instead of letting herself be a target, she changed the rules. Good for her. She's now a very powerful Republican, and will be essential in winning back the House. And Sarah will remind the Republicans of her first hand experience in just how dirty you cocksuckers fight. There's a whole new game coming up, and you're not going to like how the New GOP plays the game.

There wasn't a problem when Bush or Palin were in charge.

President Obama nominated Ken Salazar.

Here's a

Yes it was. Obama nominated ken Salazar. Mr. Salazar never worked in the Bush White House. Dirk Kempthorne and Gail Ann Norton were Secretaries of the Interior under President Bush.

He did. Obama carried over very few Bush appointees.

Agreed....but Obama nominated the guy. Remember? Ken replaced Dirk Kempthorne?

What he should have done was surround himself with competent workers. What he should be doing now is cleaning up the Gulf. What he IS doing now is looking around desperately to find someone to blame.

Hey, here's a fun fact - did you know that, according to the very liberal PPP polling company, the people of Louisiana think that Obama's handled the Gulf spill worse than Bush handled Katrina?

> He should start demanding a REAL 21st century energy policy

Except that rickety, obsolete 19th centure shit we're stuck with has the minor advantage of actually existing.

A year and a half ago, obama funded 1.2 trillion (including interest) to a stimulus bill that was supposed to unleash a brave new world of magic windmills.

Well, WHERE THE FUCK ARE THEY?

> and he should start dictating the terms by which we move forward Really? "Dictating", say you? DICTATING?" Dictating, such as Dictator Adolph Hitler?

Oh, yeah, because I forgot about Brazil's wind powered flying cars.

Obama kept Bush's appointees. All oil field people.

Bullshit. She talked herself into ridicule, and quit because she saw millions to be made where politics of AK only earned her $100ks. IF she was really worried about what people said about her, she would not be where she is now.

> So, instead of letting herself be a target, she changed the rules.

Rules? Ha. There never have been any.

Yes, a lot of low-IQ 'tards are listening to her empty-headed blather.

She taught us everything we know! Her and Limbaugh and Hannity and Savage and Beck and Murdoch and every other crackpot who thinks with his intestines instead of his brain.

To quote Indiana Jones... "Nazis - I hate these guys." Nit since the robber barons has there been a party so seriously skewed against the powerless in favor of the plutocrats. I hate them already. They have no shame, no conscience.

According to Young, there isn't one now...as of June 4...

"This is not an environmental disaster, and I will say that again and again."

We see where the brains in the Republican party aren't!

Check your history and news sources. BP's safety record - the legally required precautions they were supposed to take to protect against blowouts and spills - in Alaska is no better than the Gulf, and there are public records and employee accounts to prove it. The accident that happened in Louisiana was the result of years if not decades of lack of oversight and foxes guarding the hen house. Bush's crystal-meth sniffing sex-crazed MMS people saw to that.

> > Who appointed > > the incompetent oil-industry people in charge at the DoI? >
>
> President Obama nominated Ken Salazar.

True, and I admit this - and I hated him from the start - BUT everyone below him in MMS was a Bush appointee - previously overseen by Bush's SOI. Neither Salazar nor Bush's previous DOIs had direct day-to-day oversight of the oil industry - MMS did, that's the where the continuity of habit lies, and that's where the direct fault lies.

Yes - his biggest mistake.

2936. Gregg, this is your fault. YOU and ONLY YOU are responsible.

You have a problem with clear, honest, writing?

Agreed - one could fill a book with the endless parade of Obama's arrogance and incompetence. In fact, I suspect those books are currently being written.

Not the head of Department of the Interior, Sen Salar, as you previously implied. Elizabeth Birnbaum was appointed by Clinton, and held over by Bush, where she was promoted to Vice President for Government Affairs and General Counsel for American Rivers.

Who, exactly, are you talking about?

your time to be stuck in the wilderness.

We've had three and a half years of the Smart Guys running the country. Get ready for a major change.

No. Saul Alinsky taught you guys everything you know. Now we have that book.

To quote Harrison Ford (board member of Conservation International who waxed off his chest hair to raise awareness about deforestation) when asked how he could consider himself an environmentalist when he owned nine private planes: "I'll start waking everywhere when everyone starts walking everywhere."

> Nit since the robber barons has there been a party so seriously skewed against the

Who does it hurt when energy prices double? Not Harrison Ford. Not Obama. The powerless who you exploit. Where is your concern for the Louisiana fishermen who've lost their livelihoods because Obama didn't want to do anything about the Gulf leak? The unemployed Obama's simply ignored?

> in favor of the plutocrats.

Obama = Harvard Lawyer, multi-millionaire.
Hillary = Harvard Lawyer, multi-millionaire
Kennedy family = Harvard, billionaires

John Kerry = politically connected Yale billionaire Pelosi = old money, politically connected multi-millioare.
Reid = multi-millionare.

Sarah Palin. Not wealthy. Not powerful. Rose up through the ranks with no help from the estiblishment. Took on the big boys and won.
And you can't stand her because of it.

So, take your fucking Working Class Hero bullshit and shove it up your ass, you big fraud.

> I hate them already. They have

You guys flooded Sarah Palin with endless false lawsits, you've attacked her children, David Letterman called her 14 year old daughter a prostitute, her infant son has been ridiculed, you've tapped her email account, Letterman called her a crack whore - and you applauded them.

You have no shame, and certainly no conscience.

The problem is that the MMS that screwed up did so under Obama's watch, and your desperate attempt to shift the blame to Bush becomes more pathetic by the hour.

Woudl you like to see just how badly Obama's screwed the pooch? Would you?

....because the MMS, under President Bush, didn't have grossly incompetent people who simply took Barrack Petrolatum words. Under President Bush, the direct oversight people, well, oversaw directly.
That's why we had eight happy years of relatively oil free Gulfs.

Oh, nooooooooooooo - Obama has made thousands of "mistakes" which were much stupider than that.

I exploit the powerless? Me? You've got to be kidding. My well. Show me an oil-rich Republican who feels that way.

I have already said that Obama screwed up here.

You compare a bunch of lifetime Demo-only politicians and compare them with a single example of a Neocon from Alaska, and make believe thats a fair comparison?

Did Obama start out rich? Check your facts.

How about the Republicans who have haunted the halls of Congress for years?

How about their cronies in every big dirty industry on the planet, billionaires who fund their campaigns and keep them in luxury? The REAL plutocrats? The ones who the Republicans constantly defend?

And ahem - what exactly has Palin won from the big boys just yet?
She's lucky she's cute - otherwise you leering buttheads wouldn't give her a second look.

Wrong. Check your facts. The same people who are now in trouble have

No - exchanging out every person in the federal government, who he

My PrezDunt Spoked from the Oval Office and I Listened real good on the TV/Radio : "B+" ~ RHF

But then later the nice people on the PBS News Hour said that My PrezDunt only got a "C" as much of what My PrezDunt said was still so vague and/or should have been said weeks ago. {They Smart People}

My PrezDunt looked real Big Time Presidential in that there White House Oval Office; but then so did that there PrezDunt Nixon and that nice Sweater wearing PrezDunt Carter.

PrezDunts they come and go : But that there Oval Office is a setting that lasts forever.
Mister PrezDunt today is the 16 June 2010 and it is now Day # 58 of the 21st Centuries Greatest Ecological Disaster. - - - what cha doing . . .

I just want the world to know.
Dear Senator,

My wife and I have a small store where we have been selling shrimp from for 11 years. Our store is actually a boat in St. Andrews Marina. Everyday fishermen hired by BP are going out in search of oil. I see 30 to 50 boats leave every morning. Many (it should be most*) of these are fishermen that have lost there means of making a living. BP has hired them and is paying them well. At this time we have no oil in Panama City.

MY FIRST POINT, don't do anything that will affect the financial viability of BP. You should encourage purchase of BP fuel, you need to keep BP healthy so the stock price can rise, this makes BP stronger so it can continue to pay cleanup crews and claims.

I am on this marina everyday and I know most of the fishermen, the fisherman are thrilled with the pay from BP.

A small boat of 20 ft gets $1000 dollars day, This is $250,000 a year for a 5 day work week. Fuel and supplies are paid by BP. The larger the boat the higher the pay, $3000 a day is the highest I have heard. That's $750,000 a year, and the expenses are paid. Deckhands are getting $200 dollars a day, that is $50,000 a year. Most of these deckhands never saw $20,000 a year in there life.

The pay is so high that the shrimpers are stopping shrimping and going to work for BP, on oil patrol. The same is happening in Apalachicola Fl, (about 100 miles SE of me) the oyster capitol of this area. Our local oyster bar had to find a new source for oysters, his oystermen went to work for BP.

A quote from our local newspaper,

"APALACHICOLA - With compensation checks easily available, oystering has slowed to a crawl on Apalachicola Bay. ...Seafood houses across the county say they are able to obtain barely 10 percent of their normal allotment of oysters. There are plenty of oysters. (just know one to harvest them)

Same with Apalachicola shrimpers, There is no oil and plenty of shrimp.

Panama City Beach is a tourist area, when the oil gets here the thousands of hotel rooms will not have tourists, the housekeepers won't have work, the restaurants won't have customers and waitresses tips will dwindle. All business will be affected. Real estate is already greatly affected, people don't want to buy with oil coming and some know prices will be lower in 3 or 4 months.

Now back to my situation, for the last 7 years we have been open 10 hrs a day, 7 days a week, 363 days a year.

We will continue working until we can't. The plan was 7 to 10 more years, now I don't know if it will be one more month or one more year. At this point I am confident BP will pay for any losses that I may have in the future, but they need to continue to be financially strong.

I'm sure you're aware that the BP stock price is down 44% since the spill started. This means they have lost 73 billion in market capitalization. It is time to help the company recover rather than do anything that could affect the price further.

Many retirees rely on BP dividends for retirement income. If you push the idea to create an escrow fund and cause the dividend to be unpaid, this will lower the stock price, further weakening the company. Without those dividends the retirees will find other stocks to get there income.

This could cause BP to fail.

If you allow BP to stay strong, the 15 to 20 billion dollars of profit they generate every year will be more than enough to pay cleanup and claims.

Please stay focused on the unintended consequences of creating an escrow fund.

Sincerely,

Mike Knowlton

Recreational fisherman are jumping on this gravy train, it should have been commercial fishermen first. Retirees are supplementing their retirement with their recreational fishing boat.

 (starting with 44% less money)

 The return to SCT of the silly old fool Krypto reminds me of the dead parrot sketch from Monty Python.

Mr. Praline : I wish to make a complaint!

Owner : (hurriedly) Sorry, we're closin' for lunch...!

Mr. Praline : Never mind that, my lad. I wish to complain about Krypsis, what I purchased not half an hour ago from this very boutique.

Owner : Oh yes, the, ah, the Norwegian Blue... What's, ah... W-what's wrong with it?

Mr. Praline : I'll tell you what's wrong with it, my lad. It's dead, that's what's wrong with it.

Owner : No, no, 'e's ah... he's resting.

Mr. Praline : Look, matey, I know a dead Krypsis when I see one, and I'm looking at one right now.

Owner : No no, h-he's not dead, he's, he's restin'!

Mr. Praline : Restin'?

Owner : Y-yeah, restin.' Remarkable bird, the Norwegian Blue, isn't it, eh? Beautiful plumage!

Mr. Praline : The plumage don't enter into it. It's stone dead!

Owner : Nononono, no, no! 'E's resting!

Mr. Praline : All right then, if he's resting, I'll wake him up!

(shouting at the cage)

'Ello, Krypto! Mister Krypto! I've got a lovely fresh cuttle fish for you if you wake up, Mr.Krypto...

(owner hits the cage)

Owner : There, he moved!

Mr. Praline : No, he didn't, that was you pushing the cage!

Owner : I never!!

Mr. Praline : Yes, you did!

Owner : I never, never....

(He pulls the old fart out of the cage and screams into its ear.)

Mr. Praline : 'ELLO KRYPTOOOOOO! KRYPTOOOO ! WAKE UP!

(He bangs its head against the store counter, horribly hard.)

TESTIIIING! TESTIIIING! THIS IS YOUR NINE-O' CLOCK ALARM CALL!

(He does it again, harder.)

KRYP....TOOOOOO!

(He tosses it up in the air and watches it plummet to the floor. Longish pause.)

Now that's what I call a dead parrot.

Owner : No, no.... No, he's stunned.

Mr. Praline : STUNNED?

Owner : Yeah! You stunned him, just as he was wakin' up! Aussies stun easily, major.

Mr. Praline : Look my lad, I've had just about enough of this. That Krypsis is definitely deceased, and when I bought it not half an hour ago, you assured me that its total lack of movement was due to it being tired and shagged out after a long squawk.

Owner : Well, he's... he's, ah... probably pining for the desert.

(Praline looks angrily back and forth, stuttering.)

Mr. Praline : PININ' for the DESERT? What kind of talk is that? Look, why did he fall flat on his back the moment I got 'im home?

Owner : The Norwegian Blue prefers kippin' on its back! Remarkable bird, isn't it, guv, eh? Lovely plumage!

Mr. Praline : (coldly) Look, I took the liberty of examining Krypsis when I got it home, and I discovered the only reason that it had been sitting on its perch in the first place was that it had been NAILED there.

(pause)

Owner : Well, of course it was nailed there! If I hadn't nailed that bird down, it would have nuzzled up to those bars, bent 'em apart with its little pecker, and VOOM!

Mr. Praline : "VOOM?"

(Praline puts the cage down and take the parrot into his hands.)

Mr. Praline : Look matey, Krypsis wouldn't "voom" if you put four thousand volts through it! It's bleedin' demised!

Owner : It's not! I-It's pining!

Mr. Praline : It's not pinin,' it's passed on! This Krypto is no more! It has ceased to be! It's expired and gone to meet its maker! This is a late Krypto! It's a stiff! Bereft of life, it rests in peace! If you hadn't nailed him to the perch he would be pushing up the daisies! Its metabolical processes are of interest only to historians! It's hopped the twig! It's shuffled off this mortal coil! It's run down the curtain and joined the choir invisible! This.... is an EX-KRYPSIS!

Schweik is one of your fellow trolls. He is a shade more subtle than you is all! I'll give him one thing however, he doesn't move to other newsgroups to cause mayhem as you say you intend to do here.

Pray tell, how does one get "booted out" of a public usenet forum where no one, not even you, can prevent me posting??? As for trolling stunts, you are the master at trolling. One needs only look at your posting history to see that.

More correctly, I can't hijack an ID at all. I will note that you are using thunderbird 2.04 as a reader. Just in case you hadn't noticed, My reader is Thunderbird 3.04. I upgraded, you didn't. I don't need to hijack user IDs as you trolls do plenty of that yourselves. You have a history of nymshifting and ID hijacking in soc.culture.thai and rec.knives. Why would this newsgroup be any different?

Yeah right. I am still here and I see that, true to your word, so are you. You said you intended to wreck this newsgroup and you have indeed begun that task!

If I was going to copy your "style", I would have cut and pasted your exact words. Why do a pseudo copy?? There are enough of your posts on usenet over the past decade or more to give me enough material. Why would I bother to "simulate" when the real thing is available for the taking. The reality is, you haven't a clue who's hijacking your ID and I must say I find it incredibly amusing to watch. Fancy that, a troll being trolled by trolls! Who'd have thought? ROTFLMFAO

Of course, the flip side of this is figuring out just how watered down and popularized we're willing to make the hobby in order to attract "young people". In my opinion, if young people don't want to come to the party, let them go elsewhere. I'll be too busy on the radio to notice.

Unfortunately, at least in the US, Amateur Radio was a "service" and afforded a lot of legal protection and privleges.

For example, you don't see a PRB-1 for CB or FRS. We don't have that and have to register any antennas where we transmit an average of over 20 watts (based on a 24 hour average).

You don't pay for licenses. (I just paid $10 a year for a 4 year renewal).

You don't have to get a permit every time you buy a transmitter.

Eventually as enough "old people" die off, and "young people" go elsewhere, even in the US Amateur Radio will go from a service to a hobby.

I remember the wonderful results when UPS wanted 220-222mHz for a nationwide digital network. It disappeared faster from ham radio than you could say "drop my package".

Ironicaly they never used it, but it was not given back.

How much longer is it going to be that the biggest ham radio company in the US is MFJ? How many ham radio stores are there in your neighborhood.

I'm in a country the size of New Jersey and we have NONE!!!

Geoff.

As a younger person (25 in July), I must say that I actually have to agree with the fact that it's the knobs that make SWL fun. There's just a sort of thrill of the hunt you get when you're slowly turning through a band "stalking" a signal and there's the thrill of "conquest" once you've pulled something in. If I had a newer radio where you could just punch in a frequency, I don't think I would listen NEARLY as often as I do.

Good points all. I agree with you that ham radio in the US might become a "hobby" rather than a "service", and one thing that could bring this about is failure to recruit enough young people. Another thing that could bring it about, though, is watering down the hobby to the point where it can no longer provide the kind of service that it once did. Some (not all, but some) young hams entering the hobby simply purchase an ht, connect to echolink and never give the rest of the hobby a second thought. Is that the future that young people will bring to ham radio? If that's the "service" we will one day provide, why bother? We already have the internet. And cell phones. I'd rather see ham radio die an honorable death now than suffer through this death of a thousand compromises.

It means if your existing radio has an IF Out you can use the SDR IQ to Futile. futile, futile. This thing ain't even near finished spewing,

Well, cell phones can provide a service but, as recent bushfires in this state proved, they cannot always be counted on in an emergency. A little over a year ago, we had some quite devastating bushfires quite close to the city of Melbourne. The cell phone network was unable to provide emergency communications in this instance as many of the cell phone transmitting towers burnt down. The ones that didn't burn down were left without power as the electricity network suffered as well. Might add that landlines were put out of action also. That left entire areas without any form of coverage except for HF, VHF and UHF radio. A person I know, a radio amateur in fact, was one of the persons involved with re-establishing the cell phone network infrastructure. That involved putting up emergency towers throughout the fire ravaged region. It took quite a few days before even a rudimentary cell phone network was re-established. Amateurs were able to assist in providing emergency radio communications in this instance.

A "wired world" is not foolproof.

I fully agree that the President is not grabbing this specific problem by the scruff of the neck as he should. He should be allowing everyone with an idea for cleaning up what has already been expelled, to go out there and do their thing. There are millions of tons of absorbent hay and peat waiting to be spread across the surface slick, and that stuff could then probably be burned in a slightly modified coal-fired plant. There are probably a million people who would answer the call to volunteer a few days of time. He should be telling BP to get on these ideas forthwith, and any others that have a better than 25% chance of working. Anything to sop up the mess and avoid as far as possible using those toxic dispersants. He should have called in EVERY oil company to help, and every other nation with any experience in this type of problem. It should all have been done long ago. I am pretty dismayed by what has happened here.

But it is also critical to realize that until a measure is in place and implemented, that flow cannot be fully stanched by anyone - not the government, not the oil companies - only by the earth itself. The technology is not out there to effectively stop this thing short of drilling that new side well to siphon off the flow. That, unfortunately, takes lots of time.

A much better and very persistent cleanup effort we've every right to expect. The stopping of the flow? We can only blame ourselves for being the junkies, and BP etc. for being the pushers, and hope that when they drill that directional tunnel, it hits the original vent.

Keeping a civil tongue is "...watered down...popularized...?

Not everyone is able to learn code. Just like everybody can't play the piano. As nobody uses code anymore except for automatic identifiers, QRP, and automated contesting, why require EVERYONE to learn it proficiently just to use the shortwave?

Do you have a replacement for oil that will work for all Americans so they can get to work tommorrow? Can you supply the demands of indusry tomorrow without Oil?
BP is a 100,000 workers, and many more in smaller companies that sell goods and services to support their industry. There are millions of retires depending on the dividends paid quarterly by BP for the income.
There were a few people that made poor decisions that 99% of the time would have never been noticed. This time things conspired and we have an accident that is huge.
Blame government, this all started in the 70s, we should have started seriously looking for alternatives then.
Also look at the environmentalists and NIMBYs that pushed BP 50 miles of shore in 5000 ft of water. Bp would much rather be in 200 ft off water where this would have been fixed in two days.
You may "feel" Bp should go to hell, but clearly you have not done any logical analysis of the situation and the effect that bankrupting BP will have.

It DID happen in the 1970's - Jimmy Carter tried with his might to urge alternative solutions; his successor, starting in 1980, took alternative energy off the table and effectively shelved it for almost 30 years. We, the American people, never should have let this happen
- but wealth and comfort can make people lazy and overlook the needs of the future.

I should have pushed harder. Every day, every way. This specific issue is BP's responsibility, but the spill is my fault.

That's not what I see from the marina I'm on, Every morning 30 to 50 boats leave on oil patrol. If they see anything they have pads, booms and equipment to clean it up. They are getting paid well, a small boat owner is getting $250,000 a year, a bigger boat could get $750,000. Their fuel and expenses are paid by BP.
This is 3 to 10 times more than these fishermen ever earned in their life.
I agree, Obama will not clean it up. He is clueless.

- FLDS and Mormons are not the same thing.

Dave - Now that is true -but- to pre-judge someone because they are a member of either is bigotry.

Dave - Go back to the original post :
OT - Warren Jeffs Cased is Dismissed
-hello- D-I-S-M-S-S-E-D
-reason- Often the Prosecution will DISMISS the Criminal Charges when the State cannot proceed in good faith based on lack of evidence; or they cannot prove the elements of the crime to a Jury Beyond a Reasonable Doubt at Trial.
-hint- LACK OF [NO/NADA/NONE] EVIDENCE

1 - "Both of the two girls decided not to testify"
-translation- NO WITNESSES
{No Elements (Material Facts} of a Crime}

2 - the prosecution said "it just wouldn't be worth it"
-translation- THE PROSECUTOR HAD NO CASE

Conclusion : The Prosecutor or Judge Dismissed the Case; cause the Crimes(s) could not Legally be Proven in a Court of Law.

-note- Now honestly do I 'think' Warren Jeffs is Guilty-as-Hell [Yes] -but- At this Time not in a Court of Law -so- For now Warren Jeffs is afforded his Civil Right of the Presumption of Being Innocent Until Proven Guilty.

On Disaster Clean-Ups, Louisiana Voters Give Poorer Marks to Obama Than Bush http://www.foxnews.com/politics/2010/06/16/louisiana-voters-obama-performance-oil-spill-worse-bush-katrina/

People are no longer Blaming BP for the Oil Spill.
People are now Blaming Prez Obama for the Failure to Stop It and to Clean the Spill Up.

* * * NEWS TRASH from MSNBC * * *

"KO" Prez Obama must have been on another Planet for the last 57 Days

"CM" Prez Obama is starting to look like Carter

-my-comment- Nobel Prizes Do Fix Oil Spills

"CM" did not 'sense' Executive Command from Prez Obama

-my-comment- The American People wanted to hear about what 'Their Government' was doing TO FIX AND CLEAN-UP THE OIL SPILL -not- a Political Commercial for Cap-and-Trade and Higher Energy Taxes for everyone.

? a few days ? -reality-check-

The Oil Spill is Pollution {Toxic} "Dangerous" and the Clean-Up Chemicals are Hazardous :

1 - The 'Army' of Clean-Up Workers need to Get Paid for their Labor.

2 - The 'Army' of Clean-Up Workers need to be Training so that they can Work Safely and Efficiently.

3 - The 'Army' of Clean-Up Workers need to have HazMat Suits, Safety Equipment and Machinery to do their Job Safely.

4 - The 'Army' of Clean-Up Workers will be working on this Job for Weeks, Months or may be a Year or longer in some places . . .

WAKE-UP - Prez Obama "Declare War" on the Oil Spill and Put an 'Army' of Americans to Work Cleaning-Up this Ecological Disaster.

Reality-Check : The Great Obama Oil Spill of 2010 is now estimated to be about four times [4X] bigger than the Exon Valdez Oil Spill in the Gulf of Alaska and it is still growing every day . . .
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Exon_Valdez_oil_spill

Up-Date today is the 16 June 2010 and it is Day # 58
of the 21st Centuries Greatest Ecological Disaster.

If that is Abiotic oil, it is coming from the Mantle under Earth's crust.If they nuke that oil well, no damn telling what may happen! A Volcano spewing Lava, perhaps? I am no expert on that, I am only guessing.And I don't like to be guessing.

The Hawaiian Islands and many other Islands around the World are on the tops of Volcanos.

"Three days after the explosion of the Deepwater Horizon in the Gulf of Mexico, the Dutch government offered to help.

It was willing to provide ships outfitted with oil-skimming booms, and it proposed a plan for building sand barriers to protect sensitive marshlands.

The response from the Obama administration and BP, which are coordinating the cleanup: “The embassy got a nice letter from the administration that said, ‘Thanks, but no thanks,'” said Geert Visser, consul general for the Netherlands in Houston."

http://www.chron.com/disp/story.mpl/business/steffy/7043272.html

Why did Barrack Petrolatum turn down the generous offer? Because Oil Slick Barry didn't feel like waving the Jones Act, which requires all goods be carried in U.S. waters by U.S.-flagged ships. The four ships can process 20,000,000 gallons of sludgy water a day - more than the amount that's being pumped out by the leak.

The British made a similar offer, but were refused because (wait for it).....THEY DIDN'T FILL OUT THE PAPER WORK CORRECTLY!!!!

You can support the fisherman, or you can support Obama. You can't support both.

>.... and you know it damn
> well. Show me an oil-rich Republican who feels that way.

Govenor Bobby Jindal.

> I have already said that Obama screwed up here.

One might call Oil Slick Barry's actions directly after the explosion a "screw up" if they were feeling generous. His actions (and non-actions) during the following seven weeks is nothing short of criminal incompetence. And that's the KINDEST phrase for Obama's actions.

Members of Obama's Department of the Interior are going to be spending a LOT of times in courtrooms in the following years.

You can support Obama, or the fishermen. You can't support both.

Considering how much bile and hatred the Left poured on Sarah and her faimily, you betcha it's a fair comparison.

> Did Obama start out rich? Check your facts.

He was raised by his grandmother, who was a bank vice president. Yeah, we all know about the hard scrabble life of the bank vice presidents. He became a best seller.

Now, if you want to talk about a difficult life, how about President Goofball's half brother, George Obama? Until a few years ago, this guy lived in an African slum on (literally) three cents a day. A twenty dollar bill would have changed Obama's life. When Oil Slick Barry found out about his sibling's condition, he ran over, exploited his half brother for a photo op, then dumped him back in the slum. No twenty dollar bill was forthcoming.

But don't worry about George, he's during terrific these days.... because the conservative magazine National Review raised $10,000.00 to send him to mechanics school.

You mean like George Soros? Kendrick Meek? Pinch Sulzberger? The vast majority of the super rich in this generation are socialists - and for very selfish reason. Complex tax laws and endless business regulations are nothing more than a minor annoyance for the plutocrats - they simply hire drones to fill in the paperwork. However, those same laws tend to destroy small start up businesses - the very people old money fears.

Twenty five years ago, IBM charged the equivalent of a quarter of a million dollars for a 15 Meg Mainframe. Along comes Apple, and now anyone can afford an IPAD. How much would it have been worth to IBM to keep Steve Jobs out of the number crunching biz? And why do you think that Jobs, after making his little all, pulled the ladder up behind him?

> And ahem - what exactly has Palin won from the big boys just yet?

OK, this is going to be tough for you to remember. A week ago, (yes, a whooooooooooole week ago) there was an election... and well over 80% of the people Gov. Palin nominated were elected.

This is called Being A Kingmaker. She has also raised tons of money for conservative causes, which makes her even more powerful.

So, ahem yourself.

> She's lucky she's cute - otherwise you leering buttheads wouldn't give

Tragically for you, she's also scary smart, and can express complex complex political ideas more clearly than any politician since FDR.

Meanwhile, your side is populated with an army of self important narcissists. Does anyone have a kind word for Nancy Pelosi these days?

Yup, twenty of them. Pretty much all dismissed. My personal favorite was some loon from England who filed a suit which claimed Governor Palin denied her employment. The Limey never applied for a job in Alaska, or even visited the state....but she sued, and Sarah had to pay a lawyer to fight the suit, and she had to take time from her duties as governor to answer the complaint.

Obama has screwed over, you care about the Democrats.

I have checked it, as it happens. The worst drilling "disaster" during the Age of Competence (2001 - 2009) was a cracked seal that, over an eight month period, released less oil that BP is spewing in any given hour (some estimates have it a less then is spewed in 15 minutes.) Trust me, if you guys had something real to hang on Bush, we would have heard about it looooooooooooooong ago.

1. If they were so corrupt during the Bush administration, why didn't we have major drilling accidents from 2001 - 2009?

2. If the MMS was so corrupt post Jan 20th, 2009, why didn't Obama replace them?

Here is the part RHF that I feel is somewhat hypocritical. Like you said, and I agree with, everyone is innocent until proven guilty. If that is indeed the truth, along with the ole' 'fair and speedy trial' - - why is it many many people are either held at a bond so high they can't afford to get out or no bailbondsmen can find them with a search warrant?

Then they sit and languish in jail for usually two and a half too three years if they decide to take their case to trial because they didn't do it. If they're presumed innocent as everyone says (though we both know most have already made up their mind) - why must they spend anymore time that it takes for booking? Follow me fella? ;-) Questions to ponder IMO.

In a recent poll, the people of Louisiana believe Bush did a better job with Katrina than Obma's doing with the Gulf spill . Oil Slick Barry quadrupled Bush's deficit average, created double digit unemployment, and has set in motion the destruction of Ameican HealthCare.

Unfortunately Cuh, it will NEVER be the way it used to be. Once oil leaks, that's bad enough, but to be let go totally unabated like this has. It'll never be the same, let me rephrase that, not in two lifetimes IMO - maybe three.

Disaster has been happening in Nigeria for thousands of years - at the hands of the Nigerians themselves.

You clown 'tard fools have been stupified by your Liberal/Democrat/Marxist/Socialist masters into believing that all fault, and all blame lies at the feet of the 'evil corporations'.

True. With a bunch of hacks operating you can't be sure of what station is sending out a signal.

Case in point: 3C0C on the island near Guinea. If you worked this station on CW 40M, check the C30C station logs online because there was a fake on sending CW and taking calls. A bunch of hams were complaining about it today on 20M because they were not in the log.

What the Nigerians do to themselves, or what any group does to themselves, does not excuse what outsiders do to them. There is no excuse, and your statements say a shitload about your miserable character.

WTF was wrong with your parents to raise a hollow-souled creep like you?

That's more than you have, in your head or your heart. Nothing but a self-centered, hollow shell, racked by booze addiction and deserted by love years ago. Ebenezer Scrooge's more rancid brother.

Actually, I know quite a few homosexuals.

I interact on at least a weekly basis with them, and surprisingly enough, they themselves utter the words 'damn faggots' with those who tend to step out of line.

Anyway,it's DxAce we're talking about here - one of the world's primary losers and the original emperor with no clothes. The internet's biggest bully and most selfish self-centered shill. He's never told the truth in his life, and he answers every rational challenge with name-calling because he has not a stitch of original or factual information at hand...tard tard tard tard tard. He laughs at the misfortune of others and stalks people who have done him no wrong. When that son-of-a-bitch makes it personal, he'd better expect a bunch of shit back. I'll decide when I'll let that smug fat boozeaddled moron off the hook.

He's good at radio. That's it. Everything else is a facade of bluster and obscenity.

Obama vs. press freedom
By Dick Morris

Jon Leibowitz, the chairman of Obama's Federal Trade Commission, is at the epicenter of a quiet movement to subsidize news organizations, a first step toward government control of the media. In our book, 2010: Take Back America – A Battle Plan, we reported that he had commissioned a study to examine plans for a federal subsidy for news organizations. Among the measures under consideration are special tax treatment, exemption from antitrust laws and changes in copyright laws.

Now Leibowitz has begun to pounce. A May 24 working paper on "reinventing" the media proposes that the government impose fees on websites such as the Drudge Report that link to news websites or that it tax consumer electronics such as iPads, laptops and Kindles. Funds raised by these levies would be redistributed to traditional media outlets.

While Leibowitz distanced himself from the proposals for the taxes, calling them "a terrible idea," his comments appear to be related only to the levies proposed in the working paper. Nobody is commenting on the other part of his proposal – a subsidy for news organizations.

By now, the Obama MO should be clear to all. As he has done with the banks, AIG and the car companies, he extends his left hand offering subsidies and then proffers his right laden with regulations. Should the government follow through on Leibowitz's ideas and enact special subsidies and tax breaks for news organizations, it will induce a degree of journalistic dependence on the whims of government not seen since the days when the early presidents bestowed government advertising on favored periodicals.

Is it too difficult to imagine that the Democrats might pass laws favoring news organizations, only to question – as former White House communications director Anita Dunn did – whether or not Fox News is a news organization or an "arm of the Republican Party"? We can see a future in which news media are reluctant to be too partisan or opinionated for fear that they would endanger their public subsidy.

Once such a subsidy is extended to news organizations, every company in the business must have it. Otherwise, the competitive advantage for the subsidized companies would prove too steep an obstacle to overcome.

In all the attention that has been given to the idea of an Internet tax on news aggregation sites and on tech equipment — trial balloons that would obviously be shot down — very little attention has been focused on the expenditure side of the proposal — the subsidy of news organizations.

But The Wall Street Journal reported six months ago that Leibowitz had commissioned a study to determine “whether the government should aid struggling news organizations which are suffering from a collapse in advertising revenues as the Internet upends their centuries-old business model.” Among the steps under consideration are changing “the way the industry is regulated, from making news-gathering companies exempt from antitrust laws to granting them special tax treatment to making changes to copyright laws.”

These are exactly the kind of subsidies that could and would trigger government oversight and control.

Look at how radio stations squirm when their licenses are up for renewal before the FCC. We can imagine news organizations pulling their punches in order not to antagonize the hand that feeds them.

The Leibowitz study, and the subsidy proposals that are likely to emerge from it, represent a chilling threat to the First Amendment and to our civil liberties.

Morris, a former adviser to Sen. Trent Lott (R-Miss.) and President Bill Clinton, is the author of Outrage, Fleeced and Catastrophe. To get all of his and Eileen McGann’s columns for free by e-mail or to order a signed copy of their latest book, 2010: Take Back America — A Battle Plan, go to dickmorris.com. In August, Morris became a strategist for the League of American Voters, which is running ads opposing the president’s healthcare reforms.

This afternoon at about 2:30 PM I heard a Loud BANG! noise.It sounded to me like a propane tank blew up.Later on, doggy took me out in the front yard.The old worn out left rear tire on my 1978 Dodge van had blown out.I reckon that's what I get for pumping that old tire up to 50 pounds of pressure, plus the hot heat of the afternoon made that old tire go BANG! I had some Slime in that old tire too, but it was still leaking down all the time.

AAAHHHH! Now I feel much better!

This afternoon, I was feeling quite tired, and yet I needed a shot of adrenaline to take a decent bike ride. Steve, with his own inimitable ultranationalist musings, provided the perfect catalyst to get the juices flowing. Thanks to Steve, I had plenty of energy for a totally aerobic 22-mile bike ride at breakneck pace, came home feeling completely invigorated, and had a bowl of strawberries and cream with my family - a perfect end to the day. Steve knows it was all in fun, and I owe Steve a debt of gratitude for the boost, thank you! You too, Gregg, for your contribution! You guys did this compassionate old Marxist heart some good :-)

Hasta Manana...

- Here is the part RHF that I feel is somewhat hypocritical. Like you
- said, and I agree with, everyone is innocent until proven guilty. If
- that is indeed the truth, along with the ole' 'fair and speedy trial'
- - - why is it many many people are either held at a bond so high they
- can't afford to get out or no bailbondsmen can find them with a search
- warrant?
- Then they sit and languish in jail for usually two and a half too
- three years if they decide to take their case to trial because they
- didn't do it. If they're presumed innocent as everyone says (though
- we both know most have already made up their mind) - why must they
- spend anymore time that it takes for booking? Follow me fella? ;-)
- Questions to ponder IMO.

Many times Bail and Bonding is simply Legal Extortion. and it is all part of the Legal $ystem :
Court$ & Judge$ & Lawyer$ & Bail Bond$men & $taff

Yes - Why Do You Have To Pay To Be Free :
? When You Are Presumed Innocent ?

This same Group had their Children Illegally Taken Away in Texas by the State and Later the Courts Ruled in-favor of the Mothers and the Children.
Point being once the Fathers were removed {Jailed} the Children were NO longer At-Risk since the Mothers were never 'alleged' to be Abusers.

But to the State of Texas and many in the Public they were the FLDS Church and therefore already guilty.

But to the State of Texas and many in the Public they were the Polygamist and therefore already guilty.

But to the State of Texas and many in the Public they were 'allegations' of the Sexual Abuse of Children and therefore they were already guilty.

-note- The originating False Stories of the Sexual Abuse of Children by the individual with documented mental problems were proven to be just that False Stories. {That the Texas Authorities Failed to Check Out before Acting on their own Bias and Bigotry.}

You are right, Roy. A couple of them in particular are over the top.
I am sorry for those. Every person deserves at least a basic modicum of respect, and most more than that, DxAce included. I let my anger go sideways.

I'm sorry I took it out on you, Steve. You deserve better, and from now on I'll try not to let the mundane stuff get the best of me. We disagree on many things, but there is much I find to honor in you as well, and I should always keep that in mind.

Very sorry.

I do have to admit Burr, RHF is a breath of fresh air. Though some may not appreciate him, when newbies or just ones with questions have something to ask.....he takes the time to provide the links to help them or steer them in the right direction or in his opinion....which is more than most do in here.

Though maybe not all agree with me, which is expected (especially recently ;-) your input RHF has been missed, though I don't interject much on the political front unless it pertains to the State of Israel - your posts are thought provoking. And especially when it comes to radio posts, I do check out your links and have saved quite a few.

Why did you vanish (if I may ask) like a fart in the wind just too return outta no where? Inquiring minds want to know. :-D Prissy? Sorry Bruce, I just answered you in the way you have always answered me and others in this group till things got out of hand in here for a while. I was just wondering what happened, it kind of caught me off guard because I never heard you and Ace speak that way towards each other.

You had told me back channel when Krypsie started his crap that to basicaly "rise above it all" so too speak and "you have the power" etc. etc. etc. Just shocked that all the sudden the verbage from you towards Steve and even RHF. I didn't mean to get you upset or anything - just wondered what in the heck happened. FWIW - right outside of the 21 meter band...both to the top and bottom on if - was being peppered with two seperate number stations - I haven't heard a numbers stations that high in the band at this time of night in years. :-) Hope everything is OK on your end, no harm meant.

Ha! :-) Well, I don't know about the marxist thing, I don't really buy into the labels thing much myself. 22 mile bike ride, that is sweet, I can't do the bike thing out on these little country roads. I did make it to the gym though earlier yesterday, trying to catch up to Burr..lol. I do have the newest bowflex coming my way in a month or so, I didn't purchase it but my son is throwing it my way (I have the older bowflex - I've worn it out IMO - the bands have lost it over seven yrs. of use) - he's also (like my youngest) going into the service (he's leaving in Aug.) and felt the ole' man can use it while he's over there protecting my right to stay in shape and yours to bike ride I guess. ;-) Watch out for the roadkill, that's all we have out here.

Why did you vanish (if I may ask) like a fart in the wind just too

RHF was who I wondering about Burr. You usually let everyone know when you are going on hiatus, I can't remember if you did this time though.
I think you did after the MB fiasco last time. What do you do when you up and leave? Do you leave your home QTH or just give the net a break for a while? It seems everyone is coming back to the group at one time. You and your friend in the Ville' - and RHF - plus a few "new ones" - just like old times. ;-) RRS gotta love it!!

Backchannel? That was front and centre Gregg! We all saw it! It's just that you were far too mired in trolling with your mates to be able to heed it!

Everyone has limits to their tolerance. You, by siding with known trolls, exceeded mine! At least Bruce had the nous, and the guts, to take DXAce on himself without having to call upon reinforcements!

I'll hang around as long as people can/will be nice.

I am always online, I belong to SW groups, lifting groups and cycling groups.
Plus take care of two cars, three dogs a house and a wonderful wife.

I stay so busy in retirement I don't know how I had time to work.
I am thinking of re-retiring to Ireland but I'll need to way until the stock market gets a little better.

I keep my scanners on most of the time and I DX when I have time. I do enjoy DXing and have been doing it most of my life starting with a "oatmeal box" when I was a kid in Virginia Beach Virginia. I also remember getting a Heathkit Radio Kit and spending most nights trying to hear "ANYTHING".

Life's Wonderful, Enjoy Every Minute

Good deal, yep - I would miss my scanners big time if they were gone.
That's the only way to really know what's going on in the area.

You just miss Collins and Drake; I understand. Note, both companies named after persons long deceased. At least they had the good sense not to name Ten-Tec "Kahn".

Mine are on local police mobile transmit (repeater up frequency), Mutual Aid, and tactical frequencies. I also listen Forestnet (172.375?) which has been pretty dead since the forest burned down and SR2 got closed. We'd usually hear several downed motorcycles every Saturday up there.

Los Angeles County is too broke to buy new radios, but they pretend. I hear surveillance, cops' home phone numbers, security codes for apartment complexes; all manner of sloppy information guarding. Way more primitive than in Texas.

Oh, so you are saying that you missed all the TV news coverage of her

The good news is, she couldn't stand the heat, so she did get out of the kitchen. Fair enough, maybe even commendable.

The bad news is, now that she has shown she can't stand the heat, why would anybody ever vote her back into public office????

Ahhhh Yes, the wild and wooley West Coast of Ireland.They get Gales in Ireland that can last a week or more.

Looka here, the Cork,Ireland, Examiner online newspaper used to have an online chat room, I used to get in that chatroom all the time.

One time Angahrod (in Idaho) decided to visit Ireland in the month of November.She said most of the time when she was outside, she spent most of her time hanging on to buildings so she wouldn't get blown away.

Up and Down buttons can be used in this way, but they're not as good.
I do a fair but of tuning around with my Sony ICF-SW7600G which can step up and down the HF bands in 1kHz or 5kHz steps.

I agree. I had a pretty low day yesterday; and I should have known better. Some times it does not pay to try to take the world on your shoulders; it's just too heavy. These are the days I probably ought not post anything.

I appreciate your counsel. Thanks.

Krypsis, it wasn't so much courage as a temporary mountain of frustration in my own life. Steve didn't deserve the disrespect; whatever our differences, and regardless of how people express themselves on these groups, there is a strength in Steve's character that cannot be ignored.

Ultimately it's every man (or woman) for him/herself on these groups, and we all owe it to ourselves to make the best showing of it.

The subject was the grabber intended to make people react.

Mission accomplished.

As to the validity of the of the subject, it's just pure bunk.

The trolls do what the trolls want to do, not for any altruistic reasons, but "because they can".

The reason that Yahoo! lists and moderated forums are taking away members is because most of these lists are unmoderated, and allow antisocial behavior.

We all have frustrations. Up until I retired 2 years back, I had mountains of them. Now that I'm just a consultant, I let others deal with the frustration. All I do now is advise on what options they have and the ramifications. The decisions are no longer mine, the responsibilities are no longer mine! Bliss!

Isn't that the truth! I must say though that the women on rec.food.cooking soon put the trolls in their place. Interesting to watch! I think also that the sheer weight of on-topic posts in that group helped their cause greatly. I see there has been an increase in the number of posts here though, sadly, a good deal of them seem to be quite off-topic.

Still, the (DTS) trollfest seems to have petered out for the most part and that can't be a bad thing.

RALEIGH, N.C. ï¿½ Republican congressional candidate William "Bill" Randall is suggesting that the Obama administration and BP conspired to intentionally spill oil in the Gulf, resulting in 11 deaths and the worst environmental disaster in the nation's history.

Randall, who has aligned himself with the tea party movement, readily acknowledges that he has no evidence that what he says is true. But that is not stopping him from making the claim as he campaigns in the June 22 GOP runoff to face incumbent Democratic Rep. Brad Miller on the November ballot.

Really?

How many people who asked Bush a question found their tax records on the evening news?

How many Democrats politicians found their email accounts hacked and private records stolen?

There Black Panthers stood outside polling with clubs, threatening to attack elderly white voters, screaming "there's a black man in charge, cracker." The Attorney General of the United States had the charges dismissed.

when did Karl Vote ever attempt to have all political discussion (with cherry picked exceptions) banned for two months before a national

No, Tina Fey said it on Saturday Night Live. It was a joke.

Sarah Palin did say that one can see Russia from parts of Alaska.... a

By WX I assume you are referring to the 160Mhz NOAA broadcasts?

They are US only, which limits the market. Since IMHO most SW receivers are NOT sold in the US (that's another discussion, not now please beyond yes or no) no one wants to pay for something they can not use, and therefore it is rare in an SW receiver.

The K3 has a big heavy knob and a keypad and RS-232 serial control via PC. It can be tuned in 1 Hz increments. It has sync detection and virtually infintely variable final IF width. You have room for 5 first IF roofing filters from 200 KHz (for CW and digital modes) to I think around 3500 to 4k wide band for music and entertainment.

I really like my K3.

Knopfler72,

Well you could buy an All-In-One AM/FM/SW/WX
Radio like these for a Travel Radio :
* KA500 Solar Crank Weather Multi-band Radio
http://cgi.ebay.com//380239157966
* Eton FR500 AM/FM/SW Weather Radio & Emergency Flashlight
http://cgi.ebay.com/260615077133
* Kaito KA009R with AM FM SW Aviation Band and NOAA Weather Bands
http://cgi.ebay.com/360252779896

But -if- You are looking for a Weather Radio for your Home; and the ability to Listen to the Shortwave Radio Bands along with AM & FM Radio Stations -then- I recommend that you buy two separate Radios. One sepcifically for the Weather [WX] Band with features designed to utilize all the NOAA Radio Broadcast features.
http://www.nws.noaa.gov/nwr/nwrsame.htm
http://www.nws.noaa.gov/nwr/indexnw.htm

Take a look at these Midland Weather [WX] Receivers http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/wx.html
-or- these First Alert Weather [WX] Radios http://www.amazon.com/s/ref=nb_sb_noss?url=search-alias%3Delectronics&field-keywords=First +Alert+Weather+Radio&x=0&y=0
-also- RadioShack has many Weather [WX] Radios
http://www.radioshack.com/family/index.jsp?categoryId=2032069&s=

Now as for AM/FM/SW Shortwave Multi-Band Radios
* Travel 'portable' AM/FM Shortwave Radios
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable.html
* * Sony ICF-SW7600GR AM/FM/SW Radio
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable/0360.html

* * Sangean ATS-909 AM/FM/SW Radio
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable/1909.html
* * CC Radio "SW" AM/FM/SW Radio
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable/2678.html
* * -used- Etón E1 AM/FM/SW Radio
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable/0101.html
* Home Table Top AM/FM Shortwave Radios
* * Grundig Satellit 750 AM/FM/SW Radio
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable/0750.html
* * -used- Grundig Satellit 800 AM/FM/SW Radio
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable/0800.html
http://shop.ebay.com/i.html?_nkw=Grundig+800
* * -used- RadioShack DX-394 AM/FM/SW Radio

Oh Yeahhhh, those spy satellites they send up into orbit, they are getting better all the time at spying on stuff.Back in the 1980s when I worked at the auto/truck/lan mower batteries factory that used to be in Florence,Mississippi, I used to take some books with me to read on our ten minute breaks and half hour lunch breaks.One of those books was a thick hard back book about satellites technology.Nowadays, those satellites up there can see and listen to almost everything.If you was in orbit around Earth, you wouldn't need satellites to see some of those Submarines under the water, you can pick them out with your naked eyeballs.

Liberty Net: June 12, 2010

http://3950.net/2010/06/liberty-net-june-12-2010/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

W1WCRï¿½s new antenna ï¿½ a 165-foot doublet held up by 100-foot pine trees ï¿½ provided even more intense signals than usual for this weekï¿½s session of the Liberty Net.

Conversations on the historic current events discussion net ranged from the hidden aspects of politics to spy numbers stations to shortwave radio propagation and the mysteries of women.

Here is a small sampling of what youï¿½ll hear on this weekï¿½s recording:

ï¿½ New York City schools have come up with an innovative way to close the ï¿½racial achievement gapï¿½ ï¿½ they simply give partial credit for wrong answers. (2 hours 44 minutes)

ï¿½ According to a story in the European Union Times, the Gulf oil spill may be the greatest ecological disaster ever to occur in human history, threatening ï¿½ according to a Russian intelligence report made to President Medvedev ï¿½ to cause massive destruction to all eastern North America, largely due to highly toxic so-called ï¿½dispersants.ï¿½ (1 hour 35 minutes)

ï¿½ Does the self-styled elite have an agenda to depopulate large parts of the United States? (1 hour 41 minutes)

ï¿½ Why have robotic submersibles not been sent down to investigate the actual cause of the downing of the Deep Water Horizon? (1 hour 48 minutes)

ï¿½ What was Congress thinking when, years ago, they allowed BP to have sweetheart ï¿½limited liabilityï¿½ legislation for its operations in the Gulf? Would new legislation assigning more liability to them be unconstitutional as an ex post facto law? (1 hour 54 minutes)

ï¿½ The current American economic depression is a result of drunken spending being financed by drunken lending ï¿½ with the end result being that both spenders and lenders go broke. The Washington regime thinks it can solve this problem with more drunken spending. (2 hours 6 minutes)

ï¿½ The mysteries of shortwave propagation are in some ways comparable to the mysteries of women. (2 hours 34 minutes)

ï¿½ For the first time since the fall of Communism, the actual equipment used to generate ï¿½spy numbersï¿½ signals has been disclosed. Itï¿½s all on a series of videos which you can find linked on http://3950.net (2 hours 36 minutes)

ï¿½ Solid state hard drives provide an astonishing performance increase compared to their conventional counterparts. (2 hours 41 minutes)

This weekï¿½s Net was helped by good propagation, and brief attempts at jamming were completely ineffective.

You can listen to the Liberty Net every Saturday night on or around 3950 kHz (usually within 10 kHz) beginning at 10PM Eastern Time.

My personal thanks go out to all of those who make the Net what it is, especially W1WCR, N2SAG, and N2IRJ.

What a great website Kevin, I missed last weeks show and I forgot I can go back and listen to the recording. I'm hooking my Mom up with the 398/909 just so she can listen to the show this weekend, I know her and she'll really enjoy it. I just wished it was on straight up AM and she could use my 399 instead of the 398. ;-)

Where at? What size boat? How many in the crew.

Here in Panama City, where we have a bay and many of the boats only work the bay.
Occasionally these boats will go out the pass and work in the gulf, when the bay shrimp get to small or are not showing. An example of one local shrimper, a 30ft boat, captain and 1 or 2 deckhands.. Leave the dock at about 6pm get back about 8:30 am get unloaded by 9:30, lately about 250 lbs of shrimp, sorted in two or three sizes.
Prices are up a little now but, prices would run between $2.30 and $3.10 per lb.
So say an average of $2.70 an lb. That's $675, fuel will be at least $150, deckhand, we'll say $90, slip rent $10 a day. $675-$250 = $425 a day times 5 days is $2,125 a week. This does not include any maintenance of the boat which is substantial even though much of the labor is done by the owner, a low guess, say 20%. Now we are down under $2,000 a week. I have seen nights with 37 lb and I have seen 500 lb nights. The bay boat shrimpers generally only can work about 6 months a year. The shrimp are only in the bay certain months. It is also rare to see these shrimpers actually work five nights a week.
There is a 42 ft boat that probably does better, but he cherry picks and only runs when the shrimp are plentiful, he could possibly, maybe, GROSS $10,000 a week for a few weeks.
We also have 65 ft or 70 ft freezer boats that go long distances in the gulf, for three week trips the may get 10,000 lbs, sometimes more. That's $27,000 or $9,000 a week gross.
This boat a has a crew of four and captain, I'd guess at least $3,000 in wages and then add fuel and the income shrinks considerably.
It has been my experience in the last 10 years that shrimpers are always complaining that there is no money, and that the wholesalers and retailers make all the money. I think they are right.
Anyway $10,000 a week, Where at? What size boat? How many in the crew?

Cuhulin,

Heard on the Radio* today that some BP Gas Stations are re-branding themselves to other oil company logos in the Mid-west.

Don't know -if- these are BP Corporation owned BP Gas Stations -or- individual private Own/Operators ?

Many times the Gas Stations sell anybody's Gas and do not get the Gas that they Pump from the Branding Oil/Gas Company at all.

Boycotting BP Gas Stations may not in-fact hurt Corporate BP at all; and in-fact only be hurting a local 'private' business owner.

is Stupid because you are destroying your own business community. -when- BP America's Corp

3149. Top 10 list why the teabagging GOP has no backbone for the nation's people Attributes of the new teabagging GOP are pretty dismal ...

Spend no money to improving conditions for our citizens.

Little income taxes for the rich and none for the top 1%.

Reward foreign corporations who donate to the GOP with tax money.

Reward Corporations who abandon America with even MORE tax breaks!

Allow corporations to commit felonies while citizens get the extreme

Feel spending money on war is the right christain thing to do!

Construct a Supreme Court that does not overturn abortion but at the last minute, installs an election process benefiting the rich.

Believe that a citizen base who are smart and educated is bad for the economy and a waste of money.

A "Grass Root" party financed by FOX news and foreign money.

A party lead by a drug using college dropout DJ who claims he "hears" things from God

That link above was really good, the Universal link. The Sangean CL-100 and the Weather Wizard 3 CS look like the two I would have to decide on, they're both pretty sharp looking. I have the old school Midland Model 74-109 and it has given me many years of service, doesn't have the SAME (because I didn't want it) and extremely sensitive.

Good post. Those skippers and crew on Deadliest Catch, now they can make some serious money. Sadly, this Tues. show will be where Capt. Phil goes down. That's pretty sad. You know he's been dead for three months maybe - but it's like he's still alive seeing him on the show. Sorry to go somewhat OT.

NWR Receiver Consumer Information {Weather [WX] Band Radios}
http://www.nws.noaa.gov/nwr/nwrrcvr.htm

Yeah a stand-a-lone Weather [WX] Radio
-imho- is the best way to go
-cause- the Weather [WX] Band ain't AM/MW or Shortwave Radio Bands
-and- the Weather Band is about twice (2X)
the Frequency of the FM Radio Band
-plus- Weather [WX] Band Radios are designed to do exactly what they do and nothing else so the do an excellent job of it; without compromise because they are also an AM & FM Radio and the Price-Point is getting too high for consumers.
-plus- Weather [WX] Band Radios are designed to take full advantage of all the NWS & NOAA Broadcast features.

Methods to Improve Reception of Weather Radio Broadcasts
http://www.crh.noaa.gov/mqt/nwr/nwrwebpg/antenna.php

-about- Weather [WX] Radio Antennas
-if- you are close-by within 25 Miles with flat terrain the short little build-in Whip Antenna or an external 1/4 WL Whip Antenna generally will OK for good constant 24/7 WX reception.
-however-if- you are out beyond 40 Miles with Hills then an external Dipole Antenna cut to the WX Band can bring good 24/7 WX reception results; most of the times a Horizontal single element Dipole Antenna that is broadside to the direction of the WX Transmitter works best versus mounting the Dipole Vertically.

Build your own Weather [WX] Band Radio
Dipole Antenna {1/2 WL Dipole Calculator}

For 162.55 MHz -roughly- 34.5" Tip-to-Tip with two 17.25" Elements

I'm glad you enjoyed it, to often my attempts at humor seem to go unnoticed.
Let tell you about my grandma, when she was 23 years old she had a beautiful tattoo of a rose put on her left breast.
Today it is a long stemmed rose.

Since you brought it up. Old friends of the Bush Crime Family

"History
Further information: Anglo-Iranian Oil Company Activity in 1909ï¿½1979

In May 1901, William Knox D'Arcy was granted a concession by the Shah of Iran to search for oil, which he discovered in May 1908.[11] This was the first commercially significant find in the Middle East. On 14 April 1909, the Anglo-Persian Oil Company (APOC) was incorporated as a subsidiary of Burmah Oil Company to exploit this.[11] In 1935, it became the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company (AIOC).[11]

After World War II, AIOC and the Iranian government initially resisted nationalist pressure to revise AIOC's concession terms still further in Iran's favour. But in March 1951, the pro-western Prime Minister Ali Razmara was assassinated.[12] The Majlis of Iran (parliament) elected a nationalist, Mohammed Mossadeq, as prime minister. In April, the Majlis nationalised the oil industry by unanimous vote.[13] The National Iranian Oil Company was formed as a result, displacing the AIOC.[14] The AIOC withdrew its management from Iran, and organised an effective boycott of Iranian oil. The British government - which owned the AIOC - contested the nationalisation at the International Court of Justice at The Hague, but its complaint was dismissed.[15]

By spring of 1953, incoming U.S. President Dwight D. Eisenhower authorised the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) to organise a coup against the Mossadeq government with support from the British government.[16] On 19 August 1953, Mossadeq was forced from office by the CIA conspiracy, involving the Shah and the Iranian military, and known by its codename, Operation Ajax.[16]
Classic shield logo, designed by Raymond Loewy, used from 1979 to 2000 and still in use in a small number of petrol stations.

Mossadeq, prince (Shahzadeh) of Qajar Dynasty, was replaced by pro-Western general Fazlollah Zahedi,[17] and the Shah, who returned to Iran after having left the country briefly to await the outcome of the coup. The Shah abolished the democratic Constitution and assumed autocratic powers.

After the coup, Mossadeq's National Iranian Oil Company became an international consortium, and AIOC resumed operations in Iran as a member of it.[14] The consortium agreed to share profits on a 50ï¿½50 basis with Iran, "but not to open its books to Iranian auditors or to allow Iranians onto its board of directors."[18] AIOC, as a part of the Anglo-American coup d'ï¿½tat deal, was not allowed to monopolise Iranian oil as before. It was limited to a 40% share in a new international consortium. For the rest, 40% went to the five major American companies and 20% went to Royal Dutch Shell and Compagnie Franï¿½aise des Pï¿½troles, now Total S.A..[19]

The AIOC became the British Petroleum Company in 1954. In 1959 the company expanded beyond the Middle East to Alaska[20] and in 1965 it was the first company to strike oil in the North Sea.[21] In 1978 BP acquired a controlling interest in Standard Oil of Ohio or Sohio, a breakoff of the former Standard Oil that had been broken up after anti-trust litigation.[22]

BP continued to operate in Iran until the Islamic Revolution in 1979. After 1979, during the Iran-Iraq war, the oil refineries were destroyed and Iran became a raw supplier of oil. The new regime of Ayatollah Khomeini broke all prior oil contracts and signed new contracts with British Petroleum with 90% to BP and 10% to Ayatollah Khomeini and his followers."

Logs, discussions of receivers, your awesome antenna help, trends in int'l broadcasting, advising newbies, sharing SW-related URL's - there's lot of things you could post other than continuing to stir up trouble with non-stop political ideologies. There are places for that and while a little on this NG should be allowable, making dozens of political posts in a row is simply wrong.

Thanks for the logs. Conditions are lousy here, today, but I'm currently listening R Sweden in Swedish via Madagascar on 9495. On my Eton E1XM.

As I said, I'm delighted you're back. Just requesting a little more balance.

Me? Sad?

No, it is you who are a sad case. After all, it is you who lied about having a PhD.

That is sad.

AOR receiver/scanner AR-5000, AOR Spectrum Display Unit SDU-5500, Timewave DSP-59+ w/15W speaker, all inclusive package, also includes the AOR AS-5000 antenna switch, allowing front panel switching of up to four antennas, all operating manuals, plus the AR-5000 SERVICE MANUAL. The AR-5000 covers everything from 10KHz-2,600 MHz (less cellular), 1,000 memories (actually 2,000 if an extra 1,000 service memories are selected booting into service mode, described in the manual) and has more features than I can list. Includes a app so you can program everything from your PC. Used 99.9% for FM voice in the 900MHz range, due to it's outstanding performance there, so if you have in depth questions, please consult the operators manuals, easily Goggled, or email me for links to manuals and photos. Everything is in like new condition, includes all cables for the AR to SDU, audio to/from DSP, etc.. Factory p/s for the AR, wall wart for the DSP, but the SDU will need a 12VDC supply (it's shared with another now). Everything shipped to CONUS $1,695, USPS MO, or add $50 for PayPal. Bank or personal check, but with two week delay to ship. BUT WAIT, THERE'S MORE: if you're anywhere near NW Arkansas, and will come pick this stuff up, saving me the cost and trouble to pack it up, I'll throw in FREE the AOR DS-3000 discone antenna, along with the mast, tripod, and ~50' prime coax (not RG58, but satellite stuff, forgot the #), email for photo and antenna specs. Email: parkerdr(at)cox.net

I've always admired the way the mob does business. It is very efficient.

Mr. Bush had nothing against dictatorship, as long as he was the dictator. I suspect this is how most presidents feel.

Dave so Prez Obama and the Obama Regime did not put out the KILL ORDER on the US Born* Adam Gadahn; a spokesman {mastermind} for Al Qaeda ? -aka- "Azzam the American" http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Adam_Yahiye_Gadahn

* Note - US Born means US Citzen and all the Rights of US Citizenship; including a Trial in a US Court of Law by a Jury of your Peers.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sixth_Amendment_to_the_United_States_Constitution

And naturally Prez Obama has NO Knowledge* of the KILL ORDER on the US Born* Adam Gadahn, a spokesman {mastermind} for Al Qaeda ?

And naturally Memebrs of the Obama Regime have NO Knowledge* of the KILL ORDER on the US Born* Adam Gadahn; a spokesman {mastermind} for Al Qaeda ?

* Note - Even thought the KILL ORDER has been an AP & UPI News Story and appeared around the World in hundreds of Newspapers and on the Wires.
http://www.muslimdaily.net/berita/adam_gadahn_wanted.jpg

Dave the Ordering the Assassination or Assassinating a Foreign Leader or Foreign Terrorist is one thing
-but- What Lawful Right does Prez Obama and the Obama Regime have to Put out a KILL ORDER on a US Citizen without first having a Trial in a US Court of Law by a Jury of your Peers.

Well, if it isn't another troll from the knives and Thai newsgroups! What? No anti-Kripsis comment? How totally out of character. Say hello to Gregg for me at the next DTS cyber-party.

I won't ask you to make a shortwave post, since you have no idea what shortwave is. You only seem to be capable of making references to your neglected sexual organ.

Shoo fly. You may have the last insult, because you're not worth a response.

You gave no thought about 'humanity' when you lied about having that PhD.

It was all about you, 'tard boy.

Before you lied about having the PhD you should have STFU.

President Barack Obama made news on The Today Show when he talked about kicking some ass over the BP oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico.

If he is interested in punishing those responsible for what is shaping up as one of the worst environmental disasters in U.S. history, he should think about giving himself a boot.

While BP is ultimately responsible for the spill (and for cleaning it up), the federal government is a major player in the problem for at least three reasons:

You using a computer makes it your fault as well.
As well as you drinking anything from any plastic container and using any one of a multitude of products that would not exist if not for crude oil.
There would not even be an asphalt road for you to ride your little bicycle on if not for crude oil.
Even the greenest of greenies utilize crude oil in one form or another dozens of times on any given day.

Interesting, I always thought that for an invading force to "cross Alaska", they would in fact be invading Canada. More to the point, if an invading force actually entered Alaska they, by definition, have invaded the USA.

Palin must be French! They believed in a Maginot Line too.

Yeah, that's a pretty killer site IMO. For maybe two and half - three years I really got into that. It almost turns into a twenty four thing if you don't watch it. I have at least one full notebook just on chasing them and logging the times/freqs/ etc. with a lot of help from those guys.

And of course these are not really what one would consider to be 'clandestine' broadcasters but rather 'spy numbers' as the site name implies.

For clandestine stations one might search the EiBi listings by searching for 'CLA', case sensitive, and one will find a lot of what are clandestine or opposition broadcasts.

This is at work. Here at work, we have a large array over the parking lot that supplies a bunch of energy to our complex every day, rain or shine, and it's prtety efficient. I don't know the manufacturer, but I could find out. Extra to run back to the grid, too. That meter turns backwards starting shortly after sunrise and won't quit all day.

Our land use policies encourage solar on every rooftop and parking lot around. We're looking for ways to subsidize those as much as possible. I have been given to understand that Alameda County, as an entity, uses a higher ratio of solar energy than any other County in the U.S. - but that may have changed. We're trying :-)

At home, my not-too-distant future intent is to get a substantial solar panel on the rooftop, maybe even a small wind turbine to augment. We're breezy enough here so that such a system would be worthwhile. I'd have to think about a storage battery or fuel cell. Maybe a compressed air storage system? There are some other technologies coming around too. I'm a big fan of Thorium nuclear, which is going to be coming aboard in India, China, maybe France in the next few years. Working prototypes have been around for decades, some industries use small versions right now. Much less troublesome than U or Pu nuclear in every respect, and plenty of fuel for hundreds of years - until we get Fusion working.

Ya think? Rod's just another guy who can't countenance thinking that doesn't reflect his own.

It's not like I've not encountered it before.

I'm intrigued by the Thorium nuclear, though. That would seem to have promise.

But if you can come up with a make of the solar panels you're using out there, I'd appreciate it.

The solar we can get around here is installed according to local common practices. The vendors will come out and evaluate what they believe is your need (and there is frequently a difference between what you need and what they want you to need) calcuate a 75% limit of their evaluation, and they'll sell you that capacity. No more.

So, I'm still looking for equipment that will meet my needs, stand up to the weather, here, and can be installed to my full demand capacity.

I'd love to get off the grid. If for no other reasons than to piss them off.

I think Rod's just a troll.

I don't blame you one bit. We may have self-imposed limitations on proportional capacity here as well - at least until recently, it may have been possible for Pacific Gas & Electric to not approve a hookup of anything larger than the average daily use for the household - they really don't want to pay for any of the "backwash" from indepenedent users. There is a law that says they must pay for some tiny increment (a couple percent), and they have actually since voluntarily increased their allowance to about 2.5% since state law now requires them to increase their renewable portfolio over the next 10 years.

If you wanted to be self-contained, they could not do anything about it.

The manufacturer for our County facility may or may not do small jobs, but I can check for you. If I were you, and money was not a big object, I'd shoot for the most efficient panels available to help out on those dreariest winter days. Also bear in mind that a panel only puts out max energy when it is aimed straight at the sun's disc - otherwise it will vary roughly according to the cosine of the incident angle (I bet you knew that!).

I'll see what I can find out.

I thought that was the SINE of the incident angle. The closer to 90 degrees, the higher the output.

Winter is a different animal, here than it is there. But summer months, I can go off the grid entirely.

I did look into geothermal, too. The smallest generator available was about half a megawatt. Which would make some of my neighbors very happy, too. But that's still under investigation.

hehehehehe.

FYI - Thorium fuel is mixed into a liquid solution for its reaction. It has an apparent high neutron density, which means that you get a lot of juice for modest fuel amounts; it generates a waste product far smaller than the comparable U/Pu reactor, and the half-life is measured in hundreds rather than 10,000s of years, so it's a heck of a lot easier to manage, and then afterward can be disposed of as an ordinary ash material. Typically designed Thorium reactors appear to have no mechanism by which they can "melt down" as their reactions can be highly controlled through concentrations; and despite the fact that thorium is not a household name, we have gobs of the stuff. Moreover, if you add existing nuclear waste that nobody wants to the Th reactor, the darn thing can burn that stuff up too!

They have been used on subs.

Why don't we have them? Probably because they are incapable of generating weapons-grade material as a by-product, which made them less desirable than U/Pu designs for R&D by the military.

It strikes me that we could use this characteristic as either a bargaining chip or a "gotcha" for Iran - if we offered to ease up on them if they use thorium reactor tech instead of what they're doing for the nukes, and they still balked, it would be mighty damned hard for them to explain away their stubborn attitude about their nuke development. OTOH, if they embraced the thorium idea, a potential disaster might be defused.

Though I never saw his posts in the other groups when I first visited RK, unless you would post a funny post he made somewhere else, I didn't need to. I read enough in rec knives and had enough dealings with him to know this dude was a piece. After a little googling I just couldn't believe it.<shaking my head>

Like with Krypsie, I haven't seen one post of his in any other group he frequents unless you post one of his tirades, but I know he does the same freeking thing there as he does here. Anyone who comes to the aid of one of usenets biggest (yet fascinating if anything else) ....actually biggest I have seen thus far - habitual liars - has deep psycological seeds that were planted as a wee little tyke. I don't know his story, nor do I care to know or diagnose it, but I do know his ass is here to stay and that speaks volumes no matter how he tries the ole' twist and turn or shuck and jive and I'll reiterate again, I have no problems on any other group except the ones that brought Batman and his Boy Wonder and with someone else in here who has made and burned numerous bridges with just about everyone at one time or another if you disagree with him. Imagine that, to someone with common sense that says it all - end of story. Unfortunately this is usenet and I won't be that lucky because many don't have common sense :-) and if someone is going to bitch about this post, no one made you open up the thread. If you complain, you are just complaining to be complaining so don't try an veil your post with concern because people with sense can see right through it.....though they may not post it here because of fear of retribution or getting in the middle....they see it. I took out the other three {?} groups this was CP to - so if "you know who" finds it - he found it because he sought it out in RRS. ;-)

It is a good thing that you are so obsessed with this guy. You would have no life at all without him. Have you simply tried to tell him that you want to suck his cock? It's obvious to one and all that this is what you want. Try it. Maybe he'll let you.

Dude, I've already told you. I'm not going to say it all again. You don't know what picked on is till Batman and Robin start on you with all their aliases. Now I see there is someone claiming to want to have his cock sucked by another man, people that talk like that....I'll just say this - they have their own issues.

Why don't you make a radio post? I've made more in one month than you have since you've been on the internet.....at least under "this" monicker you are using in this group or do you have other names you use? Don't bother answering. These frequencies seem odd to use beaming to a location that is in 24 daylight. I would think 11mHz and 13mHz would be the optimum. Any

Matt - I got to thinking after I sent that last post and hear me out, this is in response to what you are saying. Now read this and "try" - just try is all I ask - to hear me out because I am being honest enough to you in saying that I really thought about what you said and isn't that what you really intended for me to do? Sure it was. You actually put my name in the title to get my attention and you deserve a response and hopefully I give you one that makes "some" sense to you....I don't intend for you to 100% agree with me either - maybe somewhere in the middle. I'm not trying to be a jerk when I say what I'm fixing to say either.....this next thing. This is THE LAST TIME I will address a post by you if you entitle it like that or make an effort to "make me answer you" like you are now. OK? Follow what I'm saying? I just want there to be no misunderstanding between you and me. So if you send out another post etc. etc. with the same complaint - it will not be answered. Actually I am "considering".....not sure yet....but thinking about getting a real newsreader where I can "plonk" for lack of a better word and maybe just maybe I can be like a few others in here and be anonymous and have five or six screen names if I so chose or just "want to stir the pot" that others are doing in here, such as yourself with this thread. But I'll try my best to answer you this time, K?

When I respond to a post by Fred or Larb, and I don't even do it that often, but when I do - it is between them and myself and usually it's about Batman and Robin. If Robin wasn't here, neither would Fred or Larb, just like before. You do know that there are more than just them two, don't you? There is quite a few of the DTS that don't even get involved in this over here. It's just Robin stuck his nose where it didn't belong etc. etc. etc. I'm not going through it all again, you know the story.<sigh> It's just that Robin hates Fred and Larb because they call him out on his outlandish lies like Batman did/does. And Fred and Larb like to yank his chain because they know he can't help himself...lol. But if I respond to a post that has NOTHING to do with you and has NOTHING to do with this group like the other fifty plus threads or posts in response- that are posted every day in here. What is it to you? Really? And don't give me the same whining crap that Robin does, though he is the one that started it and eggs it on to begin with.

Really Matt, in the grand scheme of things what is the big freeking deal? Unless you are just piling on to have fun and keep it going, because there are people that like it like that. Hopefully you aren't and are being serious but if you keep up with these same posts etc. etc. I just have to come to the conclusion you just want to egg things on. I mention Batman and Robin in one post (that has absolutely NOTHING to do with you) after Robin types out MY NAME five times in just one post. One post Matt! He'll bring me up or has.....thirty plus times in one week but I bring up his name and "Ohhhh - ohhhhh Gregg you're a badboy <sniff sniff> you are destroying this group"....lol...I mean are you really serious? How old are you if I may ask? You don't have to answer if you don't want, I just didn't know if you were a kid or middle aged or new to usenet.

I don't know if you use a newsreader or not and I'm not going to check and see either, but can't you block me out? I mean, it won't hurt my feelings. I use google and unfortunately it shows a little bit of the titled thread....but that is just the one that sends the post. I have seen countless threads and by the title of the thread if it doesn't strike my fancy - even if I see it has 53 responses - I just don't open it because it's nothing I want to read. Can't you do that same thing? Sure you can Matt. I hope this was answered sufficiently enough for you, though I feel it won't be....I hope I'm wrong and it's cool. I'll respond back to you here if you answer, but if it's the same thing - then I just have to come to the conclusion that you are just "having fun" in a weird/strange way. Oh, and just to be fair with me, not right now of course because he won't do it right away.....err who knows maybe he will - watch how many times my name is typed by him over a weeks period of time or even a months worth and then see how many times I say either Krypsie or Robin. Count them, apparently you are all engrossed in this usenet soap opera because you keep bringing it up so I'm not asking you to go out of your way or anything. But I did notice something <pause> you've NEVER ONCE said anything to him about it.<scratching my head and in deep thought>;-)
Now back to my radio.

Thinking cap not on today. Been up a while with only a few hours sleep. My apologies to all. They are in 24 hour darkness now. However, come December, they will then be in 24 daylight. BTW, does the BBC do a mid summer broadcast in December?

Gregg, you seemed to have redefined the word "hope". Probably redefined the word "sense" when it comes right down to it!

> you....I don't intend for you to 100% agree with me either - maybe

You got that part right!

> somewhere in the middle. I'm not trying to be a jerk when I say what

If you're not trying to be a jerk, why are you so good at it? It's either because practice makes perfect or you've a natural talent for it!
In my opinion, I'd go with natural talent!

Nobody is FORCING you to answer ANY POST YOU DON'T LIKE. This is usenet!
By the way, that applies to posts by Mike as well.

Well, you've certainly earnt the title "Plonker", no doubt about that!

> few others in here and be anonymous and have five or six screen names > if I so chose or just "want to stir the pot" that others are doing in

Why do you need 5 or 6 "screen names"??? You're pretty good at stirring the pot with one! Oh, that's right, you already have a few other screen names AND you like to use them!

Well, why don't you respond to them via email? If it's between you and them, why include EVERYONE ELSE in this newsgroup! Oh, that's right! They are here on your invitation to "stir the pot" because YOU thought it was too quiet in RRS. If you need excitement, go out to a nightclub or something and get yourself laid!

> about Batman and Robin. If Robin wasn't here, neither would Fred or > Larb, just like before. You do know that there are more than just them

Hang about laddie. YOU INVITED fred, larb et al to take care of Mike. Maybe you've just conveniently forgotten about your rather public confession! Ergo, you can't say they are here because of batman and robin, whoever they might be!

> two, don't you? There is quite a few of the DTS that don't even get

You need to stop reading those comics! It's warping your mind! Robin doesn't post here! Never seen batman post here either!

NO GREGG, YOU STARTED IT BY CALLING THE TROLLS INTO RRS TO GET AT MIKE AND OTHERS WITH WHOM YOU PICK FIGHTS!

Really Gregg, in the grand scheme of things what is the big freekin deal? Matt has made a comment! That's fair. Now answer HIS POINTS! He thinks you're a hypocrite and I suggest that's fair comment. Now deal with that before you recommence your bleating and pleading!

> Unless you are just piling on to have fun and keep it going,

Yes Plonker, err Gregg and you are one of those people! Why else would you have called the DTS in here?

If you post in RRS, then ANYTHING you post has everything to do with everyone! That's because it's a PUBLIC NEWSGROUP and there are no policemen even though the DTS fancy themselves as usenet police!
If you want to post something that has nothing to do with everyone else, then send a blasted email direct to your target audience. Of course, we all know you WANT TO BLEAT PUBLICLY so you won't do that!

> just one post. One post Matt! He'll bring me up or has.....thirty plus

You can bring up my name as often as you like! I don't mind. Do try to spell it correctly however.

Err, yes, I suspect Matt is quite serious!

> may ask? You don't have to answer if you don't want, I just didn't

One could ask the same of you Gregg. In fact, just how old are you Gregg? You behave like a teenager but I suspect you are a little older than that!

Hey GREGG, you are destroying this group. Your trolls will see to that!

SO, if you see a post with YOUR NAME in the title, why don't you assume it's about you and ignore it! Take your own advice!

Oh, I get it now. You bringing the trolls in here to create mayhem is being serious and responsible but someone reacting adversely to that is just "having fun in a weird/strange way". Gee Gregg, I'm glad you explained that!

No Gregg, Matt, like so many others, is pissed off with your invitation to the trolls and your attempt to destroy this newsgroup.

You really are a Class A idiot, aren't you! I put your name in the title for OTHER people to realize what you and you alone have done! I don't care if you respond or not. I know for a fact that you don't have the smarts of a cabbage, and don't even realize that you've been slandering a man left and right. Someone who by most people's statements hasn't posted to Usenet in quite a long time. That you've been slandering him seems to be enjoyable to you, so I've decided to let you get a taste of your own medicine...

... I'm going to post stories about YOU in dozens of different newsgroups. Outrageous stories, just as you've been posting about others. I'm going make hundreds of posts either about you, or using your name, all over the internet. Let's see how you like it.

> if I so chose or just "want to stir the pot" that others are doing

Is this your idea of a joke? You have been 'stirring the pot' for months in different newsgroups. Now you've been doing it in my group and I don't like it.

> When I respond to a post by Fred or Larb, and I don't even do it that

Then you should have kept to the groups where they played. Instead, you brought them here. You fucked up. If you want to talk to those idiots, do it with e-mail. Don't ruin this group!

>You do know that there are more than just them

Yes, I do know. I have a search engine. There are four of you. Period. Unless one of you is using 2-3 different names. Now five, including you, troll.

> Fred and Larb like to yank his chain because they know he can't help > himself...lol.

Aren't you smart enough to see that he is in full control of them? They can't help but post every time he does, but he usually doesn't bother to reply to them. He OWNS them, lock, stock, and barrel, and THEY are too dumb to realize it. Just as you are!

> Really Matt, in the grand scheme of things what is the big freeking

Gregg, you are about to find out. Wait a week or two and do a Google search with your name or e-mail address as the search string. You will then understand just want the 'big freeking deal' is.

> How old are you if I > may ask? You don't have to answer if you don't want, I just didn't

Let's put it this way... I posted here for years, then stopped for almost 10 years. Now I'm back and I find people like you and these other trolls here. Yes, I'm including you, Gregg, as one of the trolls. You aligned yourself with them, joined their idiotic troll group, invited them here to what WAS a nice quite place, and yet you keep on running your pie hole about how YOU are being mistreated. You are a fool.

> but can't you block me out? I mean, it won't hurt my Block you? No, son, I'm going to crucify you. Just as you have done to others.

> But I > did notice something<pause> you've NEVER ONCE said anything to him

That is because he is not the problem. You are. He is not being a hypocrite. You are. He is not slandering others. You are. And you are too stupid to even realize it!

There are no psk31 autospotters in your part of the world. Any old POS computer and an SSB radio is all you need (besides an always-on internet-not necessarily broadband. Very small text messages are all that are sent).

Degeneration of Democracy

When Adolf Hitler was building up the Nazi movement in the 1920s, leading up to his taking power in the 1930s, he deliberately sought to activate people who did not normally pay much attention to politics. Such people were a valuable addition to his political base, since they were particularly susceptible to Hitler's rhetoric and had far less basis for questioning his assumptions or his conclusions.

"Useful idiots" was the term supposedly coined by V.I. Lenin to describe similarly unthinking supporters of his dictatorship in the Soviet Union.

Put differently, a democracy needs informed citizens if it is to thrive, or ultimately even survive. In our times, American democracy is being dismantled, piece by piece, before our very eyes by the current administration in Washington, and few people seem to be concerned about it.

The president's poll numbers are going down because increasing numbers of people disagree with particular policies of his, but the damage being done to the fundamental structure of this nation goes far beyond particular counterproductive policies.

Just where in the Constitution of the United States does it say that a president has the authority to extract vast sums of money from a private enterprise and distribute it as he sees fit to whomever he deems worthy of compensation? Nowhere.

And yet that is precisely what is happening with a $20 billion fund to be provided by BP to compensate people harmed by their oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico.

Many among the public and in the media may think that the issue is simply whether BP's oil spill has damaged many people, who ought to be compensated. But our government is supposed to be "a government of laws and not of men." If our laws and our institutions determine that BP ought to pay $20 billion-- or $50 billion or $100 billion-- then so be it.

But the Constitution says that private property is not to be confiscated by the government without "due process of law." Technically, it has not been confiscated by Barack Obama, but that is a distinction without a difference.

With vastly expanded powers of government available at the discretion of politicians and bureaucrats, private individuals and organizations can be forced into accepting the imposition of powers that were never granted to the government by the Constitution.

If you believe that the end justifies the means, then you don't believe in Constitutional government. And, without Constitutional government, freedom cannot endure. There will always be a "crisis"-- which, as the president's chief of staff has said, cannot be allowed to "go to waste" as an opportunity to expand the government's power.

That power will of course not be confined to BP or to the particular period of crisis that gave rise to the use of that power, much less to the particular issues.

When Franklin D. Roosevelt arbitrarily took the United States off the gold standard, he cited a law passed during the First World War to prevent trading with the country's wartime enemies. But there was no war when FDR ended the gold standard's restrictions on the printing of money.

At about the same time, during the worldwide Great Depression, the German Reichstag passed a law "for the relief of the German people." That law gave Hitler dictatorial powers that were used for things going far beyond the relief of the German people-- indeed, powers that ultimately brought a rain of destruction down on the German people and on others.

If the agreement with BP was an isolated event, perhaps we might hope that it would not be a precedent. But there is nothing isolated about it.

The man appointed by President Obama to dispense BP's money as the administration sees fit, to whomever it sees fit, is only the latest in a long line of presidentially appointed "czars" controlling different parts of the economy, without even having to be confirmed by the Senate, as Cabinet members are.

Those who cannot see beyond the immediate events to the issues of arbitrary power-- versus the rule of law and the preservation of freedom-- are the "useful idiots" of our time. But useful to whom?

Many years ago when I used to run a bread route for Sunbeam Bakery, (Don't say bread, say Sunbeam!) sometimes on old Highway 49 South, I used to see an elderly couple in an old Chevrolet pickup truck.On the front bumper was a home made sign that said, GIDDY UP GO.On the rear bumper was another home made sign that said, WE JUST WENT.

FOR MILLIONS BECAUSE CAN'T GET VOTES IN CONGRESS

PEOPLE LIKE YOU ARE THE ONLY WAY TO FIGHT THIS

This is a true red-alert danger. Read below for background, but please take action immediately.

Yesterday, several Senators led by Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-Iowa) learned of a possible plan by the White House to provide an Amnesty to the nation's estimated 11-18 million illegal aliens through an executive order. The move would take immigration enforcement out of the hands of Congress and place it in the hands of the Executive Branch.

Read this letter, http://www.numbersusa.com/content/news/june-21-2010/senators-challenge-pres-obama-rumors-executive-order-amnesty.html

send this fax to your Members of Congress, send this fax to Pres. Obama, http://www.numbersusa.com/faxes?ID=12309 and call your Members of Congress at (202) 224-3121 to express your outrage at Pres. Obama's plan to provide Amnesty through Executive Order.

TAKE ACTION: Send faxes to your 3 Members of Congress that warn them of the plot and urge them to speak out against it.

Your great success in keeping Congress from voting on a mass amnesty this year has stirred up a new threat.

Seeing that most Members of Congress are scared to death to vote for an amnesty in an election year, Administration officials are working on ways to do a de facto amnesty without involving Congress.

We at NumbersUSA have been hearing about this behind the scenes for a few weeks now but haven't had solid enough evidence to mount a national mobilization against. Now, the whispering has erupted with an open letter to the President from 8 U.S. Senators (see below my signature) spelling out the details known thus far.

In a nutshell, there is discussion going on within the Administration about stopping nearly all deportations, presumably until "comprehensive immigration reform" can be passed to give illegal aliens full work and residency rights permanently.

I am guessing that this is what religious leaders were hinting at the Brookings conference I attended last week. They indicated that they had been talking with Administration officials about a way to help illegal aliens without having to deal with Congress. They then said they had better not say any more about it.

Friends, U.S. Presidents have proven whether Republican or Democrat that they are capable of doing almost anything they please until they come up for re-election. Only an incredible outburst of outrage from the public can stop the Administration from doing a de facto amnesty all by itself.

Your faxing today is just the first part of the outburst that we are mobilizing.

We need all 535 Members of Congress to know about the De Facto Amnesty Plot -- and to know that you know. We want Democrats in Congress to begin to tell their Leaders and the White House that even the hint that this amnesty could happen will hurt their chances of winning in the fall. We want Republicans to start threatening to use the Plot as a campaign issue.

We want the White House to publicly promise that it will NOT unilaterally proclaim an amnesty. Short of that, we want to see the White House forced to deny over and over that such a plot is even underway.

Send the faxes now. JOIN http://www.numbersusa.com

LETTER FROM 8 SENATORS

Dear President Obama:

We understand that there’s a push for your Administration to develop a plan to unilaterally extend either deferred action or parole to millions of illegal aliens in the United States. We understand that the Administration may include aliens who have willfully overstayed their visas or filed for benefits knowing that they will not be eligible for a status for years to come. We understand that deferred action and parole are discretionary actions reserved for individual cases that present unusual, emergent or humanitarian circumstances. Deferred action and parole were not intended to be used to confer a status or offer protection to large groups of illegal aliens, even if the agency claims that they look at each case on a “case-by-case” basis.

While we agree our immigration laws need to be fixed, we are deeply concerned about the potential expansion of deferred action or parole for a large illegal alien population. While deferred action and parole are Executive Branch authorities, they should not be used to circumvent Congress’ constitutional authority to legislate immigration policy, particularly as it relates to the illegal population in the United States.

The Administration would be wise to abandon any plans for deferred action or parole for the illegal population. Such a move would further erode the American public’s confidence in the federal government and its commitment to securing the borders and enforcing the laws already on the books.

We would appreciate receiving a commitment that the Administration has no plans to use either authority to change the current position of a large group of illegal aliens already in the United States, and ask that you respond to us about this matter as soon as possible.

•All Immigration Votes by Barack Hussein Obama•

Voted on Senate floor in favor of amendment to expand chain migration in 2007
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Clinton Amendment (SA 1183) to S. 1348. The Clinton Amendment would significantly increase legal immigration by adding an unlimited number of spouses and minor children of lawful permanent residents to the uncapped immediate relative category that currently is for the spouses, minor children and parents of U.S. citizens only. The spouses and minor children of lawful permanent residents currently are allocated some 87,000 visas each year. The Clinton Amendment failed by a vote of 44 to 53.

Voted on Senate floor in favor of amendment to increase chain migration in 2007
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Menendez Amedment (SA 1194) to S. 1395. The Menedez Amendment would not only increase near-term legal immigration by more than 100,000 each year, it would remove even the façade that the bill would end chain migration. Specifically, it would change the cut-off date for reducing the "backlog" of family-sponsored immigration applicants from May 1, 2005, to January 1, 2007, the same date by which illegal aliens must have been unlawfully present in the United States in order to receive amnesty under this bill. It also adds 110,000 green cards a year for adult children and sibling backlog reduction. The Menedez Amendment failed by a vote of 53 to 44.

Voted on Senate floor in favor of amendment to increase chain migration in 2007
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Akaka Amendment (SA 1186) to S. 1387 The Akaka Amendment would exempt children of Filipino World War II veterans naturalized pursuant to the Immigration Act of 1990 from numerical limits on worldwide immigration. This additional exemption from caps on visa issuance would serve only to increase the flow of immigration into the United States.The Akaka Amendment passed by a vote of 97 to 9.

Voted on Senate floor in favor of guestworker-amnesty bill by voting in favor of cloture motion to end debate and bring bill to a vote in 2007
Sen. Obama voted in favor of a motion to invoke cloture and limit debate on S. 1639, thereby preventing it from moving toward a final vote. S. 1639 is the “corrected and updated” version of S. 1348, the guestworker-amnesty bill that would: grant an amnesty; authorize the importation of millions of new foreign workers; and do little to curb our illegal immigration crisis. Two days prior to this vote, the Senate had voted to invoke cloture and move forward with the debate on S. 1639, outside normal channels and bypassing the committee process. Two weeks prior to this vote, the Senate rejected cloture on the “grand bargain” substitute amendment to S. 1348 by a 45-50 margin, thus halting – for the time being – the bill’s progress toward final passage. President Bush then stepped in to plead with Senate Republicans to give the “compromise” another look. Senate Majority Leader Reid chose to bring the proposal back to the Senate as a new bill, S. 1369. This motion to invoke cloture on S. 1639 (the second motion) failed by a vote of 46 to 53.

Voted on Senate floor in favor of guestworker-amnesty bill by voting in favor of a motion to bring bill to the Senate floor for a debate and a vote in 2007
Sen. Obama voted in favor of a motion to invoke cloture and bring S. 1639, the “corrected and updated” version of S. 1348, the guestworker-amnesty bill that would grant an amnesty, would authorize the importation of millions of new foreign workers, and would do little to curb our illegal immigration crisis, to the Senate floor. Two weeks prior to this vote, the Senate rejected cloture on the “grand bargain” substitute amendment to S. 1348 by a 45-50 margin, thus halting – for the time being – the bill’s progress toward final passage. President Bush then stepped in to plead with Senate Republicans to give the “compromise” another look and Senate Majority Leader Reid then brought the proposal back to the Senate as a new bill, S. 1369. The motion to invoke cloture passed by a vote of 64 to 35.

Voted on Senate floor in favor of guestworker-amnesty bill by voting in favor of motion to limit debate and move to vote in 2007
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the second cloture motion on the "grand bargain" substitute amendment (SA 1150) to S. 1348, the guestworker-amnesty bill that would grant an amnesty, would authorize the importation of millions of new foreign workers, and would do little to curb our illegal immigration crisis. The motion to invoke cloture would have ended the debate on the "compromise" proposal and limited further discussion of amendments to a previously-agreed upon set of proposals -- thus a vote against cloture was effectively a vote in favor of killing the amnesty-guestworker bill. The motion to invoke cloture failed by a vote of 45 to 50.

Voted on Senate floor in favor of amendment to kill border fence in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Manager's Amendment (SA 4188), offered by Sen. Arlen Specter (R-PA), to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006. The Manager's Amendment made many minor changes to S. 2611, none of have significant numeric impacts on the overall bill. However, the Manager's Amendment included a provision that requires consultation with the government of Mexico concerning the construction of additional fencing and related border security structures along the international border between the United States and Mexico. This would virtually guarantee that the fence along the U.S.-Mexico border would never be completed. The Manager's Amendment passed by a vote of 56 to 41 to 1 (the 1 denotes a "present" vote).

Voted in favor of bill to increase immigration and grant amnesty to illegal aliens in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of final passage of S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006. S. 2611 would dramatically change most occupations and communities in America with the largest movement of foreign workers in world history. Specifically, S. 2611 would: reward approximately 10.2 million illegal aliens with an amnesty allowing them to permanently take American jobs and become U.S. citizens; entice millions more foreign workers to illegally enter our communities, crowd the housing and schools, take the jobs and depress the wages because they reasonably can believe they eventually will be given an amnesty, too; double legal immigration from 1 million to 2 million a year; give out permanent green cards to up to 66 million foreign workers and dependents over the next 20 years. The main difference in terms of numbers between the final version of S. 2611 and the version of the bill when the cloture motion was invoked was that the Bingaman Amendment to cap the number of employment-based visas for workers, spouses and children at 650,000 was adopted after cloture but before final passage. Robert Rector of the Heritage Foundation estimates that the Bingaman Amendment would reduce employment-based visas available under S. 2611 by about 150,000 a year. S. 2611 passed by a vote of 62 to 36.

Voted in favor of motion to invoke cloture on S. 2611 to increase overall immigration numbers and reward illegal aliens with amnesty in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of a motion to invoke cloture on S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006. The motion to invoke cloture was a procedural move to ends debate on S. 2611. If the motion had been rejected by at least 40 Senators, Majority Leader Bill Frist, MD (R-TN) would have had to choose between continued debate on S. 2611 and moving on to other legislative business. If the motion had failed, Sen. Frist was expected to move on to other legislative business, thus effectively killing the bill. S. 2611 provides an indirect path to citizenship for illegal aliens. S. 2611 also provides for major increases in temporary worker visas and permanent immigrant visas. It provides for at least an additional 100,000 H-1B visas annually; an additional 325,000 new guestworker visas (H-5A/H-2C visas); a one-time-only permanent increase of 310,660. In addition, the S. 2611 includes amnesty for an estimated 10.2 million illegal aliens (about 6.7 million illegal alien workers and 3.5 million illegal aliens spouse and/or children). The cloture motion passed by a vote of 73 to 25.

Voted in favor of motion to invoke cloture on bill to increase overall immigration numbers and reward illegal aliens with amnesty in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of a motion to invoke cloture on SA 3424, a "compromise amnesty" proposal by Sens. Hagel (R-NE) and Martinez (R-FL). This was a procedural vote that was highly tied up in partisan politics. Although it is impossible to know just why one voted against cloture, most of those voting for cloture did so because they wanted the bill to be passed in a succeeding vote. Therefore, most of the votes against cloture were votes against the amnesty. The Hagel-Martinez proposal was put forth as an alternative to the Senate Judiciary Committee-passed amnesty proposal. The Hagel-Martinez proposal differs from the Judiciary Committee proposal in that it provides an indirect path to citizenship for illegal aliens as opposed to the direct path outlined in the Judiciary Committee proposal. It only allows illegal aliens who have been in the country for more than 5 years to stay in the United States and adjust to legal status. Those who have been here less than 5 years but more than two years would be required to exit the country and return through the a land port of entry with a visa. Over time, qualified individuals would have the chance to become citizens. The Hagel-Martinez compromise also provides for major increases in temporary worker visas and permanent immigrant visas. It provides for at least an additional 100,000 H-1B visas annually; an additional 325,000 new guestworker visas (H-5A/H-2C visas); a one-time-only permanent increase of 310,660; and a total annual increase in permanent immigrant visas of at least 1,154,700. In addition, the Hagel-Martinez compromise includes amnesty for an estimated 10.2 million illegal aliens (about 6.7 million illegal alien workers and 3.5 million illegal aliens spouses and/or children). The cloture motion failed by a vote of 38 to 60.

Importing Specific Foreign Workers

Voted on Senate floor in favor of amendment to sunset proposed guestworker program in 5 years in 2007. Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Dorgan Amendment (SA 1316) to S. 1348 that sunsets the Y-1 "temporary" nonimmigrant nonagricultural worker program five years after enactment. The Dorgan Amendment had been voted on by the Senate two weeks prior to this vote and it failed by a vote of 48 to 49, but this time the Senate voted to pass it by a vote of 49 to 48.

Voted in favor of amendment to S. 1348 to increase H-1B visa fees in 2007
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Sanders Amendment (S. 1223) to S. 1348. The Sanders Amendment would raise the fees employers who wish to import H-1B high-skill nonimmigrant workers from $1,500 to $10,000, with the funds going to scholarships for American high tech students. The Sanders Amendment passed by a vote of 59 to 35.

Voted on Senate floor for amendment to sunset proposed guestworker program in 2007
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Dorgan Amendment> (SA 1181) to S. 1348 to sunset the bill's guestworker provisions in five years. The Dorgan Amendment failed by a vote of 48 to 49.

Voted in favor of amendment to cut proposed guestworker program in half in 2007
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Bingaman Amendment (SA 1169) to S. 1348, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2007. The Bingaman Amendment would reduce the annual importation of workers under the new guestworker programs proposed by S. 1348 from 400,000 to 200,000 workers per year. The Bingaman Amendment passed by a vote 74 of 24.

Voted against amendment to cap employment-based visas in 2006
Sen. Obama voted against the Bingaman Amendment (SA 4131) to to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006. The Bingaman Amendment would cap the number of employment-based visas for workers, spouses and children at 650,000. Robert Rector of the Heritage Foundation estimates that the Bingaman Amendment would reduce employment-based visas available under S. 2611 by about 150,000 a year. The Bingaman Amendment passed by a vote of 51 to 47.

Voted in favor of amendment to limit proposed guestworker program in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Dorgan Amendment (SA 4095) to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006. The Dorgan Amendment would have prohibited the issuance of new H-2C "guestworker" visas after five years, but authorized DHS to continue to extend the authorized stay of an H-2C alien after that date. This would have reduced the number of new guestworkers under S. 2611 from two million to one million (200,000 per year for five years instead of 10 years). The Dorgan Amendment failed by a vote of 48 to 49.

Voted against amendment to create additional guestworker visa categories in 2006
Sen. Obama voted against the Hutchison Amendment (SA 4101) to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006. The Hutchison Amendment would require the State Department to grant a Secure Authorized Foreign Employee (SAFE) visa to a national of a NAFTA or CAFTA nation who meets specified requirements. The "E" visa is already a visa for treaty-trader countries, thus the Hutchison Amendment would have just created more unnecessary "guestworker" categories. The Hutchison Amendment failed by a vote of 31 to 67.

Voted to kill amendment to prevent guestworkers from getting greencards in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of a motion to table the Kyl amdendment (SA 3969) to S. 2611. The Kyl amendment would have removed provisions allowing guestworkers admitted under S. 2611 to adjust status to that of lawful permanent resident on the basis of their status as a guestworker. This would have prevented 200,000 guestworkers a year from gaining greencards, resulting in 2 million less greencards over a decade. The motion to table the Kyl amendment passed by a vote of 58 to 35, effectively killing the amendment.

Voted on Senate floor against amendment to postpone guestworker-amnesty program until borders secured in 2006. Sen. Obama voted against the Cornyn Amendment (SA 3691, proposed for Sen. Isakson) to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006 . The Cornyn Amendment would prohibit DHS from implementing any guestworker program or granting amnesty as proposed by the bill unless the agency has certified that this bill's border security measures and increases in Federal detention space have been completed and are fully operational. The Cornyn Amendment failed by a vote of 40-55.

Voted on Senate floor against killing amendment to strike guestworker provisions from immigration bill 2006. Sen. Obama voted against a motion to table the Dorgan Amendment (SA 4017) to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006 . The Dorgan amendment would have stricken the guestworker provisions of the bill that would add an estimated 8.4 million foreign workers and their dependents over the next ten years (according to a May, 2006 study by the Heritage Foundation's Robert Rector). The motion to table passed by a voted of 68 to 29, effectively killing the Dorgan amendment.

Voted on Senate floor against killing amendment to cap guestworker visas in 2006
Sen. Obama voted against a motion to table the Bingaman Amendment (SA 3981) to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006 . This was a procedural move to terminate further discussion of the amendment. The Bingaman amendment (submitted by Sen. Bingaman for himself and Sen. Feinstein) would cap the number of H-2C visas available annually for issuance at 200,000 and remove the 20% a year increase in annual guestworker visas. This would reduce the 10-year increase in foreign workers and their dependents from 8.4 million, as provided in the original bill, to two million. The motion to table the Bingaman amendment failed by a vote of 18 to 79 and the Bingaman amendment ultimately passed by voice vote.

Voted on Senate floor against amendment to increase worker protections in 2006
Sen. Obama voted against the Cornyn amendment (SA 3965) to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006 . The Cornyn amendment (submitted for himself and Sen. Grassley) would offer modest protections for American workers from being displaced by a foreign worker by prohibiting H-2C visas for employers unless they attest that they will employ an alien in the offered job position and DHS certifies that there are not sufficient U.S. workers who are able, willing, qualified, and available to fill the position. The Cornyn amendment passed by a vote of 50 to 48.

Voted on Senate floor for amendment to weaken worker protections in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Kennedy amendment (SA 4066) to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006 . The Kennedy amendment weakens Sen. Cornyn's amendment (SA 3965) by not requiring Federal certification of the employer's need to import foreign workers. The Kennedy amendment passed by a vote of 56 to 43.

Voted against amendment to strip foreign-worker increase in 2005
Sen. Obama voted against the Byrd Amendment to S. 1932, the Budget Reconciliation bill. The amendment, introduced by Sen. Robert Byrd (D-WV), would have stripped ALL immigration increases from the Budget Reconciliation bill and replaced the increase with a provision to impose a $1,500 fee on employers who hire certain non-immigrants. The immigration increase was added to the Budget Reconciliation bill by the Senate Judiciary Committee as a result of an 14-2 vote in favor of an amendment introduced by Senator Arlen Specter. The Specter plan would increase permanent, employment-based immigration by nearly tripling the number of foreign workers who can enter the U.S. each year. As well, it exempts workers' families from the 140,000-visa cap on employment-based immigration. It also raises the cap on employment-based permanent immigration by adding each year the lesser of 90,000 visas or any "unused" employment-based visas from any prior year. Altogether, these provisions could generate a net increase in permanent immigration of 366,000 aliens, or about one-third of current, annual legal immigration. Senator Byrd's amendment was cosponsored by Sens. Sessions (R-AL) and Durbin (D-IL). It was also supported by the AFL-CIO. The Byrd Amendment failed by a vote of 14 to 85.

Voted to protect American workers by voting against foreign worker importation program in 2005
Sen. Obama voted against S. 1307, the Dominican Republic-Central America-United States Free Trade Agreement Implementation Act (CAFTA). CAFTA does not does NOT include any explicit language about visas. It does, however, include language in chapters 10 and 11 that is virtually identical to the language in other FTAs that creates the expectation of a right of immigration. It is expected that, like NAFTA, CAFTA will generate an increase in illegal immigration. CAFTA, like other recent FTAs, covers four "modes" of delivery of services between countries (Cross Border, Consumption Abroad, Commercial Presence and Movement of natural persons). Although there is nothing in the text of the agreement that would provide a single extra visa to the United States, by using language on Mode 3 and Mode 4 delivery of services that is identical or virtually identical to that in all recent FTAs, the USTR has allowed for the creation of an expectation of immigration. In other words, the foreign investors and service providers who read the agreement may easily believe that it will give them the right to enter the United States either to invest in a service providing company here or to go to work for a subsidiary from the home country. (Remember that Congress only has the authority to approve or reject free trade agreements; it many not amend them because of the President's fast track authority. Once Congress gives its approval, it may not pass laws that restrict or alter the provisions of the trade agreement, or the United States will be subject to trade sanctions.) CAFTA passed the Senate by a vote of 54 to 45.

Voted in favor of amendment to increase foreign-worker importation in 2005
Sen. Obama voted in favor of S. Amdt. 387, an amendment offered by Senator Barbara Mikulski (D-MD), to H.R. 1268, the Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Defense, the Global War on Terror, and Tsunami Relief, 2005. The Mikulski amendment to the Immigration and Nationality Act increased the number of H-2Bs who can enter and take jobs in the United States in the next two years and apportioned the H-2B visa cap so that visas will be available throughout the year. Specifically, the Mikulski Amendment would split the H-2B visa cap so no more than 33,000 visas are made available for the first six months the fiscal year, and another 33,000 visas would be available in the second half of the year. HOWEVER, the Mikulski Amendment exempts from the annual cap aliens granted an H-2B visa within three years prior to approval of an H-2B petition, thus potentially TRIPLING the number of H-2B workers in the United States at any one time. Although apportioning H-2B visas is a common-sense approach that will help prevent the situation that occurred in FY 2004 and FY2005 when the 66,000 annual cap on H-2B (low-skill) nonimmigrant visas was hit within the first quarter of the year, the Mikulski Amendment would ultimately harm American workers by creating exemptions which potentially could triple the number of H-2B workers in the U.S. at any given time. Fortunately, however, the increase is limited to two years, and the additional visas can go only to foreign workers who worked in this country legally during the last three years. The Amendment passed by a vote of 94 to 6.

Citizenship for Illegal Alien Babies

Sen. Obama has taken no action to reduce the rewarding of illegal immigration by giving citizenship to anchor babies.

Inviting / Repelling Illegal Aliens

Voted in favor of sanctuary policies for illegal aliens in 2008
Sen. Obama voted in favor of tabling an amendment (SA 4309) sponsored by Sen. David Vitter (R-La.) to (S. Con. Res. 70), a concurrent resolution setting forth the congressional budget for the United States Government for fiscal year 2009. The Vitter Amendment, if adopted, would have created a reserve fund to ensure that Federal assistance does not go to sanctuary cities that ignore the immigration laws of the United States and create safe havens for illegal aliens and potential terrorists. Sanctuary policies bar public officials, including police officers, from asking an individual's immigration status and from reporting illegal aliens to federal authorities. In 1996, Congress passed a law that specifically prohibits state and local governments from enacting sanctuary policies. Despite that, cities such as San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago and Houston, still have sanctuary policies in place. Maine is the only state with a sanctuary policy. The Vitter Amendment would have been a huge incentive for states and municipalities to rescind their sanctuary policies. The vote to table the Vitter Amendment passed 58 to 40, effectively killing the amendment.

Voted in favor of rewarding illegal aliens with amnesty in 2007
Sen. Obama voted in favor of a motion to invoke cloture on S. 2205, The "Development, Relief, and Education for Alien Minors (DREAM) Act of 2007." The DREAM Act amnesty would not just offer U.S. citizenship to illegal alien teenagers, it also would provide amnesty to the parents of most of them. An analysis from the Center for Immigration Studies found that the DREAM Act would offer amnesty to 2.1 million illegal aliens (Once the amnestied teens become citizens they can obtain an amnesty for their parents. The motion to invoke cloture failed by a vote of 52 to 44 (60 YES votes were needed for cloture to pass and to prevent a filibuster). Click here to read a summary of the bill.

Voted on Senate floor against amendment to increase enforcement and delay amnesty in 2007
Sen. Obama voted against the Coburn Amendment (SA 1131) to S. 1348. The Coburn Amendment would have added some teeth to the underlying measure's so-called enforcement "triggers" and would surely have delayed the granting of any amnesty to illegal aliens or the importation of any additional "temporary" nonimmigrant workers. Specifically, the Coburn Amendment required DHS, in addition to the mechanisms needed to "trigger" implementation of the bill's amnesty and guestworker provisions, to certify the implementation of various border security and interior enforcement measures (e.g., all statutorily-required border fencing has been constructed, US-VISIT is fully operational, "sanctuary cities" are prohibited, denying aliens who are likely to become public charges admission into the United States, etc.). It also required the president to certify that all of these "triggering" mechanisms are fully implemented and operational and, subsequently, required Congress to approve the certification – all of this prior to implementation of amnesty and guestworker provisions. The Coburn Amendment failed by a vote of 42 to 54.

Voted on Senate floor against amendment to create a disincentive to amnesty in 2007
Sen. Obama voted against the Cornyn Amendment (SA 1250) to S. 1348. The Cornyn Amendment prohibits illegal aliens seeking amnesty under this bill (in this case, "probationary status") from submitting "sworn affidavits from nonrelatives" as proof of unlawful work or unlawful presence in the United States. It eliminates provisions protecting the confidentiality of the information contained in amnesty applications and, instead, requires the sharing of application-related information upon the request of a law enforcement agency, intelligence, or national security agency, or DHS component when requested in connection with a duly-authorized investigation of a civil violation. The Cornyn Amendment would not only serve as a disincentive for illegal aliens to seek amnesty, but it also would encourage cooperation between the Federal government and state and local governments in the effort to do what has not been done enough in recent decades – enforce our immigration laws. The Cornyn Amendment passed by a vote of 57 to 39.

Voted on Senate floor in favor of amendment to increase illegal immigration in 2007
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Bingaman Amendment (SA 1267) to S. 1348 to The Bingaman Amendment would have removed the requirement that Y "temporary" nonimmigrant workers (as provided for in the underlying legislation) leave the United States before they renew their visas – not by modifying the length of their authorized stay (i.e., up to six years), but by mandating that they be given visas that expire after two years and that are renewable twice. By not requiring "temporary" workers to even prove their status as "guests" in our country, this amendment would encourage more visa overstays and further disregard for the rule of law. The Bingamen Amendment failed by a vote of 41 to 57.

Voted on Senate floor against amendment to bar certain criminals from United States in 2007
Sen. Obama voted against the Cornyn Amendment (SA 1184) to S. 1385 to establish a permanent bar for gang members, terrorists, and other criminals. The Cornyn Amendment would have permanently barred from admission into the United States, and denied immigration benefits (including legal status under the amnesty in this bill), to: (1) absconders (i.e., aliens already ordered deported); (2) aliens deemed inadmissible or deportable as security risks (e.g., terrorists); (3) aliens who fail to register as sex offenders; (4) aliens convicted of certain firearms offenses; (5) aliens convicted of domestic violence, stalking, crimes against children, or violation of protection orders; (6) alien gang members; and (7) aliens convicted of at least three DUIs. The Cornyn Amendment failed by a vote of 46 to 51.

Voted against amendment to strip amnesty provisions from S. 1348 in 2007
Sen. Obama voted against the Vitter Amendment (SA 1157) to S. 1348. The Vitter Amendment would strike the amnesty provisions of the bill. The Vitter Amendment failed by a vote of 29 to 66.

Voted on Senate floor against amendment to increase interior enforcement in 2007
Sen. Obama voted against the Coleman Amendment (SA 1158) to S. 1348 to enable state and local officials to inquire about a person's immigration status for law enforcement and benefit application purposes. The Coleman Amendment would make it more difficult for illegal aliens to benefit from sanctuary policies (already explicitly prohibited under Federal law). The Coleman Amendment failed by vote of 48-49.

Cosponsoring bill to reward illegal aliens with in-state tuition and amnesty in 2007
Sen. Obama is a cosponsor of S. 774, the Development, Relief, and Education for Alien Minors [DREAM] Act of 2007. S. 774 would grant in-state tuition and amnesty to illegal aliens under the age of 21 who had been physically present in the country for five years and are in 7th grade or above. Such a reward for illegal immigration serves as an incentive for more illegal immigration.

Voted on Senate floor in favor of amendment to deter employers from hiring of illegal aliens in 2007 Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Sessions Amendment to H.R. 2, the Fair Minimum Wage Act of 2007. The Sessions Amendment (S. Amdt. 100) would prohibit employers who hire illegal aliens from receiving government contracts. This would serve as a disincentive to hire illegal aliens and a step toward removing the job-magnet for illegal immigration. The Sessions Amendment passed by a vote of 94-0.

Cosponsoring bill to create an amnesty for illegal agricultural workers in 2007
Sen. Obama is a cosponsor of S. 340, the Agricultural Job Opportunities, Benefits, and Security Act of 2007. S. 340 is an amnesty for agricultural workers. Of the 1.2 million illegal aliens currently working in agriculture, an estimated 860,000 plus their spouses and children could qualify for this amnesty, so the total could reach three million or more. The potential recipients of the amnesty will be required to prove at least 863 hours or 150 work days of agricultural employment in two preceeding years. S. 340 would, subsequently, allow these "blue card" illegal aliens to apply for legal residency (i.e., amnesty), provided they demonstrate that they have worked in agriculture here: (1) 100 work days per year each of the first five years following enactment; (2) 150 work days per year each of the first three years following enactment; or (3) over the course of the first four years after enactment, 150 work days per year for three of those years and 100 work days for the other. The AgJOBS amnesty has also been introduced as S. 237. Read an analysis of the AgJOBS amnesty.

amnesty for agricultural workers. Voted in favor of border fence in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of final passage of H.R. 6061, the Secure Fence Act of 2006. H.R. 6061: requires the Department of Homeland Security to construct 700 miles of reinforced fencing along the U.S.-Mexico border; provides for the installation of additional physical barriers, roads, lighting, cameras, and sensors in five specified lengths (encompassing approximately 700 miles) along the United States’ southwestern border; requires DHS to study the necessity, feasibility, and economic impact of constructing a similar barrier along the U.S.-Canada border; enhances border infrastructure, including checkpoints, roads, and vehicle barriers; and requires DHS to achieve and maintain "operational control" of our borders within 18 months of enactment and require reports on the progress toward this goal. The Senate passed H.R. 6061 passed by a vote of 80 to 19.

Voted in favor of amendment to fund border fence in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Sessions amendment to H.R. 5631, the Department of of Defense Appropriations bill for 2007. This was an amendment to appropriate $1.8 billion for the construction of border fencing and vehicle barriers along the southern border. The amendment, sponsored by Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL), would fund the fencing and barrier provisions proposed by S. 2611 which passed the Senate in late May. A fence is one of the most effective tools for preventing illegal migration. The Sessions Amendment passed by a voted 94-3.

Voted against amendment to fund additional immigration investigators in 2006
Sen. Obama voted against the Sessions Amendment to H.R. 5441, the Department of Homeland Security Appropriations bill for 2007. This was an amendment to add about $86 million for 800 more staff to investigate immigration law violations, offset by reductions in other programs. The Sessions Amendment failed by a vote of 34 to 66.

Voted against amendment to extend border fence in 2006
Sen. Obama voted against the Sessions Amendment to H.R. 5441, the Department of Homeland Security Appropriations bill for 2007. This was an amendment to add 370 miles of fence on the Southwest border paid for by $1.8 billion in offsets from other programs. A fence is one of the most effective tools for preventing illegal migration. This amendment would have funded the fence provided for in the Senate-passed bill (S. 2611). The Sessions Amendment failed by a vote of 29 to 71.

Voted on Senate floor in favor of amendment to kill border fence in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Manager's Amendment (SA 4188), offered by Sen. Arlen Specter (R-PA), to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006. The Manager's Amendment made many minor changes to S. 2611, none of have significant numeric impacts on the overall bill. However, the Manager's Amendment included a provision that requires consultation with the government of Mexico concerning the construction of additional fencing and related border security structures along the international border between the United States and Mexico. This would virtually guarantee that the fence along the U.S.-Mexico border would never be completed. The Manager's Amendment passed by a vote of 56 to 41 to 1 (the 1 denotes a "present" vote).

Voted in favor of amendment to make two million illegal aliens eligible for amnesty in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Feinstein Amendment (SA 4087) to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006. The Feinstein Amendment would have made an additional two million illegal aliens eligible for amnesty by replacing the bill's "earned legalization" amnesty and Deferred Mandatory Departure provisions with a one-tiered scheme in which all aliens illegally present in the United States on or before January 1, 2006, are granted amnesty and an "orange card" (instead of the normal "green card" that lawful permanent residents are issued) if they are otherwise admissible. The, after a 6-8 year period, orange card holders are allowed to adjust to Lawful Permanent Resident status if they pay a $2,000 fine. The Feinstein Amendment failed by a vote of 37 to 61.

Voted to authorize National Guard to assist in border patrol efforts in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Ensign Amendment (SA 4076) to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006. The Ensign Amendment authorizes the Governors of Arizona, California, New Mexico, and Texas - with Defense Department approval – to order their state's National Guard units or personnel to assist in border patrol efforts (with certain restrictions) along the United States' southern land border. Even though the National Guard would not be directly participating in the apprehension of illegal aliens, they would facilitate the work of the Border Patrol. The Ensign Amendment passed by a vote of 83-10.

Voted on Senate floor against amendment to create border fence in 2006
Sen. Obama voted against the Sessions amendment (SA 3979) to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006 . The Sessions amendment requires DHS to construct at least 370 miles of triple-layered fencing and 500 miles of vehicle barriers in other areas along the southwest border that DHS determines are areas that are most often used by smugglers and illegal aliens attempting to gain illegal entry, and requires that construction thereof be completed within two years. This physical barrier would help deter illegal entry into the United States. The Sessions amendment passed by a vote of 83 to 16.

Voted on Senate floor against amendment to remove amnesty provisions from immigration bill in 2006
Sen. Obama voted against the Vitter amendment (SA 3963) to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006 . Sen. Vitter submitted the amendment for himself, Sens. Chambliss, Grassley, and Santorum. The Vitter amendment would remove provisions authorizing the “earned legalization” and “agricultural worker” amnesty schemes that would grant amnesty to an estimated 16 million illegal aliens and their families (according to a May, 2006 study by the Heritage Foundation’s Robert Rector). The Vitter amendment failed by a vote of 33 to 66.

Voted on Senate floor to kill amendment to prevent Social Security for illegal aliens in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of a motion to table the Ensign amendment (SA 3985) to S. 2611, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2006 . The Ensign amendment (submitted for himself, Sen. Santorum, and Sen. Inhofe), would have prohibited the payment of Social Security benefits based on quarters of coverage earned by an individual who has not at some point had a valid Social Security number. This would have addressed part of the problem of aliens getting Social Security credit for work performed while they were illegally present in the United States (aliens who came in on temporary work visas, but overstayed their visas, would continue to get credit for all work performed, including after they became illegal). The motion to table the Ensign amendment passed by a vote of 50 to 49, effectively killing the amendment.

Voted in favor of amendment to increase funding for local and state law enforcement in 2006
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Bingamen Amendment to S. 2454. The Bingaman Amendment authorizes DHS to award grants to a state, local, or tribal law enforcement agency located in a county within 100 miles of a U.S. border with Canada or Mexico, or in a county beyond 100 miles that has been certified by DHS as a "high impact area," to provide assistance in addressing: (1) criminal activity that occurs by virtue of proximity to the border; and (2) the Federal government's failure to adequately secure its borders. Authorizes appropriations of $50 million annually, for fiscal years 2007 through 2011, to implement this grant program. Although this amendment does not require the establishment of the grant program and caps the amount available for implementation of the program it could, potentially, bring these agencies more into the enforcement fold. The Bingaman Amendment passed by a vote of 84 to 6.

Cosponsoring bill to reduce illegal immigration by requiring employment eligibility verification in 2005-2006
Sen. Obama is a cosponsor of S. 1917, the Employment Verification Act of 2005. S. 1917 would establish a mandatory electronic worker verification system that would be phased in on a two to five year basis. Requiring employers to use an electronic employment eligibility verification system is an important component of preventing illegal aliens from taking jobs from those who have the legal right to work in this country.

Voted against amendment to increase detention beds for illegal aliens in 2005
Sen. Obama voted against the McCain amendment (S. Amdt. 1171) to H.R. 2360, the Department of Homeland Security Appropriations Act. The McCain amendment would have increased the number of detention beds in the United States consistent with the number authorized in the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004. The McCain amendment failed by a vote of 42 to 56.

Cosponsoring bill to reward illegal aliens with in-state tuition and amnesty in 2005-2006
Sen. Obama is a cosponsor of S. 2075, the DREAM Act of 2005. S. 2075 would grant in-state tuition and amnesty to illegal aliens under the age of 21 who had been physically present in the country for five years and are in 7th grade or above. Such a reward for illegal immigration serves as an incentive for more illegal immigration.

Voted against amendment to provide funding for additional Border Patrol agents in 2005
Sen. Obama voted against the Ensign Amendment (SA 1219) to H.R. 2360, the Department of Homeland Security Appropriations bill. The Ensign Amendment transfers appropriated funds from the Office of State and Local Government Coordination and Preparedness to the U.S. Customs and Border Protection for the purpose of hiring 1,000 additional Border Patrol agents. The amendment failed by a vote of 38 to 60.

Cosponsoring massive guestworker-amnesty bill in 2005-2006
Sen. Obama is a cosponsor of S. 1033, the Secure America and Orderly Immigration Act . S. 1033 clearly spells out a path to jobs and residency for illegal aliens. Among the significant immigration-increase provisions of the bill are: a new visa category (H-5A) for 400,000 low-skill foreign workers (this cap can be adjusted upwards); a provision for the H-5A temporary workers to apply for permanent resident status after four years; a new temporary 6-year visa category (H-5B) for illegal aliens (and their spouses and children) already in the country; an amnesty for illegal aliens who apply for an H-5B visa and pay a $2,000 fine; an increase of 150,000 visas per year for employment-based immigrants; and an exemption of immediate relatives (spouses, children, and parents of U.S. citizens) from the annual level of 480,000 family-sponsored immigrant visas thereby providing 254,000 additional visas to the family preference categories. S. 1033 contains modest measures to increase border security such as creation of a Border Security Committee and creation of a new electronic work authorization system that would eventually replace the current "I-9" system. S. 1033 would also require the federal government to reimburse hospitals for the cost of providing emergency health care to H-5A and H-5B workers. Companion legislation, H.R. 2330, has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Reps. Jeff Flake (R-AZ), Luis Gutierrez (D-IL), and Jim Kolbe (R-AZ).

Voted in favor of amendment to provide funding for additional Border Patrol and ICE agents in 2005
Sen. Obama voted in favor of the Byrd Amendment (S. Amdt. 516) to H.R. 1268, the Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Defense, the Global War on Terror, and Tsunami Relief of 2005. The Byrd Amendment provides $390 million to hire 650 more border patrol agents, 250 new immigration investigators, and 168 new immigration enforcement agents and deportation officers. The Byrd amendment also provides funds for 2,000 additional detention beds as well as funding to train the new personnel. Passage of the Byrd Amendment sent a strong signal from the Senate in favor of increased Border Patrol and Interior Enforcement. The Byrd Amendment passed by a vote of 65 to 34.

Sen. Obama is a cosponsor of S. 359, an amnesty for agricultural workers. Of the 1.2 million illegal aliens currently working in agriculture, an estimated 860,000 plus their spouses and children could qualify for this amnesty, so the total could reach three million or more. The potential recipients of the amnesty would be required to prove 100 days of agricultural employment in the 18-month period that ended Aug. 31, 2004. Then, prior to receiving amnesty, workers would have to show 360 days of additional farm work over the next six years.

Just where in the Constitution of the United States does it say that a private enterprise can ruin the food supply and income of millions of people, kill billions of living things of all shapes and sizes, ruin the shoreline and ocean water for years to come, mislead the world about their ability to 'deal with it' and not be responsible?

Their 'right' to pollute ends at the start of your food, water and air supply. Don't you believe in YOUR right to live without being poisoned? BP are acting like all the other planet poisoners who make political contributions....like complete and utter assholes.

You will eventually come to the realization that Politicians are too cheaply bought.

Luckily, he's insane and doesn't realize how fucked up he is. I've seen him attack a guy in a cancer support group just because he had the same name. Poor fellow was dying of cancer and along comes this fuckwit and starts attacking him! I guess by now he's thought that at least 15-20 different people were Kramer, most being long time posters in their respective groups. Several different ones in the cooking group alone!

Can you say 'obsession?' Classic nut job! No wonder he hides.

24 posts to the gay community. Took almost two minutes. Later I'll send out 50 more. Then I'll post to the various racial groups, then the ethnic groups, religious group, political groups, geographic groups, etc., except in those posts I (you) will be slamming and defaming whatever it is that the group stands for. I figure two weeks of this should result in pretty good coverage. Several thousand posts. Anyone looking you up in Google will see nothing but YOU defaming everyone and everything. Just as you have caused for others. I hope you will understand then just what the 'big deal' is. Enjoy your new fame.

This is a post by another classic nut job.

This is a genuine advert, I saw a television programme recently about Nude
Domestic help and have decided I would like one.

So

Female domestic Help required in Reading area, hours by arrangement, age is not important although slim and trim would be nice, no sex expected or required. Hours / renumeration by agreement. Possibly suit outgoing student

Oh yes, I'm late 20's professional male average build average looks.

That's the hilarious thing to me Fred. If that guy decided (and I know he's reading this ;-) to either read up enough on shortwave radio or antennas or anything to do with anything about this hobby and he brought his act here? Oh my lord!

He would have the classic QSL cards from phantom fairy islands where some aborigine was keying a quarter watt from two pie pan plates and as soon as ANYONE in here questioned him...lol...it'd be on baby!!! :-) Ace vs. Batman - it would have been epic.

He'd have fake logs etc. etc. that anyone with common sense in this hobby would know were bullcrap and as soon as it was questioned...."Game On."

Huh, couldn't hear it on AM - I hear pinging on LSB....CW cleans it up more but no voice. I'll keep it here to see if there's a change.

And I noticed at maybe every twenty/thirty second interval there will be a louder ping --- that holds it out slightly longer. Interesting no doubt. But sadly no voice here at my QTH.

I was trying to figure out what "jftfoi" meant. I got it. :-)
I used two upside down pie pans drilled onto the top of my deck 10/13yrs ago for two of my five scanner antennas.They worked fine and never blew off, I did have to replace them after maybe 4/5 yrs. with another set. I checked your thread on the weird signal and the closest I came up with was on http://www.kb9ukd.com/digital/ scroll down to "Mystery HF 3644
- that sounded pretty close.

Yeah, that looks pretty big, but kind of cool too. We only have a 20%

Anyway, I recall that it was larbgai who attacked the chap who was dying

Hmmm, I get the feeling you think anonymouse and matt are really me using fake identities. Hate to disappoint you Gregg but you have some new "fans". Matt seems to be way more vicious than ever I could be! But that's ok as you have really earnt the adulation! I'm surprised you don't have more fans out there! Never mind, with all those fake posts from matt heading out to the various groups, I'm sure you'll have a surfeit of fans soon enough!
> He would have the classic QSL cards from phantom fairy islands where

Never been much of a QSL hunter. I last hunted QSL cards back in the mid to late 70s. That would have been when I had my FRG7. Sold that in mid 78. Didn't have another decent receiver until I bought my FRG7000 sometime in the mid 80s. Now that was a crappy receiver compared to the Frog7. Wasn't long before I upgraded to an FRG7700. Much nicer, at least from a usability point of view. Spends most of its life stored in its original box out in the garage as I later upgraded to the FRG8800.

None of the aboriginals I know are into shortwave radio at all.

No logs! For that matter, I couldn't even tell you where my collection of QSL cards is any more. Could be stored in a box in my other house.
Could have even been tossed out when we moved into this house! The QSL card gathering was a passing fad for me back then. I wasn't overly concerned about "proving" that I had received station x, y or z. It never seemed important. I knew what stations I'd listened to and never felt the need to justify that to anyone. I think the only person who ever saw my collection of QSL cards was my father.

You should experience it on this end.

But with this much electric noise, you can really hear the difference between a wire, the Eavesdropper and the MTA.

I'm clear hear. On http://www.short-wave.info/index.php?freq=14700&timbus=NOW it's showing nothing for 14.700 at this time - pretty nice music though with no interference of any kind.

Sorry to cut out all the obscenities, but would you tell me what he did to YOU? Not what he did to everybody else. What did he do to YOU that makes you hound him every day? Had to be more than just 'belittling' you. Nobody posts day and night for years about someone who only 'belittled' them.

Sheer bluster and flaccid reaction. Those people are here because Republicans give them jobs. Put the employers in jail and the workers will go back home.

Again, anything that involves the slightest bit of sacrifice will never fly in the USA; another sign of our demise as a country.

Well, he attacks most people! He didn't attack that chap with cancer.
That was his troll buddy larbgai who did that! If I cast my mind back to soc.culture.thai however, I do seem to recall nurk attacking a poster whose daughter had died. That particular poster hasn't been seen posting since but it's not surprising given the horrendous attack on him by nurk. I can't for the life of me recall the name but it would be in the usenet archives I'm sure. I know his name wasn't Kramer so it isn't just Kramer that the trolls obsess over. I recall that thread where he was attacking the bereaved poster's final words was way outta line!

For sure, nurk is a classic nut job and you certainly did seem to hit a nerve! I guess he's trying to find a justification for all his trolling!
Well, if you happen to find a link on Google Groups to his tirade on that bereaved poster in sct, post it here. It would be close to a decade ago now. I'm not too good finding anything useful in Google Groups. I seem to find everything but what I'm looking for. Would be especially hard given I can't even remember the chaps name.

Corporations are unconstitutional. They are a perversion. The are Unamerican. The Revolution was fought against the British East India Corporation. They have no yet surrendered.

Corporations have no rights except those granted by the people. The fact that the SCOTUS pretends corporations have God given rights, like natural persons, cannot stand if there's any shred of this republic surviving.

- Corporations are unconstitutional.

The US Courts do not seam to hold that 'opinion'

- They are a perversion.

All Governments are basically 'corporation'
-hence- All Governments are inherently perverted.

Unless they are fucking nuts! I think that is the case here.
If Nurk_fred was a dog, he'd have been put down long ago.
It's like third-stage syphilis. Just completely insane.

He attacks people dying of cancer. He attacks a man whose kid has just died. He attacks everyone who says anything positive about his dream-date. Speaking of which... in every group that he's tried to post, lots of the group's regulars chime in to defend Kramer. Nobody in those groups ever joins in attacking him. Nobody except these same three trolls. If he was so bad, as Nurk says, why don't others continue to side with Nurk? Something doesn't compute.

Yeah, kinda sorta - you know what I mean? I've exchanged emails with him some years back.From my little bit of studying I agree with a lot of what he's speaking about it. These last couple years though - I haven't had the chance to follow him. He is getting just about everything he's speaking about from the Bible if I'm right. He's fascinating to listen to IMO -I have one of his books, he said last night on the show something like " a lot of my listeners tell me ' Steve we love the subjects you speak about- but can you stay away from the bible angle'. " You really can't with what he's talking about though. LOL - I missed the tsunami thing he talked about - but you would (I know I would) be amazed at how connected this guy is, he isn't just talking out of his butt and hoping something sticks. I really believe it isn't going to get better - only worse. But I still have a positive outlook on it because of what I believe - and if by chance I'm wrong....then I lost nothing. Know what I mean?

I could get a strong 5 x 9 signal from that off the back of the array!
The transmitter is only 200 km from here but aimed in the opposite direction. Might overload the front end of my radio though!

WASHINGTON ï¿½ The Homeland Security Department will use unmanned surveillance aircraft and other technological upgrades in its ongoing effort to protect the southern border of the United States.

The department said Wednesday it has obtained Federal Aviation Administration permission to operate unmanned planes along the Texas border and throughout the Gulf Coast region. Customs and Border Protection will base a surveillance drone at the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station in Texas.

Homeland Security also said it is working with the Office of National Drug Control Policy on "Project Roadrunner," a license plate recognition system designed to seek out possible drug traffickers.

Mussolini had a better class of candidate in mind, I'm sure. They have standards to maintain.

With offspring that have such obvious political talents, who can blame

I have no familiarity with that receiver, but, just in case the antenna plate was being used to connect those points together, you might want to connect them together with wires at the same time you attach the clip lead.

With all good wishes,

I live in a community where external antennas are prohibited. But, that log used an external of 80' of wire hidden on the inside of the wooden privacy fence around my patio. I have several hidden externals that do pretty well, particularly with the preamps on the R75. Right now, I'm trying to lay a 100' foot external around the foundation base of my home.

Wow, now THAT will really stop the invasion from Mexico. {sarcasm off}

The only way to stop the invasion is to put at least 50,000 night vision equipped soldiers along the border with shoot to kill orders.
And then we'd still have to round up, at gunpoint, all the invaders currently living in the USA and send them back to Mexico packed like sardines in railroad cars. Of course, none of those treasonous Marxist pieces of shit in "our" so-called federal government would do this because they WANT to replace the USA's freedom and liberty loving White population with a diverse mass of left-leaning Communist-loving 3rd worlders.

Trust me... the Koreans call it a war (both the ROK and the DPRK). BTW, technically, since there was never a treaty, the war never ended. With the DPRK dropping out of the armistice agreement, it technically could go hot again at any time. The logic here is that it won't happen, though, because if the DPRK started something, they would A) lose the resources they seek, and B) Lose. If it weren't for the last general that decided to be insubordinate, they would have lost back in '51. But he just HAD to move on China and brought THAT can of worms on...

You do know that BP does NOT own those stations? They are locally owned by people who buy the gas from the company. Boycotting them doesn't do a damn thing. Do you also know that BP is the only oil company that does NOT do business with Arabs?

Not to knock BP, but they certainly do business with Arabs.

Dave,

9580 comes in like a local in the mornings. 9590 and 6020 are also usually good. 9475 and 9560 usually fair. The morning English broadcasts are pretty easy. R. Australia on any frequency gets much more difficult between 1500 and 2300 UTC, but lately 11660 and 13630 have been making it OK. Between 0100 and 0500, 15515 and 15240 are dependable. Later freqs include 15160, 13690 and 12080 (Brandon). The broadcasts in SE Asian langs are more difficult due to targeting. The 30 minute Indonesian broadcast on 15415 is particularly difficult here in KY.

Mike

You used to be able to listen to them from around 2 in the morning Central time until well after sunup. I think it was 100 KW to "the Pacific". Killer signal.

Do you have plastic gutters? You can lay a wire down inside plastic gutters very neatly.

Not only that, but the gas they are buying most likely didn't COME from BP, either... since all of it goes to the spot market and is bought back by various companies (not to mention that a large number of companies buy their gas from the same batch at the same refineries..)

When they are hiring illegals to build the security fence to keep illegals out, it's unlikely, besides, GW needs them on the ranch.

If they are all legalized, they're going to want more money. A perfectly normal reaction.

That ensures another wave of illegals who will continue to fatten the bottom line for the cheating campaign fund contributing bastards.

I'm surprised these people were fined.

Well, I'm gonna say that that's not quite true. Just saw a day or two ago that BP is partnering with another oil company, bidding on a job in one of the Middle Eastern countries.

Dave ? illegal employers ?
more like "Employers of Illegals"

Dave ? who are paying these people

Nah the Employers don't pay for the Illegals 'to come here' : The Illegal Alien Invaders come here on their own -and- the Employers

Hire the Illegals once they are here.

The Employers are One-Half the Problem [Half the Criminal Activity : So Treat them like the Criminals that they are.] The "Employers of Illegals" are NOT Paying are the related Employment Costs and Income Taxes of their 'employees' : They should be Lock-Up and until these Costs and Taxes are Paid +plus Fined for 'employing' Illegals.
The next time the Employer is 'caught' employing Illegals the Lock-Up Time should be 30 Days; then 90 Days and then a Year +plus all the Costs and Taxes and Fines.

You might want to redirect that anger towards our government for allowing it. The next time you are outside just look at all the single passenger gas guzzlers. People will drive to the corner store if it is more than one block away, so a little introspection would be in order.
Having said that does anyone know if there is a site with propagation data updated according to present conditions?? Under 30MHz.

I agree with a lot of this post RHF but if you closed down these places (ain't gonna happen) that hire these illegals - the problem is solved. If they didn't have companies to run to that are in cahoots with the ones helping them get here etc etc. etc. the problem would be solved. This really is such a simple "problem" to fix that it sounds even funny to talk about it. Now, I'm not talking about the ones who come here and do it right. Bottom line, it isn't going to made right - this country has sold out and we are now/ or in the near future going to be The United States of Canaxico - as Ric Flair would say "If you don't like it, learn to love it, because that's the way it is. Woooooooo!!" :-)

I have to say I agree, that's how I've always felt. But that's too easy Dave. ;-)

<begin rant>

As with all "simple" solutions, there is a factor or two that most don't consider.

It makes sense, on the surface of it, to arrest the employers to stem the tide of illegal immigrants coming in for jobs.

BUT.. one must also consider the consequences of doing this:

1) Important enterprises fold, likely to never return (most notably meat packers and farms), thus negatively affecting vital infrastructure (including availability of food and other commodities).

2) As a direct result of 1, prices rise. One reason is of course supply and demand.

3) Local and federal tax bases are substantially reduced.

4) You have heard this before, and many scoff at it, but it's true: Most US citizens would not do many of these jobs at ANY rate of pay. They are hard work, and not many are willing to do that anymore. When I was young, I worked in the fields (strawberries, sugar beets, potatoes, etc.) The work paid about 80 cents an hour at the time (1968-70). I accepted this pay because it was pretty much what a teenager could get at the time unless you mowed lawns or babysat. At that time, I was the ONLY white kid in the fields. All the others were Mexican or Native American. We had a much better work ethic then.. and nowadays thanks to supposedly well-meaning bureaucrats and social workers, kids can't even do that kind of work anymore (no wonder kids are so damn fat nowadays. Along with being plopped in front of the TV with a video game, even those that WANT to work, can't!)

Nurk_fred is afraid to answer because HE is really the bully here. If there were so many people that his dream date offended, there would be a lot more people running him down.

In the past year there have only been these 2-3 regular trolls. True, he did argue with one or two people in various groups. That's normal behavior in any newsgroup for everyone. But it's only been these really nut-job trolls who repeatedly state that their 'mission' is to cause trouble who have been constantly attacking him during this past year.

So Nurk, what did he do to YOU? I think he did NOT do ANYTHING to YOU. You just use this as an excuse to cause trouble.

I don't doubt the field work, I've never done it, but that has to be somewhat hard. But there were two small companies in Cincinnati within the last eight/ten years (that I know of - I know there have been more).....that EVERYONE KNEW that 100% of the workers were either 1) Mexican and here legally or 2) Mexican and here illegally. The one company employed over 95 assembly line workers and no more than 115 if busy. When the bust went down on the one company - can't remember the stats on the other but nearly as bad - other than the small office staff....only FOUR were legal workers. Now, the owner and small office staff are all american.

The company was put on notice that they were being fined and watched - not only by the FORMER US workers that worked there years ago that I'm sure helped it along but also by the sheriffs department. I knew back in the mid 80's to early 90's seven people that worked there, I sat on the picnic tables and shot the crap with many of them at their lunch breaks at times.

That was a great place IMO to work, I had been inside there, knew a lot of people. Americans LOVED their jobs there BA and they paid relatively good IMO for that type of work. I think the line workers topped out at $15.75...something like that. They were all asked to take big paycuts and their healthcare went through the roof, many couldn't afford it after the paycuts.

He moved part of his assembly plant along with some other schmuck owner of the same scam of a "company" that used to have americans in there, and they BOTH moved parts of whatever they did "down there." Then "little by little" the american workers had to leave ie; forced out IMO - and then the illegals started walking right through the doors.

Now Brenda Ann, that is just a extremely small taste test that I PERSONALLY knew of. Not only did they move parts of their plants down there.....but hey...paid off well for them. Lets not just go to that same well once with this bad boy - lets do it twice and BRING THEM HERE. Lets not just let our men and women lose their jobs because they are going "there".....when they drive down the street and look over to the grassy field where the number of picnic tables have doubled ie; meaning MORE illegals than american workers that used to work there - let them see their replacements sitting out there or in the parking lot filled with nothing but a bunch of old beat up cars....lol...the one plant now runs 24 hrs. a day. Before there was just two shifts, can you say cha ching for somebody? I can just imagine all the "legal" mumbo jumbo paper wise that was passing between that company when they closed the doors for two weeks to get back open, of course they are under a different name now - I guess to make it all legal and shit.

Had to get them new "legal workers with visas over here" that will dissapear like a fart in the wind when they expire and they'll go to company B etc. etc. rinse and spit Ha!

You can hear 15.415 with regularity (depending on your definition)

Hey, Gregg, post some more logs, so we can be amazed at the frequency calibration of your outstanding receiver and antenna.
You started this crap again....

Larbgai is definitely located in NZ and Nurk is in the US. Well, at least one of his iterations is anyway.

And I'm willing to bet that your "easy" R. Australia catch is on 15515, given your mis-qouted frequencies in the past. You took offense to me even posting in your thread, won't even post logs, and call RA's Indonesian broadcast on 19 meters at 0500 UTC "easy". You are a hopeless liar. Just tell folks what your receiver is. Bet you won't, because you'd be laughed at....

I think we are all sock puppets of Larbgai. No one ever talks to him, so he makes lots of sock puppets to make himself feel important. Otherwise he just feel impotent! He thinks that you respond to him when you talk about him. He never realizes that it is him responding to you. I think he never will, either. It's the nature of the disorder.

Whatever professor....lol. If it was a troll as you stated, which it wasn't - it was just a response.....but you bit my top water bait like a big ole' largemouth bass. I can imagine how hard you would have "hit it" if I used my buzzbait. <grin> Damn Mike, it's just shortwave radio. You "literally" made a point when you started back here (I caught it you pot smoking liar) about mentioning my Long Isl. grab on the BCB like it wasn't a big deal. It was to their radio station when I spoke to them and it was when I got my goodies from them. It was to me, I hadn't ever heard them before. <shrug>But I HAVE heard RA on that time and on that freq. - what else am I suppose to say?

See, that's why I don't do much of logs on here, people like you and Eduardo when he was here. I used to all the time. I don't anymore just because of stuff like this, like I said before, I don't have to post a big string of logs to prove I listen to radio. I'll be listening to even more radio and grabbing more stations when my Premium RX shows up here, by the end of July. :-) <smirk>

So respond away because like a real adult, I'll let you have the last word and your last insult, you just can't help it and I know your old friend will pop on in (or your puppets) also...lol...all because you got upset because I spoke the twuth (misspelling on purpose) and you didn't like it. <rolling my eyes> Maybe you can go and post my name all over the internet....lol...I knew you'd liven things up. I won't respond, have at it and flame away because you just can't help it. <Ooomph - set the hook > :-D

He never EVER has anything relevant, on-topic or useful to say! Only need to check back on his posts to see that. That, more than anything else, would be why he feels impotent! He is always in my killfile so I only know he's posting if someone else quotes his prattling!

For a 'stealth' Fence Antenna use 300 Ohm
Twin-Lead as a long thin Loop Antenna.

Build a Nailing Tool to mount the Twin-Lead

Small piece of Wood that is 'notched' to Center the Twin Lead in it; with a Groove to Locate and Center the Nail between the Outer Wires of the Twin-Lead.

"Jig" Nailing Tool for Twin-Lead [End-View]
==== - Side 3/16" ~ 1/4"
== - - - Notch 3/32" ~ 1/8"
>> - - - Center Nail Groove
== - - - Notch
==== - Side [Top View]
======================
======================
====================[<- Center Nail Groove

==========
-note- Centering the Nail is important so that you do not damage the Twin-Lead Wires; and the 'Jig' also helps to keep the Head of the Nail about an 1/8" away from the Wires. The Nails mainly keep the Twin-Lead 'on' {Attached-to} the Fence and the Twin-Lead taught between the Nails. Place the Nails about every 6~/8 Feet and at corners and bends. Some may prefer to use short thin Aluminum Nails over Galvanized Steel Nails;
http://www.buy.com/prod/common-aluminum-nails/q/listingid/88467568/loc/66357/208051796.htm l and others may choose to use Aluminum Roofing Nails with Washers which are a bit to big {thick} for my taste.
http://www.greatnorthernmfg.com/al_roofingnailswithwashers.htm

Matching :
Use a TV 300 Ohm to 75 Ohm Matching Transformer between the Twin-Lead and the RG-6 'Quad' Coax Cable.
http://www.radioshack.com/product/index.jsp?productId=2103912

Connect the Far-End Twin-Lead Wires together so that the Twin Lead forms a very thin Loop Antenna
* Note - Some put a Open/Closed Switch here at the Far-End to be able to switch between the long thin Loop Antenna and/to parallel twin wires {Linear Dipole}. While others put a Switch at the Mid-Point of one of the Wires to be able to switch between the long thin Loop Antenna and/to one long half-folded back wire plus one short wire.

Mount the Twin-Lead toward the top of the Wooden Fence; about 4~5 Feet above the ground.

This is a very 'quiet' Antenna; and you will swear that there is nothing 'there'; until you tune-in a Station and it seams to Pop-Up out of the nothingness.

Anyone have a way of measuring the varying efficiencies of the following? Let's say 5 to 20 MHz frequency range.

This would be the base number for comparison, assign it a one:

a: Straight connection of a random long wire antenna

The others...

b: The same long wire connected through a television (75/300 ohm variety)

c: Same antenna with a 9:1 ratio transformer

I'm assuming everything else remaining the same. I'm interested in the variation, shown ratio wise, between the above. Are there any handy online calculators for this?

Illegal aliens ARE CRIMMINALS!

Queer bashing? in fact of the business, that sounds like doing ''Good Business'' too.

When I was getting those new tires on my old 1983 van last Wednesday, a guy showed up over there, he looked at my van, he said,,, That's a lonnnnng van, I bet it rides good.
I told him, I reckon it rides ok.He said, It will ride even better with those new tires on there.

Nothing unusual about my old 1983 Dodge RV van.It is eighteen feet long plus a few inches from bumper to bumper.There are many thousands of eighteen feet long Dodge and Ford and Chevrolet vans rolling around all over America.You see them everywhere you go.

If you sleep with dogs you wake with fleas.

Same goes for the Louisiana fisherman. He shouldn't have trusted the oil companies.

A subsea blowout preventer should get the same official scrutiny as a nuclear reactor, because there is equal potential for disaster. Why don't they make shear rams with explosives in the cylinders? That would be more "fail-safe" than hydraulics.

it is not a crime to be here undocumented. They are only "illegal" while in the act of crossing the border. The person who hires undocumented workers is, in fact, committing a crime and ergo is illegal.

What do you think, K? Is he crazy or just really fucking stupid? Maybe we've been giving him too much credit thinking he's just nuts. Maybe he is so damn stupid that he actually believes the things he writes. But Jeez, he'd really have to be awful fucking stupid. Almost to the point of drooling down his shirt front. I think he's just fucking nuts. I bet he still wets the bed.

[align=left]Islam is the complete submission and obedience to Allah (God). The name Allah (God) in Islam never refers to Muhammad (pbuh), as many Christians may think; Allah is the personal name of God.

What do Muslims believe about Allah?

1. He is the one God, Who has no partner.
2. Nothing is like Him. He is the Creator, not created, nor a part of His creation.
3. He is All-Powerful, absolutely Just.
4. There is no other entity in the entire universe worthy of worship besides Him.
5. He is First, Last, and Everlasting; He was when nothing was, and will be when nothing else remains.
6. He is the All-Knowing, and All-Merciful,the Supreme, the Sovereign.
7. It is only He Who is capable of granting life to anything.
8. He sent His Messengers (peace be upon them) to guide all of mankind.
9. He sent Muhammad (pbuh) as the last Prophet and Messenger for all mankind.
10. His book is the Holy Qur'an, the only authentic revealed book in the world that has been kept without change.

11. Allah knows what is in our hearts.

These are some of the basic guidelines Muslims follow in their knowledge of God:

1. Eliminate any anthropomorphism (human qualities) from their conception of Allah. His attributes are not like human attributes, despite similar labels or appellations.
2. Have unwavering faith in exactly what Allah and Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) described Allah to be, no more, no less.
3. Eradicate any hope or desire of learning or knowing the modality of His names and attributes.
4. Belief totally in all the names and attributes of Allah;
one cannot believe in some and disbelieve the others.
5. One cannot accept the names of Allah without their associated attributes, i.e. one cannot say He is Al-Hayy - 'The Living' and then say that He is without life.
6. Similarity in names (or meanings) does not imply similarity in what is being described (referents). As a robotics arm differs from a human arm, so the "hand" of Allah is nothing like a human hand, His speech is nothing like human speech, etc.
7. Certain words are ambiguous or vague in their meanings, and thus may be susceptible to misinterpretation. Only those meanings that are in accordance with what is specified by Allah and His Prophet (pbuh) are acceptable.

Cleanliness

Islam places great emphasis on cleanliness, in both its physical and spiritual aspects. On the physical side, Islam requires the Muslim to clean his body, his clothes, his house, and the whole community, and he is rewarded by God for doing so. Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) said, for example:

"Removing any harm from the road is charity (that will be rewarded by Allah)." [Bukhari]

While people generally consider cleanliness a desirable attribute, Islam insists on it , making it an indispensable fundamental of the faith. A muslim is required to to be pure morally and spiritually as well as physically. Through the Qur'an and Sunnah Islam requires the sincere believer to sanitize and purify his entire way of life.

In the Qur'an Allah commends those who are accustomed to cleanliness:

"Allah loves those who turn to Him constantly and He loves those who keep themselves pure and clean." [2: 22]

In Islam the Arabic term for purity is Taharah. Books of Islamic jurisprudence often contain an entire chapter with Taharah as a heading.

Allah orders the believer to be tidy in appearance:

"Keep your clothes clean." [74:4]

The Qur'an insists that the believer maintain a constant state of purity:

"Believers! When you prepare for prayer wash your faces, and your hands (and arms) to the elbows; rub your heads (with water) and (wash) your feet up to the ankles. If you are ritually impure bathe your whole body." [5: 6]

Ritual impurity refers to that resulting from sexual release, menstruation and the first forty days after childbirth. Muslims also use water, not paper or anything else to after eliminating body wastes.

Prophet Muhammad)pbuh) advised the Muslims to appear neat and tidy in private and in public. Once when returning home from battle he advised his army:

"You are soon going to meet your brothers, so tidy your saddles and clothes. Be distinguished in the eyes of the people." [Abu Dawud]

On another occasion he said:

"Don't ever come with your hair and beard disheveled like a devil." [Al-Tirmidhi]

And on another:

"Had I not been afraid of overburdening my community, I would have ordered them to brush their teeth for every prayer." [Bukhari]

Moral hygiene was not ignored, either, for the Prophet (pbuh) encouraged the muslims to make a special prayer upon seeing themselves in the mirror:

"Allah, You have endowed me with a good form; likewise bless me with an immaculate character and forbid my face from touching the Hellfire." [Ahmad]

And modesty in dress, for men as well as for women, assists one in maintaining purity of thought.

Being charitable is a way of purifying one's wealth. A Muslim who does not give charity (Sadaqah) and pay the required annual Zakah, the 2.5% alms-tax, has in effect contaminated his wealth by hoarding that which rightfully belongs to others:

"Of their wealth take alms so that you may purify and sanctify them." [9: 103]

All the laws and injunctions given by Allah and His Prophet (pbuh) are pure; on the other hand, man-made laws suffer from the impurities of human bias and other imperfections. Thus any formal law can only be truly just when it is purified by divine guidance - as elucidated by the Qur'an and the Sunnah - or if it is divinely ordained to begin with - the Shari'ah.

Muslims Contribution To Science

Astronomy

Muslims have always had a special interest in astronomy. The moon and the sun are of vital importance in the daily life of every Muslim. By the moon, Muslims determine the beginning and the end of the months in their lunar calendar. By the sun the Muslims calculate the times for prayer and fasting. It is also by means of astronomy that Muslims can determine the precise direction of the Qiblah, to face the Ka'bah in Makkah, during prayer. The most precise solar calendar, superior to the Julian, is the Jilali, devised under the supervision of Umar Khayyam.

The Qur'an contains many references to astronomy.

"The heavens and the earth were ordered rightly, and were made subservient to man, including the sun, the moon, the stars, and day and night. Every heavenly body moves in an orbit assigned to it by God and never digresses, making the universe an orderly cosmos whose life and existence, diminution and expansion, are totally determined by the Creator." [Qur'an 30:22]

These references, and the injunctions to learn, inspired the early Muslim scholars to study the heavens. They integrated the earlier works of the Indians, Persians and Greeks into a new synthesis. Ptolemy's Almagest (the title as we know it is Arabic) was translated, studied and criticized. Many new stars were discovered, as we see in their Arabic names - Algol, Deneb, Betelgeuse, Rigel, Aldebaran. Astronomical tables were compiled, among them the Toledan tables, which were used by Copernicus, Tycho Brahe and Kepler. Also compiled were almanacs - another Arabic term. Other terms from Arabic are zenith, nadir, albedo, azimuth.

Muslim astronomers were the first to establish observatories, like the one built at Mugharah by Hulagu, the son of Genghis Khan, in Persia, and they invented instruments such as the quadrant and astrolabe, which led to advances not only in astronomy but in oceanic navigation, contributing to the European age of exploration.

Geography

Muslim scholars paid great attention to geography. In fact, the Muslims' great concern for geography originated with their religion. The Qur'an encourages people to travel throughout the earth to see God's signs and patterns everywhere. Islam also requires each Muslim to have at least enough knowledge of geography to know the direction of the Qiblah (the position of the Ka'bah in Makkah) in order to pray five times a day. Muslims were also used to taking long journeys to conduct trade as well as to make the Hajj and spread their religion. The far-flung Islamic empire enabled scholar-explorers to compile large amounts of geographical and climatic information from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Among the most famous names in the field of geography, even in the West, are Ibn Khaldun and Ibn Batuta, renowned for their written accounts of their extensive explorations.

In 1166, Al-Idrisi, the well-known Muslim scholar who served the Sicilian court, produced very accurate maps, including a world map with all the continents and their mountains, rivers and famous cities. Al-Muqdishi was the first geographer to produce accurate maps in color.

It was, moreover, with the help of Muslim navigators and their inventions that Magellan was able to traverse the Cape of Good Hope, and Da Gama and Columbus had Muslim navigators on board their ships.

Humanity

Seeking knowledge is obligatory in Islam for every Muslim, man and woman. The main sources of Islam, the Qur'an and the Sunnah (Prophet Muhammad's traditions), encourage Muslims to seek knowledge and be scholars, since this is the best way for people to know Allah (God), to appreciate His wondrous creations and be thankful for them. Muslims were therefore eager to seek knowledge, both religious and secular, and within a few years of Muhammad's mission, a great civilization sprang up and flourished. The outcome is shown in the spread of Islamic universities; Al-Zaytunah in Tunis, and Al-Azhar in Cairo go back more than 1,000 years and are the oldest existing universities in the world. Indeed, they were the models for the first European universities, such as Bologna, Heidelberg, and the Sorbonne. Even the familiar academic cap and gown originated at Al-Azhar University.

Muslims made great advances in many different fields, such as geography, physics, chemistry, mathematics, medicine, pharmacology, architecture, linguistics and astronomy. Algebra and the Arabic numerals were introduced to the world by Muslim scholars. The astrolabe, the quadrant, and other navigational devices and maps were developed by Muslim scholars and played an important role in world progress, most notably in Europe's age of exploration.

Muslim scholars studied the ancient civilations from Greece and Rome to China and India. The works of Aristotle, Ptolemy, Euclid and others were translated into Arabic. Muslim scholars and scientists then added their own creative ideas, discoveries and inventions, and finally transmitted this new knowledge to Europe, leading directly to the Renaissance. Many scientific and medical treatises, having been translated into Latin, were standard * and reference books as late as the 17th and 18th centuries.

Mathematics

It is interesting to note that Islam so strongly urges mankind to study and explore the universe. For example, the Holy Qur'an states:

"We (Allah) will show you (mankind) Our signs/patterns in the horizons/universe and in yourselves until you are convinced that the revelation is the truth." [Qur'an, 14:53]

This invitation to explore and search made Muslims interested in astronomy, mathematics, chemistry, and the other sciences, and they had a very clear and firm understanding of the correspondences among geometry, mathematics, and astronomy.

The Muslims invented the symbol for zero (The word "cipher" comes from Arabic sifr), and they organized the numbers into the decimal system - base 10. Additionally, they invented the symbol to express an unknown quantity, i.e. variables like x.

The first great Muslim mathematician, Al-Khawarizmi, invented the subject of algebra (al-Jabr), which was further developed by others, most notably Umar Khayyam. Al-Khawarizmi's work, in Latin translation, brought the Arabic numerals along with the mathematics to Europe, through Spain. The word "algorithm" is derived from his name.

Muslim mathematicians excelled also in geometry, as can be seen in their graphic arts, and it was the great Al-Biruni (who excelled also in the fields of natural history, even geology and mineralogy) who established trigonometry as a distinct branch of mathematics. Other Muslim mathematicians made significant progress in number theory.

Medicine

In Islam, the human body is a source of appreciation, as it is created by Almighty Allah (God). How it functions, how to keep it clean and safe, how to prevent diseases from attacking it or cure those diseases, have been important issues for Muslims.

Prophet Muhammad himself urged people to "take medicines for your diseases", as people at that time were reluctant to do so. He also said,

"God created no illness, but established for it a cure, except for old age. When the antidote is applied, the patient will recover with the permission of God."

This was strong motivation to encourage Muslim scientists to explore, develop, and apply empirical laws. Much attention was given to medicine and public health care. The first hospital was built in Baghdad in 706 AC. The Muslims also used camel caravans as mobile hospitals, which moved from place to place.

Since the religion did not forbid it, Muslim scholars used human cadavers to study anatomy and physiology and to help their students understand how the body functions. This empirical study enabled surgery to develop very quickly.
Al-Razi, known in the West as Rhazes, the famous physician and scientist, (d. 932) was one of the greatest physicians in the world in the Middle Ages. He stressed empirical observation and clinical medicine and was unrivaled as a diagnostician. He also wrote a treatise on hygiene in hospitals. Khalaf Abul-Qasim Al-Zahrawi was a very famous surgeon in the eleventh century, known in Europe for his work, Concessio (Kitab al-Tasrif).

Ibn Sina (d. 1037), better known to the West as Avicenna, was perhaps the greatest physician until the modern era. His famous book, Al-Qanun fi al-Tibb, remained a standard *book even in Europe, for over 700 years. Ibn Sina's work is still studied and built upon in the East.

Other significant contributions were made in pharmacology, such as Ibn Sina's Kitab al-Shifa' (Book of Healing), and in public health. Every major city in the Islamic world had a number of excellent hospitals, some of them teaching hospitals, and many of them were specialized for particular diseases, including mental and emotional. The Ottomans were particularly noted for their building of hospitals and for the high level of hygiene practiced in them.

Definition

The word ISLAM has a two-fold meaning: peace, and submission to God. This submission requires a fully conscious and willing effort to submit to the one Almighty God. One must consciously and conscientiously give oneself to the service of Allah. This means to act on what Allah enjoins all of us to do (in the Qur'an) and what His beloved Prophet, Muhammad (pbuh) encouraged us to do in his Sunnah (his lifestyle and sayings personifying the Qur'an).

Once we humble ourselves, rid ourselves of our egoism and submit totally to Allah, and to Him exclusively, in faith and in action, we will surely feel peace in our hearts. Establishing peace in our hearts will bring about peace in our external conduct as well.

Islam is careful to remind us that it not a religion to be paid mere lip service; rather it is an all-encompassing way of life that must be practiced continuously for it to be Islam. The Muslim must practice the five pillars of the religion: the declaration of faith in the oneness of Allah and the prophet hood of Muhammad (pbuh), prayer, fasting the month of Ramadan, alms-tax, and the pilgrimage to Makkah; and believe in the six articles of faith: belief in God, the Holy Books, the prophets, the angels, the Day of Judgment and God's decree, whether for good or ill.

There are other injunctions and commandments which concern virtually all facets of one's personal, family and civic life. These include such matters as diet, clothing, personal hygiene, interpersonal relations, business ethics, responsibilities towards parents, spouse and children, marriage, divorce and inheritance, civil and criminal law, fighting in defense of Islam, relations with non-Muslims, and so much more.

Human Rights

Islam has been from its inception very concerned with issues of human rights. Privacy, freedom, dignity and equality are guaranteed in Islam. The holy Qur'an states clearly:

"There is no compulsion in religion."

And there are no reliable reports to confirm the old accusations that when the Muslim armies were expanding into Asia, Africa and Europe the people were put to the sword if they failed to convert to Islam. The best proof is that not only did the Christians, Jews, Zoroastrians and Hindus in those areas not perish or otherwise disappear, they actually flourished as protected minority communities, and many individuals rose to prominent positions in the arts, sciences, even in government.

The lives, property and privacy of all citizens in an Islamic state are considered sacred, whether or not the person is Muslim. Non-Muslims have freedom of worship and the practice of their religions, including their own family law and religious courts. They are obliged to pay a different tax (Jizyah) instead of the Zakah, and the state is obligated to provide both protection and government services. Before the modern era it was extremely rare to find a state or government anywhere in the world that was as solicitous of its minorities and their civil rights as the Islamic states.

In no other religion did women receive such a degree of legal and moral equality and personal respect. Moreover, racism and tribalism are incompatible with Islam, for the Qur'an speaks of human equality in the following terms:

"Mankind! We created you from a single soul, male and female, and made you into nations and tribes, that you may come to know one another. Truly, the most honored of you in God's sight is the greatest of you in piety."

Jesus

Islam honors all the prophets who were sent to mankind. Muslims respect all prophets in general, but Jesus in particular, because he was one of the prophets who foretold the coming of Muhammad. Muslims, too, await the second coming of Jesus. They consider him one of the greatest of Allah's prophets to mankind. A Muslim does not refer to him simply as "Jesus," but normally adds the phrase "peace be upon him" as a sign of respect.

No other religion in the world respects and dignifies Jesus as Islam does. The Qur'an confirms his virgin birth (a chapter of the Qur'an is entitled "Mary"), and Mary is considered to have been one of the purest women in all creation. The Qur'an describes Jesus' birth as follows:

"Behold!' the Angel said, God has chosen you, and purified you, and chosen you above the women of all nations. Mary, God gives you good news of a word from Him, whose name shall be the Messiah, Jesus son of Mary, honored in this world and in the Hereafter, and one of those brought near to God. He shall speak to the people from his cradle and in maturity, and he shall be of the righteous. She said: "My Lord! How shall I have a son when no man has touched me?' He said: "Even so; God creates what He will. When He decrees a thing, He says to it, 'Be!' and it is." [3:42-47]

Muslims believe that Jesus was born immaculately, and through the same power which had brought Eve to life and Adam into being without a father or a mother.

"Truly, the likeness of Jesus with God is as the likeness of Adam. He created him of dust, and then said to him, 'Be!' and he was." [3:59]

During his prophetic mission, Jesus performed many miracles. The Qur'an tells us that he said:

"I have come to you with a sign from your Lord: I make for you out of clay, as it were, the figure of a bird, and breathe into it and it becomes a bird by God's leave. And I heal the blind, and the lepers, and I raise the dead by God's leave." [3:49]

Muhammad and Jesus, as well as the other prophets, were sent to confirm the belief in one God. This is referred to in the Qur'an where Jesus is reported as saying that he came:

"To attest the law which was before me, and to make lawful to you part of what was forbidden you; I have come to you with a sign from your Lord, so fear God and obey me." [3:50]

Prophet Muhammad emphasized the importance of Jesus by saying:

"Whoever believes there is no god but Allah, alone without partner, that Muhammad is His messenger, that Jesus is a servant and messenger of God, His word breathed into Mary and a spirit emanating from Him, and that Paradise and Hell are true, shall be received by God into Heaven. [Bukhari]

Knowledge

Islam urges people to read and learn on every occasion. The verses of the Qur'an command, advise, warn, and encourage people to observe the phenomena of nature, the succession of day and night, the movements of stars, the sun, moon, and other heavenly bodies. Muslims are urged to look into everything in the universe, to travel, investigate, explore and understand them, the better to appreciate and be thankful for all the wonders and beauty of God's creations. The first revelation to Muhammad showed how much Islam cares about knowledge.

"Read, in the name of your Lord, Who created..." [96:1]

Learning is obligatory for both men and women. Moreover, education is not restricted to religious issues; it includes all fields of knowledge, including biology, physics, and technology. Scholars have the highest status in Islam, second only to that accorded to prophets.

Almost from the very beginnings of the Islamic state Muslims began to study and to master a number of fields of so-called secular learning, beginning with linguistics and architecture, but very quickly extending to mathematics, physics, astronomy, geography, medicine, chemistry and philosophy. They translated and synthesized the known works of the ancient world, from Greece, Persia, India, even China. Before long they were criticizing, improving and expanding on that knowledge. Centuries before the European Renaissance there were Muslim ?Rennaissance? men, men who were simultaneously explorers, scientists, philosophers, physicians and poets, like Ibn Sina (Avicenna), Umar Khayyam, and others.

Main Pillars

1. Shahadah

The first pillar of Islam is that a Muslim believe and declare his faith by saying the Shahadah (lit. 'witness'), also known as the Kalimah:

La ilaha ila Allah; Muhammadur-rasul Allah. 'There is no god but Allah; Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah.'

This declaration contains two parts. The first part refers to God Almighty, the Creator of everything, the Lord of the Worlds; the second part refers to the Messenger, Muhammad (pbuh) a prophet and a human being, who received the revelation through the Archangel Gabriel, and taught it to mankind.

By sincerely uttering the Shahadah the Muslim acknowledges Allah as the sole Creator of all, and the Supreme Authority over everything and everyone in the universe. Consequently the Muslim closes his/her heart and mind to loyalty, devotion and obedience to, trust in, reliance on, and worship of anything or anyone other than Allah. This rejection is not confined merely to pagan gods and goddesses of wood and stone and created by human hands and imaginations; this rejection must extend to all other conceptions, superstitions, ideologies, ways of life, and authority figures that claim supreme devotion, loyalty, trust, love, obedience or worship. This entails, for example, the rejection of belief in such common things as astrology, palm reading, good luck charms, fortune-telling and psychic readings, in addition to praying at shrines or graves of "saints", asking the dead souls to intercede for them with Allah. There are no intercessors in Islam, nor any class of clergy as such; a Muslim prays directly and exclusively to Allah.

Belief in the prophet hood of Muhammad (pbuh) entails belief in the guidance brought by him and contained in his Sunnah (traditions of his sayings and actions), and demands of the Muslim the intention to follow his guidance faithfully. Muhammad (pbuh) was also a human being, a man with feelings and emotions, who ate, drank and slept, and was born and died, like other men. He had a pure and upright nature, extraordinary righteousness, and an unwavering faith in Allah and commitment to Islam, but he was not divine. Muslims do not pray to him, not even as an intercessor, and Muslims abhor the terms "Mohamedan" and "Mohamedanism".

2. Salah (Prayer)

Prayer (Salah), in the sense of worship, is the second pillar of Islam. Prayer is obligatory and must be performed five times a day. These five times are dawn (Fajr), immediately after noon (Dhuhr), mid-afternoon ('Asr), sunset (Maghrib), and early night (Isha'). Ritual cleanliness and ablution are required before prayer, as are clean clothes and location, and the removal of shoes. One may pray individually or communally, at home, outside, virtually any clean place, as well as in a mosque, though the latter is preferred. Special is the Friday noon prayer, called Jum'ah. It, too, is obligatory and is to be done in a mosque, in congregation. It is accompanied by a sermon (Khutbah), and it replaces the normal Dhuhr prayer.

There is no hierarchical clerical authority in Islam, no priests or ministers. Prayers are led by any learned person who knows the Qur'an and is chosen by the congregation. He (or she, if the congregation is all women) is called the imam. There is also no minimum number of congregates required to hold communal prayers. Prayer consists of verses from the Qur'an and other prayers, accompanied by various bodily postures - standing, bowing, prostrating and sitting. They are said in Arabic, the language of the revelation, though personal supplications (Du'ah) can be offered in one's own language. Worshippers face the Qiblah, the direction of the Ka'bah in the city of Makkah.

The significance of prayer lies in one's maintaining a continuous link to God five times a day, which helps the worshipper avoid misdeeds if he/she performs the prayers sincerely. In addition it promotes discipline, God-consciousness and placing one's trust in Allah alone, and the importance of striving for the Hereafter. When performed in congregation it also provides a strong sense of community, equality and brotherhood/sisterhood.

3. Sawm (Fasting)

The fourth pillar of Islam is fasting. Allah prescribes daily fasting for all able, adult Muslims during the whole of the month of Ramadan, the ninth month of the lunar calendar, beginning with the sighting of the new moon. Exempted from the fast are the very old and the insane. On the physical side, fasting is from first light of dawn until sundown, abstaining from food, drink, and sexual relations. On the moral, behavioral side, one must abstain from lying, malicious gossip, quarreling and trivial nonsense.

Those who are sick, elderly, or on a journey, and women who are menstruating, pregnant, or nursing are permitted to break the fast, but must make up an equal number of days later in the year. If physically unable to do so, they must feed a needy person for each day missed. Children begin to fast (and to observe the prayers) from puberty, although many start earlier.

Although fasting is beneficial to the health, it is regarded principally as a method of self-purification. By cutting oneself off from worldly pleasures and comforts, even for a short time, the fasting person gains true sympathy for those who go hungry regularly, and achieves growth in his spiritual life, learning discipline, self-restraint, patience and flexibility.

In addition to the fast proper, one is encouraged to read the entire Qur'an. In addition, special prayers, called Tarawih, are held in the mosque every night of the month, during which a whole section of the Qur'an (Juz') is recited, so that by the end of the month the entire Qur'an has been completed. These are done in remembrance of the fact that the revelation of the Qur'an to Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) was begun during Ramadan.

During the last ten days - though the exact day is never known and may not even be the same every year - occurs the Night of Power (Laylat al-Qadr). To spend that night in worship is alent to a thousand months of worship, i.e. Allah's reward for it is very great.

On the first day of the following month, after another new moon has been sighted, a special celebration is made, called 'Id al-Fitr. A quantity of staple food is donated to the poor (Zakat al-Fitr), everyone has bathed and put on their best, preferably new, clothes, and communal prayers are held in the early morning, followed by feasting and visiting relatives and friends.

There are other fast days throughout the year. Muslims are encouraged to fast six days in Shawwal, the month following Ramadan, Mondays and Thursdays, and the ninth and tenth, or tenth and eleventh of Muharram, the first month of the year. The tenth day, called Ashurah, is also a fast day for the Jews (Yom Kippur), and Allah commanded the Muslims to fast two days to distinguish themselves from the People of the Book.

While fasting per se is encouraged, constant fasting, as well as monasticism, celibacy, and otherwise retreating from the real world, are condemned in Islam. Fasting on the two festival days, 'Id al-Fitr and 'Id al-Adha, the feast of the Hajj, is strictly forbidden.

4. Zakah

The third pillar of Islam is the alms-tax (Zakah). It is a tax on wealth, payable on various categories of property, notably savings and investments, produce, inventory of goods, salable crops and cattle, and precious *ls, and is to be used for the various categories of distribution specified by Islamic law. It is also an act of purification through sharing what one has with others.

The rationale behind this is that Muslims believe that everything belongs to God, and wealth is held by man as a trust. This trust must be discharged, moreover, as instructed by God, as that portion of our wealth legally belongs to other people and must be given to them. If we refuse and hoard this wealth, it is considered impure and unclean. If, for example one were to use that wealth for charity or to finance one's pilgrimage to Makkah, those acts would also be impure, invalid, and of course unrewarded. Allah says:

"Of their wealth, take alms so you may purify and sanctify them." [9:103]

The word Zakah means purification and growth. Our possessions are purified by setting aside that portion of it for those in need. Each Muslim calculates his or her own Zakah individually.

For most purposes this involves the payment each year of 2.5% of one's capital, provided that this capital reaches a certain minimum amount that which is not consumed by its owner. A generous person can pay more than this amount, though it is treated and rewarded as voluntary charity (Sadaqah). This amount of money is provided to bridge the gap between the rich and the poor, and can be used in many useful projects for the welfare of the community.

Historically the pillar of Zakah became mandatory on Muslims form the second year after the Hijrah, 622 C.E. It is mentioned more than thirty times in the Qur'an, usually in the same breath as Salah. So important is this pillar that one is not considered a part of the Islamic brotherhood if one ignores this obligation.

5. Hajj

The fifth pillar of Islam is to make a pilgrimage (Hajj) to Makkah, in Saudi Arabia, at least once in one's lifetime. This pillar is obligatory for every Muslim, male or female, provided that he/she is physically and financially able to do so. Prerequisites for performing the Hajj are to be a Muslim, to be free, to be an adult or mature enough, to be of sound mind, and to have the ability to afford the journey and maintain one's dependents back home for the duration. The reward for the Hajj is nothing less than Paradise.

The Hajj is the ultimate form of worship, as it involves the spirit of all the other rituals and demands of the believer great sacrifice. On this unique occasion, nearly two million Muslims from all over the globe meet one another in a given year. Regardless of the season, pilgrims wear special clothes (Ihram) - two, very simple, unsewn white garments - which strips away all distinctions of wealth, status, class and culture; all stand together and equal before Allah (God).

The rites of Hajj, which go back to the time of Prophet Abraham who built the Ka'bah, are observed over five or six days, beginning on the eighth day of the last month of the year, named Dhul-Hijjah (pilgrimage). These rites include circumambulating the Ka'bah (Tawwaf), and going between the mountains of Safa and Marwah, as Hajjar (Abraham's wife) did during her search for water for her son Isma'il. Then the pilgrims stand together on the wide plain of Arafah and join in prayers for God's forgiveness, in what is often thought of as a preview of the Last Judgment. The pilgrims also cast stones at a stone pillar which represents Satan. The pilgrimage ends with a festival, called 'Id al-Adha, which is celebrated with prayers, the sacrifice of an animal, and the exchange of greetings and gifts in Muslim communities everywhere.

Muhammad

Muhammad (pbuh) was an illiterate but wise and well-respected man who was born in Makkah in the year 570 C.E., at a time when Christianity was not yet fully established in Europe. His first years were marked by the deaths of his parents. Since his father died before his birth, his uncle, Abu Talib, from the respected tribe of Quraysh, raised him. As Muhammad (pbuh) grew up, he became known for his truthfulness, generosity and sincerity, so that he was sought after for his ability to arbitrate in disputes. His reputation and personal qualities also led to his marriage, at the age of twenty-five, to Khadijah, a widow whom he had assisted in business. Thenceforth, he became an important and trusted citizen of Makkah. Historians describe him as calm and meditative.

Muhammad (pbuh) never felt fully content to be part of a society whose values he considered to be devoid of true religious significance. It became his habit to retreat from time to time to the cave of Hira', to meditate near the summit of Jabal al-Nur, the "Mountain of Light", near Makkah.

At the age of 40, while engaged in one such meditative retreat, Muhammad (pbuh) received his first revelation from God through the Angel Gabriel. This revelation, which continued for twenty-three years, is known as the Qur'an, the faithful recording of the entire revelation of God. The first revelation read:

"Recite: In the name of your Lord Who created man from a clot (of blood). Recite: Your Lord is Most Noble, Who taught by the pen, taught man what he did not know." [96:1-5]
It was this reality that he gradually and steadily came to learn and believe, until he fully realized that it is the truth.

His first convert was Khadijah, whose support and companionship provided necessary reassurance and strength. He also won the support of some of his relatives and friends. Three basic themes of the early message were the majesty of the one, unique God, the futility of idol worship, the threat of judgment, and the necessity of faith, compassion and morality in human affairs. All these themes represented an attack on the crass materialism and idolatry prevalent in Makkah at the time. So when he began to proclaim the message to others the Makkans rejected him. He and his small group of followers suffered bitter persecution, which grew so fierce that in the year 622 C.E., God gave them the command to emigrate. This event, the Hijrah (migration), in which they left Makkah for the city of Madinah, some 260 miles to the north, marked the beginning of a new era and thus the beginning of the Muslim calendar. During his suffering, Muhammad (pbuh) drew comfort from the knowledge revealed to him about other prophets, such as Abraham, Joseph, and Moses, each of whom had also been persecuted and tested.

After several years and some significant battles, the Prophet and his followers were able to return to Makkah, where they forgave their enemies and established Islam definitively. By the time the Prophet died, at the age of 63, the greater part of Arabia had accepted Islam, and within a century of his death, Islam had spread as far west as Spain and as far east as China. It was clear that the message was not limited to Arabs; it was for the whole of humanity.

The Prophet's sayings (Hadith), are also believed to be revelation. The number of sayings collected by his followers and scholars is about 10,000. Some typical examples of his sayings are as follows:

"To pursue knowledge is obligatory on every believing (man and woman)." [Ibn Majah]

"Removing a harmful thing from the road is charity." [Bukhari, Muslim]
"Those who do not show tenderness and love cannot expect to have tenderness shown to them." [Bukhari]

"Adore Allah (God) as though you see Him; even if you do not see Him, He nonetheless sees you." {Bukhari, Muslim]

Although Muhammad is deeply loved, revered and emulated by Muslims as God's final messenger, he is not an object of worship.

Women

At a time when the rest of the world, from Greece and Rome to India and China, considered women as no better than children or even slaves, with no rights whatsoever, Islam acknowledged women's equality with men in a great many respects. The Qur'an states:

"And among His signs is this: that He created mates for you form yourselves that you may find rest, peace of mind in them, and He ordained between you love and mercy. Lo, herein indeed are signs for people who reflect." [30:21]

Prophet Muhammad said:

"The most perfect in faith amongst believers is he who is best in manners and kindest to his wife." [Abu Dawud]

Muslims believe that Adam and Eve were created from the same soul. Both were equally guilty of their sin and fall from grace, and both were forgiven by Allah. Many women in Islam have had high status; consider the fact that the first person to convert to Islam was Khadijah, the wife of Muhammad, whom he both loved and respected. His favorite wife after Khadijah's death, Aeisha, became renowned as a scholar and one of the greatest sources of Hadith literature. Many of the female Companions accomplished great deeds and achieved fame, and throughout Islamic history there have been famous and influential scholars, jurists and mystics.

With regard to education, both women and men have the same rights and obligations. This is clear in Prophet Muhammad's saying:

"Seeking knowledge is mandatory for every believer." [Ibn Majah]

This implies men and women.
A woman is to be treated as God has endowed her, with rights, such as to be treated as an individual, with the right to own and dispose of her own property and earnings, enter into contracts, even after marriage. She has the right to be educated and to work outside the home if she so chooses. She has the right to inherit from her father, mother, and husband. A very interesting point to note is that in Islam, unlike any other religion, a woman can be an imam, a leader of communal prayer, for a group of women.

A Muslim woman also has obligations. All the laws and regulations pertaining to prayer, fasting, charity, pilgrimage, doing good deeds, etc., apply to women, albeit with minor differences having mainly to do with female physiology.

Before marriage, a woman has the right to choose her husband. Islamic law is very strict regarding the necessity of having the woman's consent for marriage. A marriage dowry (money) is given by the groom to the bride for her own personal use. She keeps her own family name, rather than taking her husband's. As a wife, a woman has the right to be supported by her husband even if she is already rich. She also has the right to seek divorce and custody of young children. She does not return the dowry, except in a few unusual situations.

Despite the fact that in many places and times Muslim communities have not always adhered to all or even many of the foregoing in practice, the ideal has been there for 1400 years, while virtually all other major civilizations did not begin to address these issues or change their negative attitudes until the 19th and 20th centuries, and there are still many contemporary civilizations which have yet to do so.

Other Religions

Islam is the religion of all prophets. Muslims believe that all the prophets were sent to their respective peoples from God (Allah). They all had the same mission and message - guiding people to the right path.

The three revealed, monotheistic religions, Islam, Christianity, and Judaism, go back to Abraham. The prophets of these religions were directly descended from him - Moses, Jesus and others from Isaac, but Muhammad from Isma?il. It was Prophet Abraham who had established the settlement which today is the city of Makkah, and with his son Isma?il built the Ka?bah, which Muslims all over the world face when they pray.

Christians and Jews hold a special place in Islam. They are called the People of the Book (Ahl al-Kitab), since the original Torah and Gospel were also divinely revealed and they shared in the prophetic tradition. Islamic states have nearly always shown their religious minorities tolerance and respect and those communities flourished under Islamic rule. God says:

"...[T]hose who believe (in the message of Islam), and the Jews, the Sabaeans, and the Christians - all those who believe in Allah and the Last Day, and act righteously - no fear shall come upon them..." [5:69]

Setting up the Islamic state in Madinah, Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) further warned:

"Whoever oppresses any Dhimmi (non-Muslim citizen of the Islamic state), I shall be his prosecutor on the Day of Judgment."

In setting up the Islamic state, Prophet Muhammad made it inclusive of the Arabian Jews and Christians. Their persons, properties, churches and synagogues were protected, freedom of worship was guaranteed, and they controlled their own community affairs with their own civil and religious laws and courts. For most of the first century of the Islamic state, in fact, the majority of the citizens were Christians, enjoying peace and liberty such as they had not had even under Christian Rome or Byzantium.

The Jews, from the very beginning in Madinah, and later everywhere else, were lifted from the burden of being clients of individual Arab tribes to being citizens of the state, thus freeing them to focus on their Jewishness. When the Islamic state expanded outside Arabia the Jews of other lands were treated for the first time as liberated citizens. Judaism flourished as never before, with Jews even serving in Muslim armies and administrations while their culture bloomed in the arts, sciences, medicine and philosophy. This knowledge they transmitted to their brethren in the hostile climate of Christian Europe. Even Jewish mysticism originated under the influence of sufism and spread to northern Europe.

When Islam reached Persia the concept of People of the Book was extended to the Zoroastrians as well. Later, when the Muslims conquered parts of India and encountered Buddhists and Hindus, who appeared to worship idols, the question was referred to the ulema (council of scholars), who judged that even they could have the same protected status as the Jews and Christians, so long as they did not fight Islam and they paid the Jizyah tax.

Peace

"Peace" is the most common word on a Muslim's tongue. Whenever two people meet, they exchange greetings, wishing each other peace: "Peace be upon you." But peace cannot prevail except through justice. Since the concept of justice may differ from one man to another, or from one society to another, Muslims believe that real justice is that which is specified by Allah (God).

Islam permits fighting in self-defense, in defense of the religion, or by those who have been expelled forcibly from their homes. At the same time, Islam requires one to treat one's enemy mercifully. It lays down strict rules of combat which include prohibitions against harming civilians and against destroying crops, trees, and livestock. Islam also requires that if an enemy declares his desire to end hostilities and seek peace, the Muslims must do the same.

The concept of Jihad (struggling in the cause of Allah) is stated in the Qur'an. Allah said: "Fight in the cause of God those who fight you, but do not transgress limits. God does not love transgressors." [2:19] Jihad is never to be waged to force anybody to choose a particular religion. On the contrary, it is to waged to protect his right to choose freely. Therefore, if there is a force in the world that tries to prevent a person from practicing this right, Jihad may lead to fighting the force that is trying to prevent him from exercising free will.

Relevance

Since Islam is the last religion revealed by Allah, it possesses some elements that make it unique. One of these is its relevance for human beings regardless of place and time.

This means that Islam - submission to God - is a comprehensive institution which includes all the guidelines necessary for all aspects of life. Therefore, the best way to understand Islam is to look at it as more than a religion - as a complete way of life. In other words, it is a system which regulates every aspect of life, dealing with all issues - social, economic, educational, judicial, health, and even military. Thus, it is suitable for all human beings and for all times, since it is the final religion. Islamic law aims to achieve five goals for human beings in life: protecting the religion, protecting one's self, protecting one's possessions, protecting one's mind, and protecting one's offspring.

Therefore, God (Allah) decided on two main domains of law:

1. If the domain always requires change and progress, Allah legislated comprehensive yet flexible rules and gave people the chance to create and develop the necessary laws to satisfy the specific needs of a certain period of time. For example, in the rule of consultation (Shura), Allah decided that it should be the general rule for any government; however, its form and style are left open for people to choose and decide according to their needs.

2. If the domain does not require or lend itself to change or progress, Allah legislated fixed and detailed laws that govern all issues related to a specific area. Thus, there is no way for man to change or develop those laws, which were made for the welfare of all mankind. For example, the area of worshipping God contains fixed details which cannot be changed at all. These regard prayer, fasting, making pilgrimage, etc. Another example is in family matters, such as the laws of marriage, divorce, and inheritance.

To show how Islam cares for the environment, one can cite the many laws that protect the environment. About fourteen hundred years ago. Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) said:

"The world is green and beautiful, and Allah has appointed you as His stewards over it. He sees how you acquit yourselves."

Muhammad showed how important plants and trees are by saying: "Whoever plants a tree and looks after it with care until it matures and becomes productive will be rewarded in the Hereafter." Even in the territory of an enemy, Islam's care for plants, animals, and trees is profound. Abu Bakr, the first Caliph, or successor, to Muhammad (pbuh), instructed his troops that he was sending into battle not to cut down any trees or kill any animals except for food.

These are but a few examples of how Islam remains relevant in the modern world.

Sources

?The ultimate manifestation of God's grace for man, the ultimate wisdom, and the ultimate beauty of expression: in short, the word of God.? This is how the German scholar, Muhammad Asad, once described the Qur'an. If one were to ask any Muslim to depict it, most likely they would offer similar words. The Qur'an, to the Muslim, is the irrefutable, inimitable Word of God. It was revealed by God Almighty, through the instrument of Prophet Muhammad (pbuh). The Prophet (pbuh) himself had no role in authoring the Qur'an, he was merely a human secretary, repeating the dictates of the Divine Creator:

"He (Muhammad) does not speak of his own desire. It is no less than an Inspiration sent down to him." [53:3-4]

The Qur'an was revealed in Arabic, to Prophet Muhammad (pbuh), over a period of twenty-three years. It is composed in a style so unique, that it cannot be deemed either poetry or prose, but somehow a mixture of both. The Qur'an is imimitable; it cannot be simulated or copied, and God Almighty challenges mankind to pursue such an endeavor if he thinks he can:

"Or do they say he forged it? Say: Bring then a chapter like unto it, and call (to your aid) anyone you can, beside God, if it be you speak the truth." [10:38].

The Qur'an's language is indeed sublime, its recitation moving, as one non-Muslim scholar noted, it was like ?the cadence of my heartbeat?. Due to its unique style of language, the Qur'an is not only highly readable, but also relatively easy to remember. This latter aspect has played an important role not only in the Qur'an's preservation, but in the spiritual life of Muslims as well. God Himself declares,

"And We have indeed made the Qur'an easy to understand and remember; then is there anyone that will receive admonition?" [54:17]

One of the most important characteristics of the Qur'an is that it remains today, the only holy book which has never changed; it has remained free from any and all adulterations. Sir William Muir noted, "There is probably in the world no other book which has remained (fourteen) centuries with so pure a *." The Qur'an was written down during the lifetime and under the supervision of the Prophet, who himself was illiterate, and it was canonized shortly after his death by a rigorous method which scrutinized both written and oral traditions. Thus its authenticity is unblemished, and is its preservation is seen as the fulfillment of God's promise:

"We have, without doubt, sent down the Message, and We will assuredly guard it from corruption." [15:9]

The Qur'an is a book which provides the human being the spiritual and intellectual nourishment he/she craves. Its major themes include the oneness of God, the purpose of human existence, faith and God-consciousness, the Hereafter and its significance. The Qur'an also lays a heavy emphasis upon reason and understanding. In these spheres of human understanding, the Qur'an goes beyond just satisfying the human intellect; it causes one to reflect on implications. There are Qur'anic challenges and prophecies. One of the most exciting fields in recent years has been the discovery that, of the significant amount of scientific information in the Qur'an, including the event of the Big Bang, embryological data, and other information concerning astronomy biology, etc., there is not a single statement that has not been borne out by modern discoveries In short, the Qur'an fulfills the heart, the soul, and the mind.

Perhaps the best deion of the Qur'an was given by Ali, the cousin of Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) when he expounded upon it as,

"The Book of God. In it is the record of what was before you, the judgment of what is among you, and the prophecies of what will come after you. It is decisive, not a case for levity. Whoever is a tryant and ignores the Qur'an will be destroyed by God. Whoever seeks guidance from other than it will be misguided. The Qur'an is the unbreakable bond of connection with God; it is the remembrance full of wisdom and the straight path. The Qur'an does not become distorted by tongues. nor can it be deviated by caprices; it never dulls from repeated study; scholars will always want more of it. The wonders of the Qur'an are never ending. Whoever speaks from it will speak the truth, whoever rules with it will be just, and whoever holds fast to it will be guided to the straight path." [Al-Tirmidhi]

Sunnah

The term Sunnah comes from the root word sanna, which means to pave the way or make a path easily passable, such that it becomes a commonly followed way by everyone afterwards. Thus sunnah can be used to describe a street or road or path on which people, animals, and cars travel. Additionally, it can apply to a prophetic way, i.e. the law that they brought and taught as an explanation or further clarification of a divinely revealed book. Normally, the prophetic way includes references to his sayings, actions, physical features and character traits.

From the Islamic standpoint, Sunnah refers to anything narrated or related about the Prophet Muhammad (pbuh), authentically traced to him regarding his speech, actions, traits, and silent approvals, before and after the revelation.

Each narration is composed of two parts: the isnad and the matn. The isnad refers to a chain of people who narrated a paricular narration. The matn is the actual * of the narration. The isnad must comprise upright and sincere individuals whose integrity is unquestionable.

The Speech of Prophet Muhammad (pbuh)

The speech of Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) refers to his sayings. For example, he said:

"Actions are judged by their intentions; everyone will be rewarded according to his/her intention. So whoever migrates for the sake of Allah and His Prophet then his migration will be noted as a migration for the sake of Allah and His Prophet. Conversely, one who migrates only to obtain something worldly or to marry a woman, then his migration will be worth what he had inteded.? [Bukhari]. The Prophet (pbuh) also said: ?Whoever believes in Allah and the Last Day, should say something good or keep quiet.

The above two accounts clearly show that the Prophet (pbuh) spoke these words. Consequently, these are known as his speech.

The Actions of Prophet Muhammad (pbuh)

His actions pertain to anything he did, as authentically reported by the Sahabah (Companions). For instance, Hudhayfah reported that whenever the Prophet (pbuh) got up at night, he would clean his teeth with a tooth-stick. Also A'ishah reported that the Prophet (pbuh) loved to do everything starting with the right side - putting on shoes, walking, cleaning himself, and in all his affairs generally.

The Silent Approvals of Prophet Muhammad (pbuh)

His silent approvals on different issues meant his not opposing or minding what he saw, heard or knew of the actions or sayings of his Companions. On one occasion, for example, the Prophet (pbuh) learned of actions of some of his Companions from other Companions. Soon after the battle of Khandaq, Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) gave the order to the Companions to move quickly to surround the tribe of Banu Quraydah, encouraging them to hurry so that perhaps they would pray 'Asr (the late afternoon prayer) there. Some of the Companions of the Prophet (pbuh) responded immediately and left without praying 'Asr. They arrived after sunset, pitched camp and prayed 'Asr- after sunset. At the same time another group of Companions formulated their judgment differently. They thought that the Prophet (pbuh) was merely encouraging them to hasten to their destination, rather than to delay 'Asr until after sunset. Consequently, they decided to stay in Madinah until they had prayed 'Asr. Immediately thereafter, they hastened towards the tribe of Banu Quraydhah. When the Prophet (pbuh) was told of how each group responded differently to his announcement, he (pbuh) affirmed both judgments.

Physical and Moral Traits of Prophet Muhammad (pbuh)

Everything authentically narrated concerning the Prophet's complexion and the rest of his physical features is also included in the definition of sunnah. Umm Ma'bad described what she saw of the great Prophet (pbuh). She said:

"I saw a man, his face radiant with a bright glow, not too thin or too fat, elegant and handsome. His eyes had a deep black hue with long eyelashes. His voice was pleasant and his neck long. He had a thick beard. His long black eyebrows were beautifully arched and connected to each other. In silence, he remained dignified, commanding utmost awe and respect. When he spoke, his speech was brilliant. Of all people he was the most handsome and the most pleasant, even when approaching from a distance. In person, he was unique and most admirable. Graced with eloquent logic, his speech was moderate. His logical arguments were well organized as though they were a string of gems. He was not too tall or too short, but exactly in between. Among three, he appeared the most radiant and most vibrant. He had companions who affectionately honored him. When he spoke, they listened to him attentively. When he gave orders, they were quick to execute them. They rallied around him guarding him. He never frowned or spoke frivolously." [Hakim]

Along with his physical features, his Companions also described his habits and behavior with people. Once Anas reported:

"I served the Prophet of Allah (pbuh) for ten years. Never once did he so much as express any bit of displeasure nor did he ever ask 'Why did you do it?' for something I did or 'Why didn't you do it?' for something I didn't do."

From the above we can clearly see that when the term sunnah appears in a general con* refering to Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) it comprises anything narrated about the Prophet (pbuh) and authentically traced to him. Once a Muslim learns of the authenticity of any narration, he/she is obliged to follow and obey it accordingly. Such obedience is mandated by Allah as He declares

"...and obey Allah and His Prophet and do not turn away when you hear (him speak)." [8:20]

At times, some Muslims are perplexed when people say that sunnah is something only recommended and is not mandatory. Thus they conclude that we are only required to follow the Qur'an and not the Sunnah. Such an argument results from a gross misunderstanding. Scholars of Islamic jurisprudence use the term sunnah to denote what is authentically established of Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) in deeds which were not subsequently made mandatory by Allah.

They further hold that this includes any saying of Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) where he encourages Muslims to do a particular task and compliments those who imbibe such attributes. Thus to them, the term sunnah denotes what is authentically established of Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) in deeds which he did voluntarily and which were not subsequently made mandatory by Allah. They further hold that this includes any saying of Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) where he encourages Muslims to do a particular task and compliments those who imbibe such attributes. Thus to them, the term sunnah refers to what is "recommended" and is not mandatory (fard or wajib).

From the above, we can clearly see that the term sunnah takes on different meanings when used by different Islamic disciplines.

Tolerance

Freedom of belief is guaranteed in Islam. It should be very clear that Islam tolerates not only other faiths but even its enemies. This is stated clearly in the Qur'an:

"God forbids you not with regard to those who fight you not for (your) faith, nor drive you out of your homes, from dealing kindly and justly with them, for God loves those who are just." [60:8]

It is one function of Islamic law to protect the privileged status of minorities, and this is why non-Muslim places of worship have flourished all over the Islamic world. Islamic law also permits non-Muslim minorities to set up their own courts to implement family laws drawn up by the minorities themselves and to govern their own affairs.

History provides many examples of Muslim tolerance towards other faiths. When the great leader and second Caliph, Umar, entered Jerusalem in the year 634, Islam guaranteed freedom of worship to all religious communities in the city. In fact, so careful was Umar in setting an example for his people that he not only went to a church to pray, he prayed outside in the courtyard, lest his followers after his death be tempted to convert the church into a mosque.

Islam teaches that the closest to Allah and the most beloved of Allah are those who are the best in piety. Thus all people, male and female, and regardless of race, color, nationality or ethnicity, are considered and treated as equal before Allah and before the law. This concept of tolerance did not reach the West even in theory until the 18th century, and in practice not until the 20th century.

Universality

In the Qur'an, Allah says:

"We have sent you (Muhammad) as a mercy for all nations." [21:107]

Thus Islam is not restricted to any particular race or nation, as many other religions are, but is universal, meaning that its message applies to all humanity, at all times, in all places.

Since Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) was the last prophet and messenger, his message applies to all future generations. All previous prophets, from Adam, Noah and Abraham to Moses and Jesus, were also Muslims:

"Not a single messenger did We send before you without this inspiration sent by Us to him that there is no god but I, therefore worship and serve Me." [21:25]

Since the Qur'an is the final testament, with every word and every letter unadulterated and unchanged, and protected by Allah from any change or tampering, it is the final revelation, and no other law will ever supersede it.

It applies, moreover, to every aspect of one's daily life, including personal, social, legal, economic, political, even military. Furthermore, Islam affects every part of the individual - physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual. [/align]

Liberty Net: June 19, 2010

http://3950.net/2010/06/liberty-net-june-19-2010/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

PERHAPS THE LIBERTY Net could also be called the Philosophy Net, as there were many deep and reflective comments from participants this week.

The net ï¿½ moderated by Vic, W1WCR and recorded by Marty, N2IRJ ï¿½ proved itself once again as a bastion of free and unfettered speech.

There was some jamming of the net this week from one deranged individual who used gutter language and pretended to be a participant, but he didnï¿½t fool anyone. Hereï¿½s proof in the form of an mp3 file that the jammer is the same (identified) individual who jammed the Marconi Net earlier the same evening.

(for all links to audio files, visit http://3950.net/)

Here is a tiny sampling of what youï¿½ll hear on this weekï¿½s Liberty Net recording:

ï¿½ If we gave the Chinese salvage rights for the spilled oil in the Gulf, how long would it take before it was all cleaned up? One month? (2 hours 52 minutes)

ï¿½ Almost unmentioned by the controlled media, a huge American/Israeli war armada has passed through the Suez canal on the way to Iranian waters. Is another illegal Middle Eastern war about to begin? (2 hours 55 minutes)

ï¿½ George W. Bush bankrupted the country with his spending on unconstitutional programs and illegal warmongering, and Barack Obama is like G.W. Bush in spades: Heï¿½s doing exactly what Bush was doing, just more of it. (2 hours 59 minutes)

ï¿½ With the Euro zone in serious economic trouble ï¿½ and the dollar being inflated into infinity ï¿½ is it time to consider a world currency as proposed by Dmitry Medvedev? (3 hours 10 minutes)

ï¿½ Why is Janet Napolitano calling for government ï¿½Internet monitoringï¿½? Why is the founder of Wikileaks ï¿½ who has exposed horrible American/Zionist war crimes in the Middle East ï¿½ in hiding, fearing retribution from the regime in Washington? (3 hours 15 minutes)

ï¿½ Is there something about the lesbian personality that inherently hates men, hates freedom, and wants to enslave anyone with a positive, free spirit? (3 hours 27 minutes)

ï¿½ Many intelligent Americans are fed up with the entitlement-crazy underclass and the politicians who pander to them, and have started some tentative steps, with what they call the Free State Project, to forge a new nation on the soil of North America. (6 minutes)

ï¿½ Scientists have now created an audio rendition of solar activity, so one can now literally hear the ï¿½musicï¿½ of our solar systemï¿½s central sphere. (9 minutes)

ï¿½ Moves are now being made to legalize the use of the Washington regimeï¿½s drone aircraft ï¿½ the same kind that are being used to murder innocent people in Pakistan and Afghanistan ï¿½ right here in the U.S. (13 minutes)

For a full Liberty Net immersion experience, in addition to listening over the air, log on Saturday evenings beginning at 10PM Eastern for live audio feeds of the Net (sometimes from several stations simultaneously) and live text chat too at www.stickam.com/thelibertynet via N2SAG.

Dr. Jack Wheeler
Behind The Lines
Friday, 25 June 2010

On Monday, June 21, the demented state legislature in Albany passed a bill increasing cigarette taxes. A pack of smokes will average $9.60 across the state, and will be $11 a pack - $11 for a single pack of cigarettes - in New York City.

This is not only pro-smuggling, it is pro-terrorist. Who do you think runs the most lucrative cigarette smuggling operations from Virginia and the South into New York? Hezbollah and Al Qaeda. The higher taxes will mean higher profits for them, which they will use to kill Israelis and Americans in Afghanistan.

The state legislators who voted for the taxes should be tried for aiding and abetting terrorism for this alone. But the consequences could be vastly worse. New York's new tobacco tax law is an example of the Law of Unintended Consequences run amok. It's the coming nightmare of Crack Nicotine.

The problem is that the variations come from characteristics (like properties of materials and the physical construction) that are easier to measure than to model. Buzzword: Network Analyzer.

Why didn't you complain when Hezbollah and Al Qaeda were running the numbers rackets in Chicago back in the 'twenties? What about the rum running Hezbollah and Al Qaeda did across the Great Lakes during prohibition? I hear the Bin Ladins and the Kennedys really cleaned up in Boston. They then ruined the good name of the Bronfman family as a cover.

The Oil Spill in the Gulf is an Hezbollah and Al Qaeda operation. They did it on a subcontract basis for the Saudis in order to get prices up a bit.

There's the matter of the three hundred Hezbollah and Al Qaeda operated porn studios in Tel Aviv. They run all the brothels there too, with the local, corrupt officials turning a blind eye.

What about Hezbollah and Al Qaeda making Jimmie Hoffa disappear so they could take over the Teamster's Union? Then there's the matter of Hezbollah and Al Qaeda sinking the Lusitania, helping suck the US into yet another costly war? Pearl Harbour? Hezbollah and Al Qaeda financed.

Why didn't you complain when Hezbollah and Al Qaeda staged the Gulf of Tonkin incident? That cost the US dearly too. The Cold War? Hezbollah and Al Qaeda again. They installed Joseph Stalin so the US spent even MORE money.

Don't even get me started on the Hezbollah and Al Qaeda initiated graft and corruption in the space program. NASA is ALL Hezbollah and Al Qaeda operated..but you KNEW that and did NOTHING.

Hezbollah and Al Qaeda also ruined the Watergate operation for Nixon. Who do you think opened the doors and called the police? General Patton? Killed by Hezbollah and Al Qaeda. They did it trying to frame the CIA.

Illegal Mexican Immigrants? Hezbollah and Al Qaeda pack their lunches for the trip across the border and provide safe work houses for them once they cross.

So, spare me your pathetic attempts at Patriotism. You had your chance to save the Western World from the onslaught against Truth, Beauty, Justice, and all the little children. You did NOTHING.

Shame!

The times indicated show approximately where the topic is mentioned on the recording, not how long the topic is discussed.

But you are right on two counts:

No weekly discussion net with so many participants could ever do full justice to the multiple subjects brought up. And the human condition is indeed a strange one -- in fact, it is unprecedented.

With every good wish,

Hey, Gregg, you've now mentioned your new "premium receiver" several times. What's the matter? Is it so premium, that you can't remember who makes it? Is this a gov'tal secret? New master weapon from the DTS?
Again, why won't you mention what you've been using?

Come on, someone in here might be able to give you enough help to actually be able to use that "new Premium RX"!

ROTFL, while rolling my eyes,

Mike

The little chart on the right side of this page is pretty accurate but I look at the cluster spottings too. If you see the country or a nearby country you want to hear listed and its being heard in the US (N, W, or K call), pick a SW frequency close to what is listed and see what you can hear. If nothing else you can listen for the amateur station listed and see if you can hear him.

Yesterday 6 meters was open and there were listings at 50MHz.

Agreed.

- Why don't they make shear rams

Instant Pressure Surge and a potentially bigger Blow-Out of the whole Well Head

A Gental 'controlled' Shut-Down is what

That's way too slow. A replaceable cylinder loaded with whatever they use for explosive bolts; wouldn't need much; and the ram could be ratcheted for locking after the charge fires. All you need is a few thousand PSI for a 10th of a second.

Jackson's water crisis.
Boil your damn water!
http://www.clarionledger.com

Looka here, we had another water crisis last January, or last February.What I want to know is why do they make such a big whoop dee doo by showing those video clips of somebody getting water samples for testing and they have a certain way of holding that little water sample bottle wayyyy up high? What are they trying to prove by doing that? They keep showing that same video clip over and over everytime local tv news is on tv.Really, it is sort of like a comedy, the way they do it.

Calexico - I like that one Cuh. :-) I remember the first time I was on my way to visit Calexico and we stopped off in Sparks, Nevada. I had never been that far west at the time. We went to a KFC and ordered and I noticed everyone behind the counter was mexican. No big deal. A tad shocked, because I don't see that where I live. Not yet at least.

I had to repeat my order three times and we went and set down in a booth. They bring out our order and it wasn't just wrong, it was really wrong. I go back up to the counter and everyone looked at me like I was the foreigner - which I guess we were..lol. There was ONE person, the manager who understood me. He made it right. I'm glad I don't live in Sparks Nevada FWIW.

On the other hand, if the teacher's mental weakness includes a quickness to anger, the students might prey on this weakness by acting out to "get the teacher fired". A mentally unstable person would be more likely to give into this weakness and snap in front of a group of students; possibly injuring him/herself or others.

Not only must a teacher be mentally fit in the classroom, but also outside of the classroom. In the hallway, teachers are responsible to monitor hundreds of students transitioning from class to class. S/he must be alert to see that there is no bullying or other inappropriate behaviors at large. S/he must also take notice of student dress and language amongst students; also that no students are tardy to their next classes. A mentally unstable individual might be overwhelmed with multitasking in this venue as they must not only keep student behavior in check, but take attendance for their next classes and mentally prepare for the next lesson's curriculum.

Dude, your quotes about teacher responsibilty apply to elementary/junior high teachers. Not to college professors dealing with grown adults.
And if I was mentally ill enough to be overwhelmed with the multitasking, why do you think I get so many awards for my teaching, while still chairing the largest Dep't at my college? And my student evaluations (averaging above 3.9 out of 4) kind of dispel your thesis about mentally ill teachers snapping at students. In fact, I want to thank you for your quote - it mainly lists all the hardwork that good teachers are expected to do each day. I think we can draw the conclusion that reading comprehension was something you struggled with before dropping out.

As usual, you can't express yourself in your own words, so you cut-n-paste something about teachers and mental illness that doesn't even make sense in the way you try to apply it.

The fact that you are probably the most intelligent troll in the DTS speaks
a lot about the collective intelligence of that group.

Still won't talk about your premium receiver? Where is Telamon when he's really needed....

You're truly laugh-inducing!

OK so this is your starting point "Basic Standard"

Depends on the relative quality a design of the TV Matching Transformer. Plus the quality of the Coax Cable and a good earthen Ground.

1 - A 'good-one' will reduce some of the apparent noise coming from the basic long wire antenna :
So that is a +One-Half [+1/2]

2 - A 'good-one' will reduce some of the AM/MW Band Signals coming from the basic long wire antenna : So that is a +One-Half [+1/2]

Relative Merit Unit Value of One + One-Half + One-Half for a Total of Two [2] --- to One

- c: Same antenna with a 9:1 ratio transformer

First most of the very broadband 9:1 Matching Transformers that are shown for Shortwave Radio Listening (SWL) are also designed to cover the AM/MW/BCB down to 500 kHz and SW Bands up to 30 MHz. These usually recommend about a 10-Turn Primary for the Feed-Line to the Radio and about a 30-Turn Secondary for the Antenna side.

Note - That you set a 5 MHz lower 'limit' so you might want to cut the number of turns in half and have a 5 -Turn Primary with a 15 Turn Secondary.

A good 9:1 Matching Transformer :

1 Will reduce much of the apparent noise coming from the basic long wire antenna : So that is a +One [+1]

2 - Will reduce much of the AM/MW Band Signals coming from the basic long wire antenna : So that is a +One [+1]

Relative Merit Unit Value of One + One + One for a Total of Three [3] --- to One

- I'm assuming everything else remaining the same.

As am I : Same Long Wire Antenna +plus+

* Same good earthen Ground#
Note - Many SWL'ers only use an in the house
Water Pipe Ground with their Long Wire Antenna
-so- Going from an in the house Water Pipe Ground to a good outside 8-Ft earthen Ground Rod may be another +One [+1] all by itself for those who make the switch to an outside 8-Ft earthen Ground Rod.

* Same Coax Cable#
Note - Many SWL'ers only use an Insulated Wire
for their Feed-in-Line from their Long Wire Antenna
-so- Going from an Insulated Wire to a Coax Cable may be another +One [+1] all by itself for those who make the switch in the Feed-in-Line.

- I'm interested in the variation, shown ratio wise,
- between the above. Are there any handy
- online calculators for this?

Online Calculators will give you Generated Numbers for a given set of parameters; and not Relative Ratios {side-by-side comparisons -aka- Relative Merit} .

Once again, those awards are given by the dufi to the dufi. A circle jerk, if you will.

You fool no one, Bryant. You were mentally ill enough to claim to have a PhD when you did not.

Wow. I'm still able to read the 1/4" characters on my Myine IRA. I guess I'm lucky. In my bedroom I have an LED atomic clock (110 VAC) for nights and a 10" analog atomic clock (1 X AA battery) for when the room is too bright for the LED.

Islam is an Arabic word, it means that you totally surrender to God, and worship Him only.
Here also I must explain what does worship means? It doesn't mean that you only pray, its meaning is much much wider, to worship God is that you look at Him as your ONLY master, no other master controlling you, so He is the ONLY one you are loyal to , He is the ONLY One you rely on, He is the ONLY one you fear, He is the ONLY one who judges you and puts rules for you, He is the axis your life rotates on, why? because He is our Creator, He is the Creator of the Universe and Creator of everything, He is the One who manages the Universe, He is the strong, the compassionate the merciful, He knows everything, He can do everything. He is the One who controls the Universe.
How did we know that? God sent prophets to us to teach us this and to tell us the laws He gave for us to go along our life, we will be accounted on this in the Hereafter.
Don't think that the beginning of Islam was only since Muhammad (Peace be upon him), no that's wrong, Islam began from the beginning of creation, God created Adam (Peace be upon him) and Adam was a Muslim, because he really worshipped God only, and began to have a family, all the family were Muslims,and the life went on, then people began to deviate from this meaning and forgot God, began to worship idols, God sent the prophets: Noah, Hud, Saleh, Abraham,Moses, David, Solomon, Jesus,Muhammad and many other prophets (Peace be upon them all), the mission of all these prophets was to restore people back to the right way of God, and to remind them of their reality.
But at the end all these prophets are not gods, they don't have any divine nature,because Allah is the ONLY God,so when Jews put very wrong concepts of God that made Him like a child they are deviating from concept of worshipping God, because they are insulting Him, and when Christians say that Jesus is God or God's son, or that God is one in Trinity, they are really deviating from the concept , and when they make their priests invent rules for them with no evidence from what God said or what His prophets said, they also are deviating from the concept of worshipping God.
We in Islam refuse all these forms, if someone said that Muhammad (Peace be upon him) is our God, he is a disbeliever, God is the ONLY God, If an Immam said a Fatwa, he must give his evidence on this Fatwa, he is not obeyed blindly, our standard is what Allah and His prophet told us (because the Prophet is the one whom God sent not because he has a divine nature because he hasn't).
This is generally the Islamic belief.
2. Islamic morals:
God ordered us to be merciful, treat people well, help people, He recommended us to treat our parents well, and to keep always on helping them.

23. Thy Lord has commanded that ye worship none but HIM, and that ye show kindness to parents. If one or both of them attain old age with thee, never say to them as much as ugh nor reproach them, but always address them with kindly speech.
24. And lower them the wing of humility out of tenderness. And say, `My Lord, have mercy on them even as they nourished me when I was a little child.' (Holy Quran 17:23-24) even if they were not Muslims we must treat them well but we don't obey them if they ordered us to disobey God.
15. And if they contend with thee to make thee set up equals with ME concerning which thou hast no knowledge, obey them not, but be a kind companion to them in worldly affairs, (Holy Quran 31:15)
God ordered us to keep always in contact with our relatives God said:
36. And worship ALLAH and associate naught with HIM, and show kindness to parents, and to kindred (Holy Quran 4:36)
Also the Prophet (Peace be upon him) said: " He/She who believes in Allah , the Almighty and Day of Judgment , must communicate , be good, courteous and kind to his kith and kin or relatives." (Narrated by Bukhari and Muslim)
Also we are also recommended to treat the neighbors well, even if they were not Muslims and even if they treated us badly as God said:
and to the neighbour who is a kinsman and the neighbour who is a stranger (Holy Quran 4:36)
Prophet (Peace be upon him) said: "(Arch Angel) Gbriel , PBUH, pressed on reminding me with the right of the neighbor until I thought he is going to consider him an heir (of mine) ." (Narrated by Bukhari and Muslim)
He also says: " The best of neighbor s in the sight of Allah, the Almighty, is the one who is best to his neighbor".(Narrated by Tirmithee)

God also told us to take care of orphans as in the same verse and orphans
There was a very severe punishment to those who take money of orphans as God said:
10. Surely they who devour the property of the orphans unjustly, only swallow fire into their bellies, and they shall burn in a blazing fire. (Quran 4:10)

God ordered us to be completely fair with people even if I saw two people having a problem, one of them is Muslim, the other is non Muslim, and I found the right with the non-Muslim, I must judge for the non-Muslim.
135. O ye who believe ! be strict in observing justice and be witnesses for ALLAH, even though it be against yourselves or against your parents or kindred. Whether he, against whom witness is borne, be rich or poor, ALLAH is more regardful of them both than you are. Therefore follow not your low desires that you may be able to act equitably. And if you hide the truth or evade it, then know that ALLAH is Well-Aware of what you do. (Quran 4:135)

God ordered us also not to do adultery except with our wives, because it is not a mess, and because it destroys the society and makes people deviate and spoil, that's why God, ordered us to take all the reasons to prevent this to happen, so He ordered women to wear Hijab which covers their body and heads so as not arise sexual desire in men, and it is also a protection for the woman from being raped or being annoyed by bad men. It makes women appear in a respectful way, their body is not something public seen by all people, it is only for the one she accepted as her husband. He ordered them when talking with men, not to talk in a way that arises their sexual desire but to talk in a serious way.
31. And say to the believing women that they restrain their looks and guard their private parts, and that they display not their beauty or their embellishment except that which is apparent thereof, and that they draw their head-coverings over their bosoms (Quran 24:31)
So be not soft in speech, lest he, in whose heart is a disease, should feel tempted; and speak decent words. (Quran 33:32)
As God ordered women to cover their body, he ordered men not to look at women, because this arises their sexual desire, and may lead them to adultery, or at least may lead them go astray from their duties in this life.
30. Say to the believing men that they restrain their looks and guard their private parts. That is purer for them. Surely, ALLAH is Well-Aware of what they do. (Holy Quran 24:30)
This is really one of the major problems the societies in the West face.

God ordered us not to lie or to promise with something and don't do, Prophet Muhammad (Peace be upon him) said that these are the properties of hypocrites.
119. O ye who believe ! fear ALLAH and be with the truthful.(Quran 9:119) and fulfill the covenant; for the covenant shall be questioned about.

35. And give full measure when you measure and weigh with a right balance; that is best and most commendable in the end.(Quran 17:34-35)

70. O ye who believe ! Fear ALLAH and say the straightforward word.
71. HE will set right you actions for you and forgive you your sins. And whoso obeys ALLAH and HIS Messenger shall, surely, attain a supreme triumph.(Quran 33:70-71)

God ordered us to say good words and avoid bad words and emphasized much on this because the slip of the tongue may cause many problems.
24. Dost thou not see how ALLAH sets forth a parable of a good word ? It is like a good tree, whose root is firm and whose branches reach into heaven ?
25. It brings forth its fruit at all times by the command of its Lord. And ALLAH sets forth parables for men that they may be reminded.
26. And the case of an evil word, is like that of an evil tree, which is uprooted from above the earth and has no stability. (Quran 14:24-26)

God ordered us not to be arrogant but to be modest.
37. And walk not in the earth haughtily, for thou canst not thus rend the earth, nor canst thou reach the mountains in height. (Quran 17:37)

63. And the true servants of the Gracious God are those who walk on the earth humbly and when the ignorant address them, they avoid them gracefully by saying, `Peace !' (Quran 25:63)

Finally God orders us to do everything good and avoid everything bad.
90. Verily, ALLAH enjoins justice, and the doing of good to others; and giving like kindred; and forbids indecency and manifest evil and transgression. HE admonishes you that you may take heed. (Quran 16:90)

3. Islamic pillars:
They are five:
1. Witnessing that Allah is the only God and that Muhammad (Peace be upon him) is His messenger: as I explained in the beginning.
2. Praying: We pray to God five times a day in the mosques, from the benefits of praying:
a. Having communication with God who created us
b. Meeting with Muslims periodically every day, connecting with each other, which strengthens the Islamic society.
3. Zakat: Every mature able Muslim pays 2.5% of his income to help in building Islamic society, this is the minimum, God promised us with high rewards for paying more and more.
276. ALLAH will blot out interest and will cause charity to increase. And ALLAH loves not anyone who is a confirmed disbeliever and an arch-sinner. (Quran 2:276)

4. Fasting: Every healthy mature able Muslim must fast Ramadan (one of the Islamic months), all Muslims fast together in this month by stop eating and drinking along the day, they begin fasting at the dawn, they have breakfast at the Sunset. This really builds the Muslim character, trains him to control his desire and his passion, besides when all Muslims fast together, this gives a beautiful picture of the Muslims being uniform, it also makes the rich feel the hunger and thrusts of poor and motivates them to help the poor.

5. Finally, the pilgrimage: Every healthy able Muslim must do it once in his life. It is the annual Muslim conference where about 2 million Muslims meet in Mecca leaving their countries being at rest their answering God's call, wearing simple clothes, declaring their total obedience to God.
The rites of the Hajj include circling the Kaaba seven times and going seven times between the hillocks of Safa and Marwa, as Hagar did during her search for water. Then the pilgrims stand together in Arafat and ask God for what they wish and for His forgiveness, in what is often thought of as a preview of the Day of Judgment.
The end of the Hajj is marked by a festival, Eid Al-Adha, which is celebrated with prayers. This, and Eid al-Fitr, a feast-day commemorating the end of Ramadan, are the two annual festivals of the Muslim calendar.[/align

Both the examples you give have a three to one ratio. If this is a nine to one example, I must be missing something in your explanation.

Please enlighten me.

The impedance ratio is what matters, here. More or less uniform impedance across the desired spectra produces more or less uniform performance at the radio input. The impedance ratio of a transformer is equal to the square of the turns ratio.

A 3:1 turns ratio produces a 9:1 impedance ratio.

Now, a transformer's optimum frequency range will depend on a number of factors. The specific material used in the core is one.
That's why there are so many different types of core material. The actual number of turns is another. The type of wind is a third. For these reasons, and that the impedance ratio is too narrow for the SW bands, a 75-300 TV transformer is not exactly a good choice for shortwave listening. Although it may produce passable results at some frequencies if there are no other options.

Obviously, this thread kind of proves my point.

Let's see if Gregg finds a decent receiver. I kind of doubt that he'll ever tell us which receiver he acquires.

Mike [M II],

Basically the Ratio is the Square of the Turns -ex- 1x1 = 1 & 3x3 = 9
-so- 10T & 30T = 100:900 ~ 1:9

Many/most Shortwave Listeners(SWL) Matching Transformers use a Ratio of 9:1 for Random {Long Wire} Antennas and for Dipole Antennas a Ratio of 4:1
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Balun

Please note that your standard TV Matching Transformer is 300 Ohms to 75 Ohms ~ 4:1
-so- the 300 Ohms side is 4
* The Square Root of 4 is 2
* * the 300 Ohms side would have 2-Turns [2X]
-and- the 75 Ohms side is 1
* The Square Root of 1 is 1
* * the 75 Ohms side would have 1-Turns [1X]
-note- Usually for VHF&UHF TV Signals not many Turns are required as for the lower HF Radio Signals of 30 MHz and all the way down to 500 kHz in the AM/MW BCB.

-fwiw- some SWL'ers will take the very small TV
Matching Transformer Ferrite Binocular Cores
{Two Holes} and rewind them with very thin Wire to make them into SWL Matching Transformers.
http://www.surplussales.com/Inductors/FerMisc/FerMisc-5.html
Since these are Ferrite Binocular Cores {Two Holes} they require half the turns as the common One Hole http://www.surplussales.com/Inductors/FerToro/FerToro-3.html Round Donuts {Toroidal}.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Toroidal_inductors_and_transformers

Some claim to get 5T & 15T on one of these very small TV Matching Transformer Ferrite Binocular Cores going through each of the Two Holes. I however have only been able to get 3~4 & 9~12 in these very small cores.

FWIW, I was a long time read-only "member" of rec.radio.shortwave as well as rec.radio.swap. The infighting there (both groups) got so bad I left there. I could never believe there was so much vitriol attached to radios... (even though I used to heap much of that on some particular radios in my past, bu only at the radio itself).

Rec.knives was a real knice knewsgroup when I found it, but from the postings there; it was already past it's heyday.

It was still nice for about 2-3 years, then the LardBoy/Gregg/etc crowd moved in and AUKed it to death.

Brybaby has to let everyone know why he's leaving, it's the "pride thing" - he doesn't want anyone else to think he left because he ran off...lol. <know his type like a book> If I ever left - I wouldn't say a freeking word about it because I wouldn't come back to read the group - but he will...lol...EVERYDAY because he is a narcissist (notice how the word Narc is embedded in that word Bybaby -yeah I know about it.) Do you still "roll"? LMAO!

I was off of Gene Snyder Highway earlier today, I saw a Cheetos bag on 71s right before the second loop of GS. I almost felt I was on MB's trail...lol...follow the Cheetos bag. ;-P Now don't get all ansey Bryant, I was visiting a very good friend, not looking for you - didn't want you to run to your "family attorney". <grin>

And heck no I'm not going to tell you what receiver I'm getting, free BTW, well not 'really' free - quite unexpected and I'm not worthy to have such a nice piece. Myself, I would never spend that much money on a receiver, but it does have all the add ons so I am pleased. Too much receiver for me actually, cuz I'm not a real DXer like you...lol...but I will tell you that a Palomar Loop is with the receiver (never used with it) and something else...I forget what he said. Just having the PL would be fine with me. I wonder if you have any friends that would just hand over a PREMIUM RX like that? And the answer would be a Big Fat No!!! <smirk>

Ah heck, I may tell you....but then again - may not. What purpose would it serve you? You couldn't rag on the receiver, so (I know how your mind works - remember) you would attack the poster - that would be me. And all you could say is "you're lying" because you know all about that don't you? I had to study lying and deception whereas you did it since you were picked on as a tyke. Now go shout into your tape recorder - all debate practice style and shit.<rolling my eyes> Everyone has to have something I suppose, even you. Ha!

You are so full of crap. Is this Mike or Batman and Robin posting. ;-)
It sure wasn't dead when I was there, the knife and steel people all answered every question I had. It's just no one is asking any steel related questions, there will be some poor schmuck like me that ventures over there in the future and then Robin and his puppets will rile it all up. Like two of the guys said TO ME personally - he said not verbatim but something like "there isn't much posting here anymore" and then he said what he was busy with and then named two or three other posters and what they were busy with." Then a few more expounded a little on what they were doing.

Like I've said over ten times, just because you say it - doesn't make it so. Should I post EVERY post from RK from the time I went over there in here to prove it AGAIN? Just like I proved Robin was lying in this group from the beginning saying " Kramer was long gone, even you said that Gregg, when you started posting there." Bwahahahaha!!!! What a freeking liar. He knew it. I knew it. And after he said it for the fifth or six time....I had enough of his lies and posted right here what a liar he is.

And out of all the shuck and jiving he does on usenet, what did he have to say I ask? " Oh, I'm getting up in years" - "I can't remember everything" again- not verbatim but that was the gist of it. Hey Robin, if you can't remember everything - stopped acting like you know everything.....lol. I hope we're crystal. What a dope!

That just proves how stupid most people are. There is nothing that any politician or government can do about it except wait for the oil people to stop the leak, THEN go in and try to clean up the mess... which will most likely take DECADES.

I've heard people say "Why doesn't he send the military in to stop it?" What the devil would the military do? Their prime raison d'etre is killing people and breaking things. They don't have a very good reputation when it comes to fixing anything (e.g. the dikes in NOLA). About all they could do is steam in circles and run the ships into one another (just yesterday, I was reading where they did a LOT of that during WWII).

Hard as it is to say, or to believe, the best that can be done is being done by BP at the moment (though they could sure do better with the on-shore cleanup... let the locals do it and pay them for it.) Obama can't be blamed for any of this, just the same as if it had happened during Bush' administration, he could likewise have not been blamed. (now, Cheney... that's mebbe another story)

FWIW Steve, you do have a beautiful IMO. From the pics you have shown and all. Is it sitting on 50 acres? No. But so what, some people don't want that. I know I don't. The price of a home IMO doesn't make a home beautiful, beautiful is where you lay your head down at night and can be yourself. I'll be getting with you Steve, I'll show you a few things you can have fun with if he wants to keep playing these games.

Brenda Ann wrote:

> That just proves how stupid most people are.

I'd like to share the following composition. It was written by a good human being. It would be nice to distribute it everywhere.

Cold Turkey

Many years ago, I was so innocent I still considered it possible that we could become the humane and reasonable America so many members of my generation used to dream of. We dreamed of such an America during the Great Depression, when there were no jobs. And then we fought and often died for that dream during the Second World War, when there was no peace.

But I know now that there is not a chance in hell of America's becoming humane and reasonable. Because power corrupts us, and absolute power corrupts absolutely. Human beings are chimpanzees who get crazy drunk on power. By saying that our leaders are power-drunk chimpanzees, am I in danger of wrecking the morale of our soldiers fighting and dying in the Middle East? Their morale, like so many bodies, is already shot to pieces. They are being treated, as I never was, like toys a rich kid got for Christmas.

When you get to my age, if you get to my age, which is 81, and if you have reproduced, you will find yourself asking your own children, who are themselves middle-aged, what life is all about. I have seven kids, four of them adopted.

Many of you reading this are probably the same age as my grandchildren. They, like you, are being royally shafted and lied to by our Baby Boomer corporations and government.

I put my big question about life to my biological son Mark. Mark is a pediatrician, and author of a memoir, The Eden Express. It is about his crackup, straightjacket and padded cell stuff, from which he recovered sufficiently to graduate from Harvard Medical School.

Dr. Vonnegut said this to his doddering old dad: "Father, we are here to help each other get through this thing, whatever it is." So I pass that on to you. Write it down, and put it in your computer, so you can forget it.

I have to say that's a pretty good sound bite, almost as good as, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." A lot of people think Jesus said that, because it is so much the sort of thing Jesus liked to say. But it was actually said by Confucius, a Chinese philosopher, 500 years before there was that greatest and most humane of human beings, named Jesus Christ.

The Chinese also gave us, via Marco Polo, pasta and the formula for gunpowder. The Chinese were so dumb they only used gunpowder for fireworks. And everybody was so dumb back then that nobody in either hemisphere even knew that there was another one.

But back to people, like Confucius and Jesus and my son the doctor, Mark, who've said how we could behave more humanely, and maybe make the world a less painful place. One of my favorites is Eugene Debs, from Terre Haute in my native state of Indiana. Get a load of this:

Eugene Debs, who died back in 1926, when I was only 4, ran 5 times as the Socialist Party candidate for president, winning 900,000 votes, 6 percent of the popular vote, in 1912, if you can imagine such a ballot. He had this to say while campaigning:

As long as there is a lower class, I am in it.
As long as there is a criminal element, I'm of it.
As long as there is a soul in prison, I am not free.
Doesn't anything socialistic make you want to throw up? Like great public schools or health insurance for all?

How about Jesus' Sermon on the Mount, the Beatitudes?

Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the Earth.

Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy.

Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God. .

And so on.

Not exactly planks in a Republican platform. Not exactly Donald Rumsfeld or Dick Cheney stuff.

For some reason, the most vocal Christians among us never mention the Beatitudes. But, often with tears in their eyes, they demand that the Ten Commandments be posted in public buildings. And of course that's Moses, not Jesus. I haven't heard one of them demand that the Sermon on the Mount, the Beatitudes, be posted anywhere.

"Blessed are the merciful" in a courtroom? "Blessed are the peacemakers" in the Pentagon? Give me a break!

There is a tragic flaw in our precious Constitution, and I don't know what can be done to fix it. This is it: Only nut cases want to be president.

But, when you stop to think about it, only a nut case would want to be a human being, if he or she had a choice. Such treacherous, untrustworthy, lying and greedy animals we are!

I was born a human being in 1922 A.D. What does "A.D." signify? That commemorates an inmate of this lunatic asylum we call Earth who was nailed to a wooden cross by a bunch of other inmates. With him still conscious, they hammered spikes through his wrists and insteps, and into the wood. Then they set the cross upright, so he dangled up there where even the shortest person in the crowd could see him writhing this way and that.

Can you imagine people doing such a thing to a person?

No problem. That's entertainment. Ask the devout Roman Catholic Mel Gibson, who, as an act of piety, has just made a fortune with a movie about how Jesus was tortured. Never mind what Jesus said.

During the reign of King Henry the Eighth, founder of the Church of England, he had a counterfeiter boiled alive in public. Show biz again.

Mel Gibson's next movie should be The Counterfeiter. Box office records will again be broken.

One of the few good things about modern times: If you die horribly on television, you will not have died in vain. You will have entertained us.

And what did the great British historian Edward Gibbon, 1737-1794 A.D., have to say about the human record so far? He said, "History is indeed little more than the register of the crimes, follies and misfortunes of mankind."

The same can be said about this morning's edition of the New York Times.

The French-Algerian writer Albert Camus, who won a Nobel Prize for Literature in 1957, wrote, "There is but one truly serious philosophical problem, and that is suicide."

So there's another barrel of laughs from literature. Camus died in an automobile accident. His dates? 1913-1960 A.D.

Listen. All great literature is about what a bummer it is to be a human being: Moby Dick, Huckleberry Finn, The Red Badge of Courage, the Iliad and the Odyssey, Crime and Punishment, the Bible and The Charge of the Light Brigade.

But I have to say this in defense of humankind: No matter in what era in history, including the Garden of Eden, everybody just got there. And, except for the Garden of Eden, there were already all these crazy games going on, which could make you act crazy, even if you weren't crazy to begin with.

Some of the games that were already going on when you got here were love and hate, liberalism and conservatism, automobiles and credit cards, golf and girls' basketball.

Even crazier than golf, though, is modern American politics, where, thanks to TV and for the convenience of TV, you can only be one of two kinds of human beings, either a liberal or a conservative.

Actually, this same sort of thing happened to the people of England generations ago, and Sir William Gilbert, of the radical team of Gilbert and Sullivan, wrote these words for a song about it back then:

I often think it's comical
How nature always does contrive
That every boy and every gal
That's born into the world alive
Is either a little Liberal
Or else a little Conservative.

Which one are you in this country? It's practically a law of life that you have to be one or the other? If you aren't one or the other, you might as well be a doughnut.

If some of you still haven't decided, I'll make it easy for you.

If you want to take my guns away from me, and you're all for murdering fetuses, and love it when homosexuals marry each other, and want to give them kitchen appliances at their showers, and you're for the poor, you're a liberal.

If you are against those perversions and for the rich, you're a conservative.

What could be simpler?

My government's got a war on drugs. But get this: The two most widely abused and addictive and destructive of all substances are both perfectly legal.

One, of course, is ethyl alcohol. And President George W. Bush, no less, and by his own admission, was smashed or tiddley-poo or four sheets to the wind a good deal of the time from when he was 16 until he was 41. When he was 41, he says, Jesus appeared to him and made him knock off the sauce, stop gargling nose paint.

Other drunks have seen pink elephants.

And do you know why I think he is so pissed off at Arabs? They invented algebra. Arabs also invented the numbers we use, including a symbol for nothing, which nobody else had ever had before. You think Arabs are dumb? Try doing long division with Roman numerals.

We're spreading democracy, are we? Same way European explorers brought Christianity to the Indians, what we now call "Native Americans."

How ungrateful they were! How ungrateful are the people of Baghdad today.

So let's give another big tax cut to the super-rich. That'll teach bin Laden a lesson he won't soon forget. Hail to the Chief.

That chief and his cohorts have as little to do with Democracy as the Europeans had to do with Christianity. We the people have absolutely no say in whatever they choose to do next. In case you haven't noticed, they've already cleaned out the treasury, passing it out to pals in the war and national security rackets, leaving your generation and the next one with a perfectly enormous debt that you'll be asked to repay.

Nobody let out a peep when they did that to you, because they have disconnected every burglar alarm in the Constitution: The House, the Senate, the Supreme Court, the FBI, the free press (which, having been embedded, has forsaken the First Amendment) and We the People.

About my own history of foreign substance abuse. I've been a coward about heroin and cocaine and LSD and so on, afraid they might put me over the edge. I did smoke a joint of marijuana one time with Jerry Garcia and the Grateful Dead, just to be sociable. It didn't seem to do anything to me, one way or the other, so I never did it again. And by the grace of God, or whatever, I am not an alcoholic, largely a matter of genes. I take a couple of drinks now and then, and will do it again tonight. But two is my limit. No problem.

I am of course notoriously hooked on cigarettes. I keep hoping the things will kill me. A fire at one end and a fool at the other.

But I'll tell you one thing: I once had a high that not even crack cocaine could match. That was when I got my first driver's license! Look out, world, here comes Kurt Vonnegut.

And my car back then, a Studebaker, as I recall, was powered, as are almost all means of transportation and other machinery today, and electric power plants and furnaces, by the most abused and addictive and destructive drugs of all: fossil fuels.

When you got here, even when I got here, the industrialized world was already hopelessly hooked on fossil fuels, and very soon now there won't be any more of those. Cold turkey.

Can I tell you the truth? I mean this isn't like TV news, is it?

Here's what I think the truth is: We are all addicts of fossil fuels in a state of denial, about to face cold turkey.

And like so many addicts about to face cold turkey, our leaders are now committing violent crimes to get what little is left of what we're hooked on.

Bwahahah!!! I just caught this post of yours, you're baked. I don't have the receiver, never said I did and I didn't mention it several times either liar. I mentioned it once....err maybe twice before you posted this. Sooooo apparently you are just dying to know, small penis/radio syndrome Brybaby? It'll be OK Bry, with your DX skills you can hear more than anyone else in this group with a Patrolman and a coathanger - we all know that anyway. You rule dude!!!<rolling my eyes> RA is calling dontchaknow! ;-D

> Come on, someone in here might be able to give you enough help to > actually be able to use that "new Premium RX"!

Oh quit it Ding Dong Head, there are no "new Premium RX's" - you need to brush up or debate on this. Let me take that back a tad, there is I am sure new receivers that will never see the light of day or prototypes, but you'll never see one unless you are "in the knows" - and we all know enough from your "history"...lol...you are NOT in the knows so too speak. You qwack me up Brybaby.

Yeah, and I'm sure you're that guy right, to help me out -like you did Daniel and a few others I may add (Weber St. bust)? You couldn't operate my Hammarlund HQ129X and Q Multiplier like I can...lol. Uh duhhhhh - what would you do? Scream at my receiver like you do into a tape recorder to "practice" or "warm up" for a debate? ;-P The gentleman that is giving me this has operated equipment that only in your wettest teen dreams could imagine - so I'm sure I'll be OK. But thanks for caring and sharing. He's going to give me the ORIGINAL book (and it's big) and papers and notes (which are numerous) he has made throughout the years with the add on of other things - that even you (NOT) could understand. Now as far as repairing it, nah baby nah - can't- nor would I attempt it and he has given me the name of three people in the US and their phone numbers and addys that worked on and modified this receiver and that will work on it FREE OF CHARGE when I mention his name. I bet you've googled "Premium RX" at least three times to try an narrow it down. There's quite a few (Premium Rx's) out there - I've seen somewhat of what I will have in my possession, but not everything.

Psss - Now I see. I said I wouldn't respond and let you get the last word. Well, now you can...lol....I pwomise (misspelling intentional so the fake phD doesn't attack spelling per Maus "back in the day") Brybaby. Have fun with your students. ;-)

I can PROMISE you this much Larb. I ain't buying what he's trying to sell. He isn't as old as he says he is or look below. Nope. He can tell it to someone else. It is either one of two things.

He's saying he's that old to try an impress his boyfriends/or whatever group he's trolling and/or cover up for his other sock puppets - you know - try an get em' off the trail with the age thing or make them think " damn- this old man has kept his faculties this long and has an attitude"....lol. Or #2 He REALLY IS that old and he has 'literally' absolutely no life or anyone that loves or cares for him and he is soooo pissed that he takes it out on here. I noticed the ones he makes friends with on usenet and I made a mental note of it and I'll just leave it at that.

I know this much (Hand Raised To God Himself and I don't take that lightly) - if the Lord hasn't come back or I haven't died before I get to the age that he "says he is" - - - the absolute last thing I will have on my mind is being on usenet and leaving a legacy on usenet like he has. What a pathetic life one must have at that "supposed age" to be on his computer of all things and let loose his vitriolic tangents is unquestionably the saddest (IMO) legacy one could leave behind.

Can you imagine if a loved one/family member (doubt he has any sadly) or someone that thought they knew him got his computer and pulled up all his crap.<shaking my head> Every perverted keystroke and every mean thing he has said to people.....and that's just under this monicker we know about.

I'm ashamed of myself that I have stooped to the level and was given the directions to their neighborhoods so too speak (him and Brybaby) and decided to play with them, I feel dirty. But I am only human. I don't know much about Krypsis' usenet history, I've never googled him or anything except to prove he was lying about me and that was only on RK. I'll end it on this note. If he is truly the age he says he is.....IMO it is tragic. And he can come back and say whatever he wants - but I stand by my statement in regards to him. I even TRIED to be nice to him and told him if he was my neighbor I would help him put up a real antenna AND I MEANT IT. He didn't want none of that, he wanted what he always sets out to do on usenet.:-(

Psychology speaking, I have NEVER EVER read any posts from ONE REAL TEACHER on usenet as of this date (till now) that has ever said "I just won an award for having the best " of ANYTHING....lol. It says much of his mental makeup just to have typed that. There are actually three words/phrases for it, I'll let him go fishing for it.

I wonder if his "students" not students aka; 'drug connections' or aka; 'party friends, because he can't have friends of his own age and trying to relive his glory days'.....but real honest too goodness students/parents know of his "real history" - and I mean REAL history, not what he chose to tell them or lied by omission. I wonder if they knew/thought "he/Daniel rolled on his connection" in Utah if they would "deal with him" for lack of a better phrase. Drug addicts and dealers want you to "man up" if you're stupid enough to get busted....not to turn them in for a lighter charge/sentence aka 'rolling'. Why doesn't he say on his Linked profile why he left Weber St. or for that matter why doesn't it say on Sullivan College of Technology and Design that he got busted by the law in Utah on a school sponsored debate trip for burning weed with one student "that they could prove" in a hotel room?

I know this much. This won't be the last time 'Bear' makes the news because he was stupid, he thinks (like he did back then- that he's too smart to get busted) it is- and that he'll cover his bases better- but he's gonna get bit, remember I said it. I wonder how many "male students" will be in his hotel room this time? Not that there's anything wrong with that in his type of mind. Just saying.

Coast to Coast has been good tonight, Laura Hersch {sp} - she's good!

As I recall, this was not the first time he'd mentioned just receiving an award.

He seems to receive them just in the nick of time when someone questions his teaching ability/suitability.

No doubt and I can just imagine. I just don't feel like fishing for his turds with bloodbait and knowing what he got busted for....and that's just what he got busted for...it's not like that was the first time he got high with and betrayed the trust of his students/and or parents that expected them to be in good hands - not "high hands". He just got caught that time because that's the way life is.

They could give him the ALL-TIME Ky Teacher of the Century Award.....but it will never change the facts and the way I feel about him. If he would have come back to this group after he got busted - with hat in hand so too speak - with a little bit of humility....it'd have been totally different at least for me. But he didn't. He came back guns a blazing and blaming everyone except himself - even Peter who was trying to lower the noise floor in RRS and posted about the situation as perfectly as one can took a shot to the body from Brybaby - one of the people that welcomed him back with a warm wet tongue lives out in Cali. Imagine that. He's still here to this day, what a trip.

I just shook my head and rolled my eyes. You must have been busy that week Steve because I didn't see you post in that thread and I stayed out of it because I was gone when it went down and didn't care to get involved because this was before he really started on me. But this guy is baked with a capital B and I commend (not that you need it) you for standing up to this usenet tool for years.

I may repost that thread, it shows Michael 'Bear' Bryant in all his glory....lol. Just got bitch slapped from the authorities in Utah for getting high on a school sponsored trip....everyone was waiting for him to respond and many (a few still here till this day) rooting him on to come back with open arms.<shaking my head> and he comes back bare knucked trying to hit every poster he could except for Bruce and a few others that had their mouths open. Unbelievable.

WSU debate coach quits over charge Cited in his hotel room for possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia
Sat, Oct 13, 2001
By MARK GRAY
Standard-Examiner staff OGDEN -- Weber State University communication professor and championship-winning debate coach Michael "Bear" Bryant has resigned after being cited for a drug offense at a debate tournament.
Bryant, who was at Southern Utah University Oct. 6 and 7 for the tournament, was cited in his hotel room for possession of marijuana, possession of drug paraphernalia and interfering with an arrest, all of which are misdemeanors.
Student debate team member Daniel Hallmeyer, 21, was also cited for possession of drug paraphernalia for possessing a pipe used to smoke marijuana.
On Oct. 6 at 11:30 p.m., Cedar City police received a call saying there was a "strong marijuana smell" emanating from a room at the Econo Lodge, said Iron
County Attorney Scott Burns.
When police arrived, Burns said, officers could also smell marijuana through the door.
After officers knocked on the door, Bryant answered and officers noticed marijuana "in plain view," along with a pipe, Burns said.
"Mr. Bryant then stated "It"s all mine. No one else is using it,"" Burns said.
The charge for interfering with an arrest came when Bryant allegedly swept "a small amount of marijuana off a table" and onto the ground, Burns said.

Burns is thinking about dropping the charge of interfering with the arrest and changing it to obstruction of justice.
As for Hallmeyer, after police asked him whether he had marijuana, he went to his room and came back with a pipe, Burns said.
In all, police confiscated two pipes, one in Bryant"s room and the other in Hallmeyer"s room, two clips used to hold partially smoked marijuana cigarettes
and a small amount of marijuana.
Neither Bryant nor Hallmeyer were booked into jail. But neither could be reached Friday for comment.
Bryant and Hallmeyer are both scheduled to be arraigned in 5th District Court
in Cedar City Oct. 29 at 1:15 p.m.
Each of the three charges for Bryant carry a maximum of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.
June Phillips, dean of the College of Arts and Humanities, said Bryant was not at work Thursday or Friday, but his classes were not canceled.
"We have had people filling in for him."
A decision regarding future professors of Bryant"s classes will be made by Monday. Most likely, classes will be filled by other faculty members and adjunct professors, she said.
Bryant taught several communication classes, including public speaking
and
several classes in conjunction with the debate team.
During his 14 years as the coach of the debate team, Bryant built a national powerhouse, winning four national championships and taking 20 individual teams to the national championships.
"He"s been very important in (the debate team"s) accomplishments," President
Paul Thompson said. "They still have things to accomplish and it would be unfortunate if this took away from that."
The debate team will be taken over by Eric Mueller, assistant director for forensics.
The university will probably not issue sanctions against Bryant, Jason Wanlass,

university spokesman said.
"Him voluntarily resigning pretty much closes the book."
"The resignation is voluntary and it is concrete," Wanlass said. "It was done without much contact with administration at all."
Bryant apparently sent an e-mail message to several administration members Thursday detailing his resignation.
Phillips, who received an e-mail, declined to discuss the contents saying it was "a communication between faculty members."
"He didn"t feel he could come back out of respect for the students," Phillips said of Bryant.
Phillips said although the resignation is official, based on payroll and adjustment times, an effective resignation date needs to be decided.
As far as Hallmeyer is concerned, Wanlass said the university will most likely appoint a legal attorney, who will work with the dean of students to determine whether Hallmeyer violated the student code of conduct.

For any of the readers of this group that weren't reading or posting on Oct.13th,01....just read this thread. Now remember, Bryant just got busted. P.Maus makes a great post in post number seven and Michael Bryant rears his ugly head in post number 25.

This thread in and of itself - says it all IMO. Just watch this MasterDebater go to work on P. Maus and everyone else, it truly is a mirror into the mind of a sociapath that is teaching our young youths/ adults of today and this is just on a tiny scale...lol.

Wonder what is going on with this country? Read it and weap....and I do mean weap.

Mike,

These are 'unknown' material Ferrite Cores that you are getting-off an old PC Mother Board; and they may or may not work with the specific Number of Turns that you try on them to cover the Shortwave Bands 5MHz~30MHz.

You may get 'lucky' with 10T&30T or you may come up with something weird. So experiment with what 'appear' to be the same Size, Shape and Color Ferrite Cores. 10T&30T; 6T&18T; 3T&9T; and if you get all the Turns on one Core 15T&45T.

TIPS:
http://users.catchnet.com.au/~rjandusimports/tut_5a.html
* Sort these 'unknown' material Ferrite Cores for Size, Shape and Color {ideally you will have a few of the same to do similar and dissimilar things to} in building a Matching Transformer that covers and does what you want done.
* Use different 'colored' Wires -if- you are using http://www.w8ji.com/Beverages/Beverage_transformer.jpg Insulated Wires for the Windings. Or put a piece of Black Electrical Tape on the Primary [Coax/Radio] 10T Winding to 'mark' it and easily identify it from the Secondary [Antenna/Ground] 30T Winding. If you are using Magnet Wire
-aka- 'Enameled Copper Wire' http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Magnet_wire http://www.radioshack.com/family/index.jsp?categoryId=2032240 to make your Windings then again use a piece of Black Electrical Tape on the Primary [Coax/

Radio] 10T Winding.
*Pre-Cutting your Wires for the Windings Measure the Cross-sectional Perimeter of your Ferrite Core Rap by wrapping a String around it two to three times and getting the average Distance of One Turn. Multiply this One Turn Distance by the Number of Turns and add 3"~6" for each of the two Tag-End Leads {that's an extra 6"~12" total}
-example- 10T x 1"/T = 10" for the Windings
+ 6"~12" for the Leads : Total 16"~22" Wire
-example- 30T x 1"/T = 30" for the Windings
+ 6"~12" for the Leads : Total 36"~42" Wire
-so- you can see that a Two Winding Matching Transformer will take about 5-Feet of Wire.
* Space your Wraps all around the Core -or-http://www.regionalmfg.com/components/toroidal-transformer-1.jpg Make All your Wrap on one-side for the Primary and across from it for the Secondary http://www.coilws.com/images/toroidal/CM%20Choke.gif
-but- Keep your Wraps "Tight" :
Tight Wraps = good electrical magnetic 'coupling' Loose Wraps = poor 'coupling'.

hope this helps - iane ~ RHF

Also true. An aircraft carrier can't stop the leak. Five thousand feet is well below the crush depth of any manned submarine. Not a damn thing the military could do -- except comb the beaches to aid the civilians in the manual clean-up going on.

Good information all around.

But it's also important to remember that a random wire will have an impedance which will vary hugely with frequency.

(If you get many wavelengths long, the impedance variations with frequency do start to smooth out.)

The free demo antenna modeling program called EZNEC will figure the impedance for you, in addition to actually showing you the antenna pattern geometry for almost any wire configuration.

A matching transformer can help or hinder signal transfer (which matters surprisingly little on the noisier bands below about 10 MHz), and definitely DC shorts and DC isolates the antenna and radio input.

If you really want maximum signal transfer on a wide band of HF frequencies with a random wire, the best way to go would be to add an adjustable antenna coupler to peak things up (in other words, to match impedances), varying the settings for each band of interest.

With all good wishes,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

RHF - it depends on what your definition of "help" is. There are many in here and others, three I know in my personal life that don't even listen to SW Radio that I have spoken to about this. And they are reading this. One of them hooked me up with someone in a particular county in Utah back during the last Bryant fiasco.....before this one.

You are/have IMO always been the peace keeper so too speak, and don't think it doesn't go unnoticed by myself and I am sure others.

There ARE MANY that read this group, I follow the numbers closely so I'm not talking out of my ass when I say that.....you know - google and all. And I do look at the numbers by the minutes when I'm online.

Hypothetical Situation. When I first went into Rec Knives to ask about specific knives and certain steel, if I had done my homework so too speak....either via google or many other numerous venues, I wouldn't have stepped into a landmine of a newsgroup. Follow me? I would have NEVER known Krypsis and Kramer. I didn't have a freeking clue. If ONE PERSON, hopefully twenty see this, even if they think I'm a dick, but they get the lowdown on this jackball -- -- then it was a success. If P.Maus or Ace or Stephen Lawrence or Telamon or Neutrodyne (for all I know you can have been one of them) etc. etc. etc. or whoever when I made my first post let me know backchannel that this guy was the troublemaker or even better....explain to me how to google/vista his posts and make up my own mind like I did in rec knives with Kramer and Krypsis - it sure would have been nice and saved me a lot of headache.

But because no one said anything to me, like in Rec Knives, I had to feel around - like walking down a hallway in the dark you have never walked down before with no flashlight or shoes. In most cases you are going to ram your foot into something and it isn't going to feel good.

I just wanted to know about radios/antennas/accessories etc. and lo and behold I start getting emails from Brybaby giving me the "Low Down" on everyone. I hear things about Peter/Steve/Turner and even Brenda Ann. There were more, but those were the ones off the top of my head I remember, no matter what he says, I just wished I could go back in time and had saved all that crap on disc and send it via email to every single person he spoke to me about. The shit he said about numerous people in here, when I was new to the computer to begin.....and just learning the hobby of SW....I felt like I was in grade school or something and sure enough....lol....unknown to me he teaches school <rolling my eyes>. The crap he spewed forth was stuff (if true- which I doubt knowing him now) about Brenda Ann and Lawrence and Strom and the guy (I forget who) who lost a leg/and or legs....he mentions it in his first post back from The Bust at the end when he says " I don't have 300 Hundred Radios- But I do Have Legs."

I didn't have a clue what he meant till later in that thread when Mark Holden (great guy IMO) mentioned in post #56 or around there that Michael was "taking poke" at some unfortunate guy who "lost his lower extremeties". That's terrible RHF. I'm done with this, I have spoke my peace, he is back to school "supposedly" so I don't have to look forward to his presence in here. But by God, I am done not saying anything back to him. I don't do it when I'm face to face with someone and just because I'm sitting at my keyboard doesn't mean I have to eat his shit - cuz those days are gone. At least in here. Hopefully that cleared it up a tad. Like I've said numerous times, why is it other than this group and RK with Batman and Robin.....why don't I have problems (or vice versa) with anyone else? It's common sense.

That was me. Traffic incident in 1986. Hit and run over. Broke off my left leg. Reattached in Trauma. And some 40 surgeries later, it sort of works. Also broke my back in that incident.

On a good day, I don't limp. On a bad day I can't walk without a cane.

But that was 1986. And this is 2010. I spend more time with my radios...or working...than I do devoting time to my injuries.

The only real problem I have is when shooting all day with a long lens. That's when I have back trouble.

Other than that, it is what it is.

Mark Holden is a class act.

Take some advice, straight up and out in the open: This is USENet. There's a lot of information here. And a lot of personal noise. Don't let the personal noise get in the way of the useful information.

It's like a car club: There's always a gossip whispering in the shadows. There's always a carburetor expert. Always a fuel injection expert. Always someone who builds transmissions. Always someone who does valve jobs. And always a know it all who can effect repairs without replacing parts. And the carb guy and the injection guy are always arguing with each other. The gossip is always slamming someone behind everyone's back, setting newcomers at the throats of the old timers, while claiming innocence in any of the conflicts.

But, it's a club. People are there for common goals, with common interests. They learn from each other. Bond with each other, and some become friends.

The noise is just part of background.

Here in RRS? Join the discussion. Make friends, or not. Learn.
Teach. Share experiences. Let the noise be part of the background.

Eventually, you'll know who you can filter out without loss of content.

Peter - I am so sorry. I didn't have a clue, really I didn't. I hope you can sense my truthfullness when I say that.<shaking my head> As usual, a well spoken post by yourself. I just wished now....that I had known it was you he was talking about.:-(What a prick.

Though I understand your take on usenet, it's a shame it's like that. IMO, you've always been one of the nicest/classiest guys in this group and to now know he was speaking of you....if he could have sank any lower in my eyes....he just did. I won't forget that. It speaks volumes of you that you are as nice as you are in the face of someone like that. Thanks for the response Peter.

It's always fun to watch Gregg's verbal diarrhea expose his true nature!
His own words and attitudes paint a much bleaker picture of the way his mind works than I ever could. I have little doubt that Gregg is the major force behind the DTS, if not the entire group.

What a sad, sad example of psychosis run amok. You know he won't shut up even if I leave (you've seen proof of that!) so I think I'll stick around just to keep him spouting his venom. He hurts himself, far more than anyone else.

I can't believe how easy you lie. I've never said anything bad about BrendaAnn. Hal Turner and Steve Lare were very different cases, but I wouldn't need to say anything bad about either. Most folks can read for themselves. The only real problem I've had with Maus deals with his defense of Strom's Nazi philosophy and posting of child porn on his web page Strom's that is. Amazing that Strom's years in prison don't seem to bother you,

I've never made fun of Maus' physical condition, because before today I was unaware of it. I wouldn't have made fun of it, anyway. You seem those brain stem jokes Steve Lare makes apply to me - I had a brain stem stroke that nearly ended my teaching career. Walking is also difficult for me - the part of the brain that regulates ambulatory balance was damaged. But, I turned down full disability because I wanted to return to my true love, teaching.

Gregg, you are sad. Very sad. But also sick.

Luv,

Mike (aka, Bear)

To "play with them"? Yes, that's all this trolling is to you, a game. I easily inferred as much when you showed your delight in the return of Mike and your comment related to the fact that he would liven things up here! How in hell would you know WHO is a teacher from what they may post on a

That's "sociopath" and you didn't to put the "young" in there as "youths" intimates someone of more tender years.

I'm a little sad that YOU seem to be a product of your country's teachers. I guess they had a fail with you!

Exactly! Your definition is so way out of whack with the real world that you haven't a clue either!

So? What does you "getting hooked up" have to do with radio?

Well, you may notice it but you certainly work AGAINST his peace keeping

How do you know how many people "read this group"?? You can only ever determine how many people POST because the ones who simply read leave no trace!

Correction, you DID do your homework and you've said that on many occasions. You also said that, as a result of you doing your homework, you decided to join with the trolls in the hounding of Kramer!

How does "reading" newsgroup posts equate to physical pain? You getting your "worlds" mixed up again! Hey Gregg, this is usenet, it ISN'T the

You know, you said the same thing about Kramer! I'm wondering if you're not just making this up. Why would two disparate people give you the "Low Down on everyone"???? Why just you? Why not every other poster? Are you special or something?

Gregg loss of the pertinent emails seems way too convenient. If they were as "ugly" as he maintains, why did he not keep a copy?

You will note that he also accuses Kramer in the knife group of exactly the same thing! Isn't that a little odd??

This is just a sorry assed country when the government outlaws a plant.
I guess if they feed people bullshit for long enough they will start to believe it. Marijuana is a naturally growing herb with some good qualities and uses, the government is the problem. Now due to a stupid law abiding snoop, this poor guy may be taken out of the picture.

I'm weeping for all the people who have had their lives ruined by a bullshit campaign against a plant. I smoke pot, and do not drink or smoke the government approved drugs for sale at any liquor store.

I didn't post maliciously, and read your situation, for which I have no power to help, but the issue is coming up on the November election and I do think people need to start questioning some of the insane drug laws we have. This country needs to stop and think, are these laws correct, or bogus, and why are they in place. On this issue I am not wrong.

She divorced Khun Brian about 2 years ago over his affair with Khun Ning (the nubile nymphet from Nana Plaza) and she is now living in Melbourne with her new husband Moussa who is from Senegal. They met when Mary went there on holiday there last year, and despite the age difference (Mary is 63 and Moussa is 26) Mary feels that it will work out for them and that this time she has made the right choice unlike the big mistake she made by marrying Khun Brian.

NEW YORK and WASHINGTON, June 28, 2010
FBI: 10 Russian Spies Arrested in U.S.
Suspects, Arrested in Four States, Were Highly-Trained Spies Seeking Access to "Policy-Making Circles," FBI Says

(CBS/ AP) Updated 4:52 p.m. ET

Ten alleged Russian spies have been arrested in the United States, the result of a multi-year investigation in four states, the FBI said Monday.

Eight of the 10 arrested were "carrying out long-term, 'deep-cover' assignments" the FBI said, while two had lesser roles in the Russian intelligence program. The arrests took place Sunday in Montclair, N.J., Yonkers, N.Y., Manhattan, Boston, and Arlington, Va.

The New York and New Jersey defendants were expected to appear in federal court in Manhattan Monday. The Virginia defendants were to make court appearances in Alexandria.

One additional defendant has been charged but remains at large.

Their job, according to the court papers in the case, was "to search and develop ties in policymaking circles" in the United States.

Criminal complaints state that the defendants had an overarching goal of becoming highly "Americanized" so as to be able to freely gather intelligence in the U.S. and to "recruit sources who are I, or are able to infiltrate United States policy-making circles."

The U.S. government intercepted a message from Russian intelligence headquarters in Moscow to two of the defendants, Richard and Cynthia Murphy.

"You were sent to USA for long-term service trip," the message from Moscow. "Your education, bank accounts, car, house etc. - all these serve one goal: fulfill your main mission, i.e. to search and develop ties in policymaking circles in US and sent intels," the message added.

The complaint states that such agents - known as "illegals" - are highly trained in "foreign languages; agent-to-agent communications, including the use of brush-passes; short-wave radio operation and invisible writing; the use of codes and ciphers, including the use of encrypted

Morse code messages; the creation and use of a cover profession; counter-surveillance measures" and more.

A "brush pass" is a covert hand-off of secret information, made as two agents brush past one another in public.

All of the defendants are charged with conspiracy to act as an agent of a foreign government without notifying the U.S. Attorney General, which carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison. All but two of the defendants are also charged with conspiracy to commit money laundering, which carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

The charges are filed in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York.

Who was DEMOCRAT Sen. Robert C. Byrd?

Enamored of the Ku Klux Klan parades that he witnessed in his youth, Byrd joined the KKK in 1942 and was eventually elected Exalted Cyclops of his local chapter. In his 2005 memoir, Robert C. Byrd: Child of the Appalachian Coalfields, Byrd describes the Klan as a fraternal assembly of “upstanding people” who at no time engaged in, or preached violence against, blacks, Jews, or Catholics. He adds that it was a Klan official who first persuaded him to seriously consider a career in politics.

In 1945 Byrd penned a letter to Mississippi’s segregationist senator Theodore Bilbo, wherein he expressed anger over the Truman administration’s efforts to integrate the U.S. military. Wrote Byrd:

“I shall never fight in the armed forces with a Negro by my side ... Rather I should die a thousand times, and see Old Glory trampled in the dirt never to rise again, than to see this beloved land of ours become degraded by race mongrels, a throwback to the blackest specimen from the wilds.”

Byrd’s relationship with the KKK continued through the late 1940s. In 1947 he wrote a letter to a Grand Wizard, stating, “The Klan is needed today as never before and I am anxious to see its rebirth here in West Virginia and in every state in the nation.”

In 1952, however, as he was running for the U.S. House of Representatives, Byrd severed his ties with the Klan. He later expressed remorse about his participation in the organization. “I know now I was wrong,” Byrd said. “Intolerance had no place in America. I apologized a thousand times ... and I don’t mind apologizing over and over again. I can’t erase what happened.”

In 1952 Byrd was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives, where he served for six years. In 1958 he was elected to his first term in the Senate.

Byrd maintained his pro-segregation stance into the mid-1960s. Most notably, he and other Democrats attempted to obstruct the Civil Rights Act of 1964 by means of a filibuster; Byrd personally filibustered the bill for more than 14 hours. As the floor manager for the segregationists, Byrd made the argument that the writers of the Declaration of Independence “did not intend that these words should be taken literally to be true” when they wrote that “all men are created equal.” “Men and races of men differ in appearance, ways, physical power, mental capacity, creativity, and vision,” Byrd added. “One man is born blind. Another is born lame. Geniuses are not made; they are born. Between two individuals, as between two races, there are broad differences.”

Also in his 1964 filibuster, Byrd introduced a “study” by Frank Boaz, whose book The Mind of Primitive Man stated that white people’s brains weighed a few grams more than black people’s brains, and that whites were thus more intelligent. At another point, Byrd cited biblical scripture to make his case for segregation: “In Leviticus, chapter 19, verse 19, we find the words: ‘Ye shall keep my statutes. Thou shalt not let thy cattle gender with a diverse kind: thou shalt not sow they field with mingled seed.’ God’s statutes, therefore, recognize the natural order of the separateness of things.”

According to Washington Post journalist Eric Pianin, Byrd, after the 1964 Civil Rights Act was enacted despite his efforts to derail it, “like other southern and border-state Democrats of his time … came to realize that he would have to temper his blatantly segregationist views and edge toward his party’s mainstream if he wanted to advance on the national stage.”

Byrd felt great antipathy for Martin Luther King, Jr. and his successful nonviolent civil-rights tactics. Seeking to discredit King in any way possible, Byrd initiated contact with the FBI in early 1968 and suggested that he could give a speech condemning King on the floor of the Senate. He said it was time that Dr. King “met his Waterloo.” The FBI, however, declined to avail itself of Byrd’s offer.

Controversy over racial issues would follow Byrd for decades thereafter. For instance, in a March 4, 2001 interview on Tony Snow's Fox News Sunday program, Byrd said the following about race relations in the United States:

"They're much, much better than they've ever been in my lifetime ... I think we talk about race too much. I think those problems are largely behind us ... I just think we talk so much about it that we help to create somewhat of an illusion. I think we try to have good will. My old mom told me, 'Robert, you can't go to heaven if you hate anybody.' We practice that. There are white niggers. I've seen a lot of white niggers in my time. I'm going to use that word. We just need to work together to make our country a better country, and I'd just as soon quit talking about it so much."

Shortly after the interview, Byrd released a statement which said: "I apologize for the characterization I used on this program [Fox News Sunday]. The phrase dates back to my boyhood and has no place in today's society."

While some denounced Byrd’s comment (then-NAACP-President Kweisi Mfume called it "repulsive"), Byrd was largely given a pass by the media and members of his own party. Some African Americans observed that had a conservative leader made the same remarks, the criticism generated would have been far greater.

Byrd was a staunch supporter of the 1973 War Powers Resolution, which stated that the President could send troops into combat abroad only by authorization of Congress. Yet he voted in favor of the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, which gave Byrd's political mentor, President Lyndon Johnson, authorization to use military force in Southeast Asia without a formal declaration of war by Congress. “I was the last one that ran out of Vietnam,” Byrd once stated. “I supported President Johnson to the end.”

By contrast, Byrd opposed most of President Reagan’s military initiatives in the 1980s. The senator voted against fighting the Communist insurgents in Central America, and against the development of a missile defense system to protect the U.S. from a nuclear attack.

Byrd's distaste for Republican-led military action continued during the administration of President George H.W. Bush (1989-1993), when, in 1990, he voted against authorizing the use of force against Iraq in what would become known as the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

Yet during the presidency of fellow Democrat Bill Clinton, Byrd voted for the use of American military force in Haiti, Bosnia, and Kosovo.

In 2002 Byrd said, “We are confident that [Iraqi President] Saddam Hussein retains some stockpiles of chemical and biological weapons, and that he has ... embarked on a crash course to build up his chemical and biological warfare capabilities. Intelligence reports indicate that he is seeking nuclear weapons.” Nevertheless, after the November 2002 elections Byrd was a vocal opponent of the resolution authorizing the use of force in Iraq, and he publicly accused the Bush administration of “playing hide-and-seek” with the real costs of the conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan.

By 2003 Byrd was branding members of the Bush administration as liars. In remarks delivered on the Senate floor in June 2003, the senator stated: “Iraq’s weapons of mass destruction remain a mystery and a conundrum. What are they, where are they, how dangerous are they? Or were they a manufactured excuse by an administration eager to seize a country?”

In the ensuing years, Byrd remained one of the Senate’s most outspoken critics of the Iraq War. In 2004 he published a book on the subject, titled Losing America: Confronting a Reckless and Arrogant Presidency.

Byrd called the Iraq conflict “a war that should not have been fought, a war in the wrong place, at the wrong time, for the wrong reasons.” He mocked President Bush for his “Mission Accomplished” speech of October 2003; he excoriated the Bush administration for its intelligence failures (regarding Iraq's presumed possession of weapons of mass destruction); and he accused the White House of having made America less safe than it had been prior to the invasion of Iraq. In 2007 Byrd voted “Yes” on two measures seeking the swift withdrawal of U.S. troops out of Iraq.

In March 2005, Illinois Senator Barack Obama joined MoveOn.org’s political-action committee in an effort to raise funds for Byrd’s 2006 reelection campaign. In 2008, Byrd would return the favor by endorsing Obama in the Democratic presidential primary.

Following is an overview of Byrd’s policy positions and his voting record on key pieces of legislation during his years in the Senate:

Abortion: Byrd received a rating of 43% by NARAL, indicating a mixed voting record on abortion. In 1999 and 2003, the senator voted in favor of bills prohibiting the procedure commonly known as partial-birth abortion. In 2004 he voted against the Unborn Victims of Violence Act, which proposed to make it an added criminal offense for someone to injure or kill a fetus while carrying out a crime against a pregnant woman. In July 2006 he voted in favor of notifying the parents of minors who have gotten out-of-state abortions. In October 2007 he voted to allow the Department of Health and Human Services to make grants to organizations that perform abortions.

Marriage: In September 1996 and June 2006, Byrd voted YES on prohibiting same-sex marriage.

Welfare: Byrd voted in favor of the Welfare Reform Act of 1996, which ultimately succeeded in moving large numbers of people off of public assistance and into jobs.

Education: Byrd received a 100% rating from the National Education Association (NEA), indicating that all of his votes were satisfactory to America’s largest labor union. Like the NEA, Byrd opposed a voucher system that would permit parents to redirect a portion of their tax dollars away from public schools and towards private-school tuition for their children. In 1997 he voted NO on a voucher proposal. In July 1996 he voted NO on allocating $75 million for abstinence education.

Affirmative Action and Set-Asides: In October 1997 Byrd voted NO on ending government programs to provide special funding earmarked for minority- and female-owned businesses. In March 1998 he voted YES on setting aside 10 percent of federal funds for highway-construction projects, for minority- and female-owned businesses.

Illegal Immigration: In May 2006 Byrd voted NO on allowing illegal aliens to get Social Security benefits. In May 2006 he voted NO on giving guest workers a path to citizenship. In September 2006 he Voted YES on building a fence along the Mexican border to stem the influx of illegal aliens. In June 2007 he voted NO on a comprehensive immigration reform bill that would have created a pathway to citizenship for illegal aliens in the United States.

Energy: Byrd consistently opposed all bills seeking to open Alaska’s Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil exploration.

Taxes: In July 1999 Byrd voted against a bill calling for $792 billion in tax cuts over a ten-year period. In July 2000 he voted against a bill to phase out estate and gift taxes by 2010. In May 2001 he voted against $1.35 trillion in federal tax cuts over an 11-year period. In May 2003 he voted against $350 billion in proposed tax reductions. In November 2005 he voted to raise the top individual income tax rate of 39.6 percent for millionaires, and to impose higher tax rates on capital gains and dividends as well. That same month, he voted against extending a number of tax cuts for five years. In February 2006 he voted NO on retaining reduced taxes on capital gains and dividends. In May 2006 he voted against $69.96 billion in tax credits and cuts through 2010.

Supreme Court: In September 2005 Byrd voted in favor of confirming President Bush's nominee, John Roberts, for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. In January 2006 Byrd also voted in favor of confirming Samuel Alito, Jr., to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Other Presidential Appointments: Byrd was the only senator to vote against the nominations of both Clarence Thomas and Thurgood Marshall to the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2005 Byrd tried to block President Bush’s nomination of Condoleezza Rice for Secretary of State.

National Security/War on Terror: In 1999 Byrd voted in favor of deploying a National Missile Defense system. In October 2001 he voted in favor of the Patriot Act anti-terrorism legislation. In December 2005 he voted NO on extending the authority of the FBI to conduct "roving wiretaps" and to access business records. In March 2006 he voted against reauthorizing the Patriot Act. In September 2006 he voted YES on preserving habeas corpus for Guantanamo Bay detainees who had been captured by the U.S. in the war on terror. In August 2007 he voted NO on removing the need for a FISA warrant for wiretapping phone calls to and from suspected terrorists believed to be located outside the United States. In February 2008 he voted YES on requiring such warrants for phone calls of that nature.

Government Reform: In October 1997 Byrd voted in favor of the McCain-Feingold campaign finance reform bill. In February 2002 he voted NO on requiring a photo ID for voter registration. In July 2007 he voted NO on requiring a photo ID to cast a ballot in federal elections.

Who was Strom Thurmond?
James Strom Thurmond (December 5, 1902 – June 26, 2003) was an American politician who served as the 103rd Governor of South Carolina and as a United States Senator. He also ran for the Presidency of the United States in 1948 as the segregationist States Rights Democratic Party (Dixiecrat) candidate, receiving 2.4% of the popular vote and 39 electoral votes. Thurmond later represented South Carolina in the United States Senate from 1954 to April 1956 and November 1956 to January 2003, at first as a Democrat and after 1964 as a Republican, switching parties as the conservative base shifted.

He conducted the longest filibuster ever by a lone senator in opposition to the Civil Rights Act of 1957, at 24 hours and 18 minutes in length, nonstop. He later moderated his position on race, but continued to defend his early segregationist campaigns on the basis of states' rights in the context of Southern society at the time,[2] never fully renouncing his earlier viewpoints.[3][4] After his death it was revealed that Thurmond and a black maid, Carrie Butler, had a daughter whom Thurmond never publicly acknowledged.

Shortly after Thurmond's death on June 26, 2003, Essie Mae Washington-Williams publicly revealed that she was Strom Thurmond's daughter. She was born to a black maid, Carrie "Tunch" Butler (1909–1948), on October 12, 1925, when Butler, a minor at the time, was 16 years old, and Thurmond 22.

Republican, racist, child rapist. Bet you hypocrites are PROUD.

Well, we're pretty darn happy that he was a child rapist while he was a Democrat.

At least now perhaps some of the regulars will see you for what you are.

LOL! Even in writing, body language speaks louder than words. You shake your head as a negative, negating the positive words.

He certainly is the driving force for their being in this group. No doubt of that. He even admitted to calling for them to come here. He is a trouble maker of the lowest sort. The kind that throws a rock at someone from behind then swears that it wasn't him. Meanwhile, everyone else saw him throw it, but he is too self-centered to realize that there are others about.

It shouldn't be too very long before someone else hurts him. I'm talking about in real life. Have you seen all the posts made with his name to many different groups, attacking race, religion, and culture? He's even gone so far as to call Mohamed names. That's enough to write a death sentence. Noooooo, I don't think Gregg is too long for this mortal coil.

Can anyone provide his snail mail address? That would quicken the process. Or even his QSL?

Gregg called for the trolls and the trolls came running. Now they will do to this group just as they did to other groups - destroy it. Already there is more infighting here than ever before. Certainly more fighting than talk about radios. No wonder the trolls made him president of their group.

Americans are wogs.

Wogs live south of the Trent, and at 54 degrees all of the USA except Alaska lies south of the Trent.

Nurk... I think you're losing the thread here. We are all brothers under the same Distinguished Troll Society banner. We should feel free to say what's on our minds just as long as we keep up the holy mission. I'm a member in good standing, just as Larbie is. And you too. But you're as crazy as a shithouse rat! Let's face it. When it comes to sanity, you flat out missed the boat. But hey, that's OK. Just so long as we keep to the game plan. I asked you guys to help me out here, and you're doing just fine. The fact that you and Larbie are fruitcakes doesn't diminish the work we are doing. I think it adds a certain dash of elegance to it all!

Nurk, are you OK? This post really isn't up to your usual standards. You are falling down on the job and might have to be put on probation as a member of the DTS. Are you feeling the pressure of your own psychosis? We are here to help you. Or pour the hemlock if that's what you decided to do. We can understand. Few anti-Islam Trolls are Missing...

It is very quiet here at alt.religion.islam since few of our trolls are missing...

Well, in the past at least two of anti-Islam trolls have made a clumsy and embarrassed departure (only to creep back sheepishly after few days later).

I'm rather concerned at these suddenly departures, unannounced and unexplained. I have assumed that maybe they get restraining orders, incarceration, heart-attacks, committed suicide, admission to mental hospital, murdered or killed in car accident: So I'm always vaguely relieved when one or any of them reappears, even if he is using the same old dirty tricks such forgeries and spam

If you guys actually want to save your group you MUST stop reading/replying to the trolls.

No matter how you reply to them, you are encouraging them. I know it sounds crazy, but remember, they are crazy.

Check out how you deal with temper tantrums in young children only by ignoring them.

Good luck.

You want to know something Nurk? I really wish it was me! This is so funny watching the DTS get trolled!!! You jerks are getting done to you what you've done in every newsgroup you've infested and, if I must say so, it's about time!

BTW, I notice lardgay has altered his ID. I wondered why he popped up in my newsgroup reader when he's in my killfile. Never mind, he's safely back in there now!

You'll find these particular trolls are "self feeding". They get to a point where they are the only voices in a newsgrou,. rec.knives being a case in point.

For a guy who names himself after chopped up chicken, your post actually says quite a lot! We should just call you chickenshit. It's more appropriate.

We know you're Australian. You must be the pedophile? Nice photo of you on the Australian sex offender's page. It says he was thrown out of Thailand, you chose a Thai screen name. Yeah... it fits.

That certainly worked well for rec.knives, didn't it. And soc.culture.thai. Rec.knives gets almost two knife related posts a month these days, But 20-30 troll posts. I don't think your 'let it be'

Sorry Nurk, 'twasn't me! Yesterday I was in Canberra for the day! We've got a new Prime Minister and it seems there'll be quite a few changes in immigration policy as a result. Left home at 7am and didn't get back until 9pm. Interesting trip, A bunch of us went to Canberra in a chartered Cessna Citation II, an 8 passenger jet. Less than an hour from Melbourne to Canberra, cruising speed of 746 Kph (that's 464 Mph to you US folks!). I'd like one in my garage!!

Today I spent all day in the Melbourne CBD attending meetings. Probably will continue this trend for the rest of the week so it looks like I'll only have an hour or two late at night to post anything on usenet. Seems like you trolls are managing quite fine though. I get home and see you've all been quite busy in my absence!

Nope, that joker was living in Thailand a long time! I've never been in Thailand for more than a few days at a time and nearly always on business. The Aussie federal police had their eyes on him for quite a while.

BTW, there is no photo of David leonard Arthur on the Australian Sex Offenders page. More's the pity as there should be a mug shot of each and every one of them.

Krypsis isn't a Thai word, it's in the English dictionary! You must be looking at the American one! They cut all the English words down to one syllable in that one so you "guys" can pronounce them and still you get it wrong! ;-)

I'd agree with you except that none of the younger folk even know who Roy Rogers is or was. He was well known to our age group but, when we drop off the perch, who's going to know him? What's going to make the younger generation interested enough to even want to find out?
Maybe the state museum would be interested enough to take some of the stuff and set up a smaller display?? Worth a try!

The Democratic National Committee will debut on Tuesday a new web-based feature that will empower several million Democratic activists to serve as "trackers" of Republican candidates throughout the country.

In a move that could add a broad new element of accountability to elections -- or simply make the political process even more gaffe-centric -- the DNC is encouraging its followers to upload video, mail pieces or audio recordings of GOP officials to a DNC-run site.

If carried out as planned, the new online tool could drastically alter the landscape of the 2010 elections, with campaign functions contracted out to hundreds of free volunteers.

Hi
I was turning on the E5 and got no response on the LED board. I thought the batteries were old and changed them and had the same thing occur. I used the AC adapter from Eton and again nothing. No read out on the board or volume. Dead.
Finally I got a paper clip and pushed the reset button while i had the AC adapter plugged in and the set went on.
I have had the radio for a year and this is the first time this has occurred. Anyone have any ideas on what is happening
Thanks,
Mike

If this is one incident, it may be nothing. After all, they include a reset button for a reason. Specifically, because they expected a need to arise for its use.

If this doesn't recur in a while, it's likely nothing but a glitch on the logic board. Could be caused by static. Could be caused by a local storm. A quick spike on the mains. I"ve seen things like this caused by a nearby pulse of radio energy. Like a two way radio.

If it does recur, it could be an impending logic board failure. But it may be, and more likely so, the logic board lock up is a secondary symptom to another issue. This could be a loose battery, or a dirty or oxidized terminal, momentarily interrupting voltage to the board while moving the radio. Or a battery with physical dimensions out of spec. (I had this happen with my SAT 500 when using Energizers and some rechargeables. Changing to Duracells and name built rechargeables fixed the problem.) It may be caused by a failing surface mount capacitor, which happens with an irritating frequency. And there are connections to the battery box. An intermittent here will drive you nuts.

You say the radio is a year old. Depending on your warranty, you may be SOL for a cost free remediation by the factory, should the radio fail. But there is always service and repair available.

For now, it's a one time thing. Don't worry about it. When you start this fault happen more often, then start looking for electrical or mechanical failures.

There used to be a Roy Rogers Roast Beef restaurant on Terry Road, almost at the intersection of Terry Road and Highway 80.One night many years ago when I was out rambling around, I stopped off there.I was the only one sitting at a table in there and there was a pretty waitress gal cleaning off a table.She real quick like hiked her skirt above her arse so I could see her white panties.

It's quiet, the audio is quite good, and filters are well selected.

As far as digging out deep DX, you'll hear about the same signals on either, with a decent antenna.

Does your R-71a have PBT?

Child rapist? -Nope!

The age of concent in South Carolina is 16.

http://www.avert.org/age-of-consent.htm

Racist? - on the contrary!

December 17, 2003-
Essie Mae Washington-Williams, a 78-year-old retiree living in Los Angeles, says former U.S. Sen. Strom Thurmond Sr., a onetime segregationist, fathered her when he was 22 and living in his parents' home in Edgefield. Her mother, Carrie Butler, 16 at the time, worked as a maid in the Thurmonds' home.

"She waited until after his passing because she had such a profound love and respect for her father and so did he for her. ... They both shared a mutual respect that raised the bar of integrity, as we generally know it," Wheaton said Tuesday on ABC's "Good Morning America."

He said Williams was not seeking money and did not want to challenge Thurmond's will.

How does having sex and creating life with a different race make one a racist?

Your question about R-71 vs R-2000....R-71 and R-2000 are about equivalent receivers in their class. Some trivial advantages one way or the other, but on the same antenna, they're about indistinguishable in performance. The Kenwood does have better audio. And the R-71 better ergonomics.

As far as comparing the two to the Drake, it's largely a matter of taste. The design, the layout, the operation of the Drake fits some operators' preferences better.

As far as resale value goes, however, R-71a, even with PBT, will run less than your Drake. Some models by a considerable margin. They seem to hold value better than the ICOM's or the Kenwoods. And Kenwood support has been flagging on R-2000, lately. While support on the Drake is still quite good.

If a choice had to be made, I'd sell the ICOM and keep the Drake.

You're right. The Drake looks like a home satellite TV receiver. That's because at the time Drake was making only high end home satellite TV receivers. Their days of making ham or SW radios were long over.

So they decided that your average SWL would want a radio that looked like the rest of their audio equipment and was 100% remote controllable. It even came with a remote control like a satellite receiver.

Ergonomicaly, it's either wonderful or terrible depending upon how you feel a radio should feel. Either way inside is a top notch recevier.

Note that they made them for around 15 years in several variants.
In the US there was an R8, RA8 and R8B. There also was an R8E sold in Europe (based on the original R8), although all of them work on 230 volts.

I'm not much on this racist crap under my name because anyone with common sense that can read my other posts or check my IP (won't be able to do it that much longer though -heh) knows it's not me. Having said that though, I did run into this a couple days ago. I don't like the killing of illegals part of it - but I haven't played a video game since the days of Asteroids. I could turn that machine over (pretty hard to do) maybe once every thirty to fifty times. So when I ran into this "game" for lack of a better word - it was pretty fun because you control the site on the gun. AGAIN - I don't condone this in real life but it's kinda funny. I think my high score was 63 killed. Enlarge your screen and turn up your speakers, you'll see what I mean. If someone beats my high score let me know because I just can't get past that number for some reason. http://www.resist.com/other/border_patrol.swf

Not sure about this, not sure that I wanted to know.

In some cases it's an invasion of privacy (alcoholism and psychiatric problems) people with these will only get my pity, in others it's good to know racism and pedophilia.

Racism sucks big time, and civilised people should have not time for it, side note: recognising racial differences and cultural differences is not racism. I have no time for racists.

Pedophiles have an illness, however it's an illness that they know they have and they know it's wrong. Basically having sex with children is not acceptable.

I used to look at these people with a hope that they could be salvaged, and I could imagine only someone with a poor sense of humor on the other end of the cable.

After seeing the above I can only feel sorrow at something that is in most cases nonredeemable. In a way I wish I didn't know.

The whole discussions that come to these groups are highly inappropriate, and worse off topic.

None of the above is about knives, cooking, Thai culture, or shortwave radio.

Regards Charles

When ever a bully like Takin get frightened they retreat to where they feel comfortable. For Takin, it's calling EVERYONE who ever spoke out against him Kramer. How many different people, Takin? 30? 40? People who had been posting to Usenet for years suddenly, according to Takin, were Kramer. Takin sees Kramer under his bed at night. He sees him in his dark closets. Takin sees Kramer standing across the street watching him.

Takin has a problem. By the way, Takin, which one on the list is you? Are you the pedophile or are you just psychotic?

Ah, so I see you're wising up a little! Now you're getting the idea that posting all this racist stuff with an open ID wasn't such a good idea eh? Now the DTS is "training" you in the finer art of ID hiding! Soon you'll be able to wreak havoc on RRS and nobody will know it's you! At least, that's what you will believe. Your problem is that a dummy like yourself leaves other forms of clues to your identity. Let's face it Gregg, you're just not that bright!

You didn't like the killing part but you seem to have racked up quite an impressive score for someone who hates killing!

I thought it was someone named Steve Calvin. Or was it the Steve Kramer in the cancer support group? But you all said it was Krypsis too. I've read so many different names for him right here in rec.radio.shortwave that it's obvious that A) these trolls are delusional, B) they are quite paranoid, and C) Gregg is responsible for them being here.

What I do find interesting is that according to Google, Steve Kramer from the knife group hasn't made a post to Usenet since August 25, 2008, but these fuckwits are still raving on and on about him! Almost two years since he's been gone, but they keep him alive in their delusions. That tells a lot about their though processes, or lack there of.

Alcoholism brings out the latent homosexuality in some people. Judge him not too harshly. Do the right thing and FORGIVE.

A few, randomly selected quotes from the poor misguided soul indicate a pattern, however..Let us Pray.

==========
Do you spit or swallow?

Very tasty!

Ya right, suck my dick...

Actually, I know quite a few homosexuals.

I interact on at least a weekly basis with them, and surprisingly enough, they themselves utter the words 'damn faggots' with those who tend to step out of line.

I don't 'fear' homos, oh faux one!

Well, when one considers that they are at least pleasuring themselves a good amount of the time then at least they can't cause to much trouble.

Come on! How can anyone be straight after free beer and sausages?

Everything is just fine. It's Tulip Time!

Is that the gay place to be?

I anxiously await the love, the adulation, the throngs of people cheering me on and the lovely women casting rose petals before me as I stroll down the street.

Were you the blower or the blowee?

I know it may be hard, but as you withdraw, it will shrink away..

Sounds like the Marxist Mafia is really worried about WE THE PEOPLE kicking their treasonous asses to the curb. I bet the Marxist thugs' desperation cause them to become violent as November draws near.

Mind you, the GOP isn't so great either, but IMO they're the lesser of

I owned both an ICOM R71A and a Drake R8 (at different times). The Drake was better, especially because of it's synchronous AM detector and decent audio. It's noise limiter was pretty good too.

Pres. Obama reignited the Amnesty debate this week after two White House meetings that will be followed up with a Pro-Amnesty speech at American University tomorrow.

On Monday, Obama met with his pro-Amnesty Labor Secretary, Hilda Solis, Obama obviously met with nobody from our side of the issue!

Pres. Obama's speech tomorrow will call for an Amnesty for the nation's 11-18 million illegal aliens. The new White House strategy is to place blame on Republicans who are demanding increased border security before considering an Amnesty.

Bash? You mean several weeks of announcing it, then three/four people attending; you, Larbgai, and Takin Thepiss. Hardly what I'd call a bash. In fact, I'd call it a supreme washout. Just what I'd expect from a bunch of wash outs. And someone named QuestionGuy? Just another name for you psychos to attribute to someone else.

But as long as you're here, would you please answer the question posed by 'David?' All we want to know is 'what did he do to you?' Or are you just playing net cop? You do realize, don't you, that being a net cop is just another word for 'bully.'

Are you really this paranoid? You've attributed 30-40 different posters to him as sock puppets. Are you so afraid that you really believe he'd waste his time on you?

I asked Nurk this same question; what did he do to you that makes you such a net cop. Do you realize that a net cop is nothing more than a bully? You've accused him of being a bully, but for the past few years you show up in different groups bullying many different people. What makes you different from him?

That fan club can be found in EVERY group he posted to. A quick look at Google proves that. Where ever you trolls have tried to slam him, there have been many different posters telling you that they know him, have known him for years, like him, and that he isn't the problem, you are. I haven't found a single post saying anyone likes you trolls.

Excuse me!!
Would you stop for a moment?!
O...man...Haven't you thought-one day- about yourself ?
Who has made it?

Have you seen a design which hasn't a designer ?!

Have you seen a wonderful,delicate work without a worker ?!
It's you and the whole universe!..

Who has made them all ?!!

You know who ?.. It's "ALLAH",prise be to him.

Just think for a moment.

How are you going to be after death ?!

Can you believe that this exact system of the universe and all of these great creation will end in in nothing...just after death!

Have you thought, for a second, How to save your soul from Allah's punishment?!

Haven't you thought about what is the right religion?!

Read ... and think deeply before you answer..

It is religion of Islam.

It is the religion that Mohammad-peace upon him- the last prophet, had been sent by.

It is the religion that the right Bible- which is not distorted-has preached.

Just have a look at The Bible of (Bernaba).

Don't be emstional.

Be rational and judge..

Just look..listen...compare..and then judge and say your word.

Heck, you don't even respect yourself, ya idiot. If you did, you wouldn't have lied about that PhD.

Handy Shortwave Chart
Bill McFadden
billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. For multi-use bands, primary usage is shown.
Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2008 FCC rules and Sep 2009 NTIA manual, see Chapter 4 of:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/redbook/redbook.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day; frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Please e-mail suggestions and corrections to billmc@agora.rdrop.com.

Phone line as SW antenna

Changes preceded by "|".

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area.
Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines | usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because | DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the | telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead.
Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should | be rated 250 volts or higher.

N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

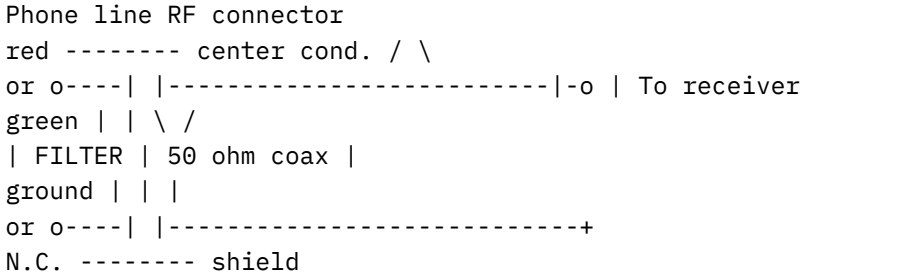
A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:



| RECOMMENDED FILTERS
| If you don't want to make your own filters, the following have good | performance, are well-built and affordable:
|
| Model 400 BCB interference filter (3.5 MHz highpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#bcb
|

| Model 420 HF lowpass filter (30 MHz lowpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#3
| (scroll down a bit to see the model 420)
|
| If you have a random-wire antenna, the following unit will provide | impedance matching and lightning protection (connect antenna to 450-ohm | terminal):
|
| Model 182A beverage matching unit
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/reconly.html#Beverage Matching

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

Date: 09 Jan 91 00:54:08 GMT
From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {
} }
-------------+-----------+-----------------
```

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

From: bill@videovax.tv.tek.com (William K. McFadden)
Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

LOW-PASS FILTER (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

signal in ------- filter 1 -------- filter 2 -------- signal out

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

PARTS SOURCE

Parts for the filters can be obtained from the following source:

Among Them Are Some Who Have Faith

Qur'an 3:110-112 Surah Ale-'Imran (The Family of 'Imran)

Ye are the best of peoples evolved for mankind enjoining what is right forbidding what is wrong and believing in Allah. If only the People of the Book had faith it were best for them; among them are some who have faith but most of them are perverted transgressors. They will do you no harm barring a trifling annoyance; if they come out to fight you they will show you their backs and no help shall they get. Shame is pitched over them (like a tent) wherever they are found except when under a covenant (of protection) from Allah and from men; they draw on themselves wrath from Allah and pitched over them is (the tent of) destitution. This because they rejected the signs of Allah and slew the prophets in defiance of right; this because they rebelled and transgressed beyond bounds.

My intention is to educate misled & misinform people about Islam, and prove to the world that Islam is indeed a religion of peace and that Muslims can live side by side with other faiths.

We have as Muslims massive responsibility as individuals and as groups to expose the lies, distortions and educate all people about Islam

I strongly believe that true Muslims are the best people on earth.

I also believe that we can win the hearts of masses despite the efforts by anti-Muslims tactics such as stealing aliases, Identity theft, forgeries, deception etc...

However those dirty tricks used by anti-Muslims failed to scare the people who wish to a convert and accepted Islam as his\her faith.

It's only exposed the prejudice, bigotry, and racism adapted by the enemies of Islam.

Many thanks to all Muslims online for conforming to moral and ethical principles and posting a lot of our virtuously, our morals, our family values and our commitment to worship of Allah.

May Allah bless you all……

Don't know whether there's a differentiation between the South/Eastern and I am a socialist, but not a state socialist. If the Patriot movement aligns with corporate puppet masters then they will have been usurped.

I don't believe in any institution that allows amalgamation of power and control.

Candy you used to eat when you was a kid.

Back in the 1940's and 1950's, there was a candy bar that was sold at the movie theaters, the name of the candy bar was Power House.It was a big expensive candy bar.I think I remember it cost about 17 cents.

Hi Steve! :o)

Things have really livened up on Usenet since you came back and started trolling again! Any chance of you bringing back some of your sock puppets as well?

I'd like to see Howard Aslan again, and I'm sure a lot of the regulars here would like to see him again as well. How about it? :o)

If not Howard then any one of these would do instead:
Clair Vickers, Pickled Drunk, Phil Glazer, Herbert Stent, Emile Horn, Chu Suhui, Dark, Steeve, Mr.Rogers, Pike, Justin, HawaiianEye, Kadek, or The Question Guy. chuckle

Since his official 'resignation' from the group a couple of years ago he's crept back in on average once every 6 to 9 months, using a brand new sock puppet. Once he's been outed he goes quiet for awhile then comes back ranting and spitting before finally scuttling off and going back into hiding again.

I wonder where he gets his sock puppets from? :-)

Trolls In the Wild

You can always tell who the REAL trolls are by how many un-related newsgroups they post to in a single post. Anytime the number of groups is greater than two, you know you have encountered the near-fatally boring trollus gigantus and should immediately take steps

RadioMatt (whom by the way hasn't posted since 2001) stuck his nose into the Kombat Kraven/Troll mix with this diatribe talking tough but failing to deliver the goods...

Are you really this paranoid? You've attributed 30-40 different posters to him [Kraven Kramer] as sock puppets. Are you so afraid that you really believe he'd waste his time on you?

I asked Nurk this same question; what did he [Pinkie Kramer] do to you that makes you such a net cop. Do you realize that a net cop is nothing more than a bully? You've accused him of being a bully, but for the past few years
you show up in different groups bullying many different people. What makes you different from him [Pinkie]?

How are the Trolls different than Kombat Pinkie Kramer Matt, let us count the ways...

Great list Fred...lol...everyone I just shake my head on, some of them are hilarious though. I could add on another twenty just off the top of my head, there are so many that if I didn't know it myself I would swear there was some bullcrap or exagerration going on. But I know better. ;-)

Yeah, let someone come to my door and knock. We'll make the newspapers. I promise that. And all holy hell will break loose with your ISP's and your freedoms - and again - that is a promise. Bring it. I welcome it. I'll be here. Not going anywhere. No one is going to Gregg, your fear is showing. It's tough to be a coward, isn't it? You sound like you're actually shaking while you type. Well, you should have thought of that before you began bad-mouthing people on the Internet.

Do you realize that in one paragraph you went from 'let them come, I'll show them' to 'no one is coming?' Did you mess your pants? No? Don't worry. You will. Probably around 3AM, 4AM. That's the best time to come calling.

I'd have said "Mad"!

Their behaviour goes beyond way sad.

In the real world, they'd be locked up in padded rooms!

Their history shows that, once they infest a newsgroup, they never leave. They may preach that they will leave once the object of their desire leaves but, in reality, they then begin to target other denizens of their infected newsgroups. Any excuse to hang around and harass posters.

I don't get it at all. It doesn't make sense.

I asked what Kramer had done to him personally, but he never answered.

In the list that he wrote, he complained that Kramer said he knew where the elephants lie down. So what? Everybody knows where elephant lie down! If these guys thought it was some sort of secret the joke is really on them. It must make them look awfully dumb to other people reading it.

He said he didn't like it that Kramer kept track of how long he has stopped smoking. Huh? So what? There are newsgroups where EVERYBODY keeps track of how long they don't smoke. Or drink. Or bite their nails.
Or over-eat and under-eat. So what? I think it's a great idea if it helps them correct habits that they don't want.

He didn't like the clothing that Kramer wore? Please tell me that this is all a joke because if it isn't, these guys are pretty crazy and could be dangerous. They are like stalkers.

Among Them Are Some Who Have Faith

Qur'an 3:110-112 Surah Ale-'Imran (The Family of 'Imran)

Ye are the best of peoples evolved for mankind enjoining what is right forbidding what is wrong and believing in Allah. If only the People of the Book had faith it were best for them; among them are some who have faith but most of them are perverted transgressors. They will do you no harm barring a trifling annoyance; if they come out to fight you they will show you their backs and no help shall they get. Shame is pitched over them (like a tent) wherever they are found except when under a covenant (of protection) from Allah and from men; they draw on themselves wrath from Allah and pitched over them is (the tent of) destitution. This because they rejected the signs of Allah and slew the prophets in defiance of right; this because they rebelled and transgressed beyond bounds.

My intention is to educate misled & misinform people about Islam, and prove to the world that Islam is indeed a religion of peace and that Muslims can live side by side with other faiths.

We have as Muslims massive responsibility as individuals and as groups to expose the lies, distortions and educate all people about Islam

I strongly believe that true Muslims are the best people on earth.

I also believe that we can win the hearts of masses despite the efforts by anti-Muslims tactics such as stealing aliases, Identity theft, forgeries, deception etc...

However those dirty tricks used by anti-Muslims failed to scare the people who wish to a convert and accepted Islam as his\her faith.

It's only exposed the prejudice, bigotry, and racism adapted by the enemies of Islam.

Many thanks to all Muslims online for conforming to moral and ethical principles and posting a lot of our virtuously, our morals, our family values and our commitment to worship of Allah.

May Allah bless you all……

 Gidday Rick, good to see you on deck again.
As to the sock puppets, I'm afraid you are correct.
To quote the master, "Stupid people make you do stupid things".

This latest collection are the saddest ever, I think that old Kombat is losing his grip (along with his marbles).
Ever since his deportation from Thailand, he has been in a blue funk, hiding here then there and popping up every now and again to test the waters. They say that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery but Kombats (clumsy) attempts to use various members of the DTS is amateur to say the best.
Shows how low his esteem has fallen.
I hope his next course of treatment will be more successful.

I know I shouldn't but it's hard not to feel sorry for the old buffoon and the once glorious PhotoEnvisions empire now laid to ruin. All that's left is the shabby website with an insulting message to Bob Johnson hidden on the front page.

No more magazine columns, dinners with the chief of police, guest invites to the Bangkok Radison Hotel or front page features in the local newspapers. No more patrolling the sois of Loh Kroi, with his truncheon at the ready...

The irony in it being him being kicked out from LOS instead of the man he tried so very hard to have deported probably goes some way in explaining the venom in his recent postings.

The recent tendancy for hijacking ID's really shows Kramer to be a shadow of his former self. Kramer in his heyday would ever imagine himself stooping so low.

Vicky Pelaez, one of the spies nabbed by the FBI this week, is a long-time faithful scribe for the Cuban propaganda ministry....

It's not often that Fidel Castro shares the stage. If during one of his weekly screeds (which he refers to as "Reflections") he briefly steps aside to highlight a quote from a foreign well-wisher or agent, that brief quote will surely echo throughout his propaganda ministry.

Among those on whom Castro has bestowed this rare honor is Vicky Pelaez, known primarily to Hispanics in the New York area for her columns (ongoing for almost 20 years) in El Diario/La Prensa, the largest circulation Spanish language paper in the U.S.

"Hers is such a well-argued document," Castro opined in his screed of May 8 [1] referring to an article by Vicky Pelaez, "that I do not wish to conclude this reflection without including it:

"The huge marches of this May Day condemning the pernicious anti-immigration law passed in Arizona, have shaken all of the United States," starts Vicky Pelaez as quoted by Castro. "[The law] resembles laws passed in Nazi Germany or South Africa in the apartheid period."

The article goes on to accuse Jan Brewer of "hate against people with an accent," of "promoting ethnic cleansing," and of authorizing Arizona's police to fire upon people based on the color of their skin. It was as if Vicky was transcribing from a mainstream media/Democratic teleprompter. Castro quotes her for up to about 500 words, almost half of his screed. Again, a highly unusual honor in Castro's universe. But then, Frontpagemag.com has already explained [2] Castro's discomfiture with Arizona's SB 1070.

Ms. Vicky Pelaez became much, much better known this week when arrested by the FBI and charged (so far), along with 9 others, including her husband, of spying for the Russian Federation. The FBI affidavit stated that she traveled to an unnamed South American country to pick up cash for fellow agents in Yonkers sent by Russian handlers and to pass on messages. According to the FBI, in one 2002 trip, Pelaez returned with $80,000 stuffed into her luggage — eight bags each containing $10,000.

An item utterly unreported by the media is that Vicky Pelaez has been a faithful scribe for the Castro regime's propaganda ministry [3] for years. Her work appears just to the left of Fidel and Raul's own articles. As an interesting aside, the Huffington Post also publishes a Castro court scribe, [4] innocuously described as a "Cuba-based media analyst."

"Fidel Castro is already immortal!" wrote Vicky Pelaez [5] in the Castro regime's house organ back in 2006:

|"He is a man who inspired and demonstrated the fertile path of truth for other leaders!…

|We had the moments of Christ, Mohammed, Confucius, Plato, Aristotle, Descartes, Newton, Pascal, Bolivar, Marti, |Che Guevara, etc. They all left the scene, yet unlike us mere mortals, they remain immortal…..they were rebels like |the very angels of God who did not resign themselves to a sad destiny of mere mortals but instead valiantly challenged |the very heavens to steal its glory!

|Fidel Castro Ruz belongs to that glorious group of rebels! With his towering intelligence, discipline, drive, and |persistence he launched his heroic struggle and gained his people's support to fight for new and sovereign Cuba! But |his fight is not over…!"

Manpower and time constraints prevent the FBI from using odes to Fidel Castro as tips to uncover Castro agents. Keeping tabs on Castro groupies would mean tailing the majority of the mainstream media pundits, Hollywood elites, and liberal arts faculties at every college and university from sea to shining sea—not to mention a plurality of Democratic legislators, including the entire Congressional Black Caucus. [6] One only need to consider the following evidence:

"He looked directly into my eyes! Then he asked: how can we help President Obama? Fidel Castro really wants President Obama to succeed." So exhaled CBC member Laura Richardson (D-Calif.) upon returning from a junket to Cuba in April 2009.

"It was quite a moment to behold! Fidel Castro was very engaging and very energetic." CBC member Rep. Barbara Lee. (D-Calif.) stated after the same trip.

"He's one of the most amazing human beings I've ever met!" CBC member Emanuel Cleaver (D-Mo.) announced after the trip.

And from Hollywood:

"Castro is very selfless and moral, one of the world's wisest men." (Oliver Stone.)

"If you believe in freedom, if you believe in justice, if you believe in democracy, you have no choice but to support Fidel Castro!" (Harry Belafonte.)

"The eight most important hours of my life," (Stephen Spielberg describing his dinner with Castro, as reported in the Wall Street Journal.)

And also from the media:

“Fidel Castro is Cuba’s Elvis!” (Dan Rather)

“Castro has brought very high literacy and great health-care to his country. His personal magnetism is powerful, his presence is commanding.” (Barbara Walters.)

Alas, space restrains us here. The bandwith required to list all such odes to Fidel Castro would bankrupt George Soros.

As to the story with Pelaez, Columnist Joy Tiz [7] reminds us of profound warnings issued from KGB defector Yuri Bezmenov back in 1984:

|“Cynical, ego-centric people, people who can look into your eyes with angelic expression and tell you a lie. These are |always the most recruitable people (by the KGB) –people who lack moral principals – who are either too greedy or who |suffer from too much self-importance.”

This description would seem to capture Pelaez perfectly: Last week on the Spanish-language TV show A Mano Limpia [8], a former colleague of Vicky Pelaez at New York’s El Diario/La Prensa named Miguel Ángel Sánchez, recalled Vicky’s suspension from the paper for plagiarism and how her husband Juan Lazaro (a Baruch college professor arrested with her) served as the official New York treasurer for the Peruvian Communist terrorist group Sendero Luminoso [9].

KGB defector Yuri Bezmenov also revealed how “those who reject Communist influence in their own country will be character assassinated…” And as it happens, Castro’s press thinks rather poorly of a FrontPage writer whom they’ve placed on the Stalinist regime’s official enemies list. “Traitor, liar and cowardly Bambi-Killer” are among the mildest insults Castro’s press hurled against your loyal servant here. [10] (Also note how, in the 2nd paragraph, the Castro-regime’s house organ insults Frontpage Magazine, Jamie Glazov and David Horowitz.)

http://www.anandtech.com/show/3794/the-iphone-4-review/2

1) Cupping tightly - This is the absolute worst case and involves squeezing the phone very tightly, like people are doing online in videos demonstrating all the bars going away. I squeeze the phone hard and make sure my palms are sweaty as well. You'd never hold the phone this way because it's physically painful.
2) Holding naturally, comfortably - This is just how one would hold the phone typically in a relaxed way. Not squeezing it to purposefully reduce signal, but making contact with the fingers and not an open palm.
3) Resting atop an open, flat palm.
4) Holding naturally, but inside a case - In this situation the Bumper for iPhone 4, an Otter Box for the 3GS, and a comparable generic case for the Nexus One.
5) Pinching the top and bottom - Our baseline, virtually no attenuation. Held only to keep the exact position constant. It's not reported since this is considered ideal.
Signal Attenuation Comparison in dB - Lower is Better ï¿½
Cupping Tightly Holding Naturally On an Open Palm Holding Naturally Inside Case iPhone 4 24.6 19.8 9.2 7.2
iPhone 3GS
14.3 1.9 0.2 3.2
HTC Nexus One
17.7 10.7 6.7 7.7
It's difficult to be exact about the data, since signal is very sensitive to direction, ambient conditions, and cell breathing. To generate these numbers, I measured at least 6 times and took the average. The results are pretty self explanatory. Inside a case, the iPhone 4 performs slightly better than the Nexus One. However, attenuation gets measurably worse depending how you hold the phone. Squeezing it really tightly, you can drop as much as 24 dB. Holding it naturally, I measured an average drop of 20 dB.ï¿½
The drop in signal from cupping the device with a case on is purely a function of us being "ugly bags of mostly water." A material which happens to be pretty good at attenuating RF - thus increasing path loss between the handset and cellular base station. There's nothing Apple nor anyone else can do to get around physics, plain and simple. It's something which demonstrably affects every phone's cellular reception.

Add in an external antenna you're essentially forced to touch and bridge to another adjacent antenna while holding, and the signal attenuation is even worse. The fact of the matter is that either the most sensitive region of the antenna should have an insulative coating, or everyone should use a case. For a company that uses style heavily as a selling point, the latter isn't an option. And the former would require an unprecedented admission of fault on Apple's part.
That's not all there is to the story, however.

They are frequently exactly like "stalkers" - minus the guts to ever actually approach someone in person.

The number that will do that is quite small - both in percentages and in actual numbers. Sadly, it is this small and hard to "seperate from the chaff" number that really ARE dangerous.

Well if you have a manually memory driven receiver then it might be difficult to make "things stick".

However if you use a PC / software to control your receiver then you might be vulnerable to "So we find you listen to the BBC World Service on Shortwave. Why would you want to do this as an American citizen?"
type of questioning.

Stock answer "because I want to learn true English and the BBC is recognised as a word wide accepted source for true English broadcasting."

To all radio amateurs

SB PROP ARL ARLP026
ARLP026 Propagation de K7RA

Most stations reported not-so-great conditions for ARRL Field Day last weekend, but there were sporadic-e openings on 6 and 10 meters.
Geomagnetic conditions were a bit rough, with the Planetary A index in double digits for both days, June 26-27. Conditions at mid-latitude were not too bad, but in Alaska the College A index was 20 and 22. With atmospheric noise from seasonal thunderstorms it was a bit rough at times, although with Field Day just about everyone has fun.

Read comments from participants at http://www.arrl.org/contests/soapbox and select 2010 ARRL Field Day from the drop-down menu.

June is over, so we have some new averages for sunspot numbers, and the numbers declined slightly. Average daily sunspot number over the month of June was 18, down from 20 in May. The three-month average centered on May was 16.2, down from 18.5 the previous month (centered on April, with data from March through May), 22.3 the month before, and 25.7 the month prior to that (centered on February).

For the past week, average daily sunspot numbers were 11.7, down from 16.1 the prior week and 26.9 before that.

The latest prediction (from Thursday afternoon) via USAF and NOAA has solar flux at 72 for July 2-3, and 74 on July 4-10. The same forecast has planetary A index at 10 for July 2, 8 on July 3-4, and 5 on July 5-10.

Geophysical Institute Prague in the Czech Republic sees quiet to unsettled conditions July 2-3, and quiet conditions July 4-8.

With sporadic-e season in full swing, we've heard a number of six meter reports. Jim O'Brien, W4AMP of Cedartown, Georgia (EM74) reports that on June 19 six meters was open most of the day. With a 2-element beam and 100 watts at midnight local time (0400z) he worked VE7BEE in DN09 and KW7Y in CN88. He noted that midnight is an odd time for multiple-hop sporadic-e skip.

Martin McCormick, WB5AGZ in Stillwater, Oklahoma sent in this note about sporadic-e on Field Day:

"On Saturday June 26, I was tuning between 25 and 30 MHZ at about 12:30 CDT and heard a narrow-band FM signal on 25.99 MHZ playing music. It was a broadcast station's Queuing system. These used to be very common around 26.xx MHZ but most stations have gone to much higher frequencies to get away from Sporadic E, F2 and illegal CB-type activity so when one hears one of these signals these days, it is rare.

I listened for a while and heard 2 ID's which turned out to be for KSCS whose actual broadcast frequency is 96.3 in Fort Worth, TX. This is very interesting because Stillwater, Oklahoma is only a bit over 200 to 250 miles from the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

The signal was full-quieting with fades for several minutes and then it vanished very quickly. This should have been good for Field Day participants on 12 and 10 meters as E Skip doesn't usually get that short.

The bands were actually pretty boring with 6 meters dead from here and not many strong signals between 25 and 30 MHZ. You'd be surprised what the letters KSCS can sound like even when heard fairly clearly. I made a recording of the audio and heard them refer to Texas but it took several runs at Radio-locator.com to find anything that made sense. Fortunately, radio locator lists stations by Call letters, frequency and program format. KSCS is in Texas, plays country music and is on 96.3 MHZ.

Some radio stations may still use these frequencies for actual remote broadcasts from a truck or public building back to the studio so you never know what you will find." Martin mentioned http://www.radio-locator.com/ which is very handy for identifying broadcast stations with a great deal of detailed information.

Jeff Hartley, N8II of Shepherdstown, West Virginia sent this report: "The good news is the almost ever present Es to fill in gaps left by low solar flux. Several times on 15 meters I have heard EA and Italy past midnight local in Europe. Saturday June 12 was fabulous with a good European opening on 10 meters from around 1320-1430Z; a couple of signals were over S9 from MW0, and DL and about 25 stations were worked mostly in SW and S Europe. Saturday June 19 at 1630Z, I was operating in the WV QSO Party. I was able to work the 'far side' of WV during several periods on 20 meters as close as about 200 miles away and had almost continuous openings to 8's, 9's, and close in 4's as well as long openings to New England.

There was also a very extensive double hop 10 meter opening to the Rockies, southwest, and west coast from 2100Z thru past 0200Z which also extended to 6 meters. I worked about 720 stations on 20 meter phone and 170 on 10 phone. I missed AK and VT for WAS, several called in from HI on 20 including KH6G mid day mid path.

Sunday the June 20 around 1300Z, I heard N0KE and K0GU in CO and others out west calling CQ DX and heard KE trying to complete a QSO with OH5. I heard locals calling a few Europeans which were in the noise here without much success. WQ7Y was very loud from NW WA here just past 6AM PDT".

Jon Jones, N0JK of Wichita, Kansas reports: "Kind of an unusual Es contact on 6 meters last Sunday June 27. I worked HC1HC Ecuador at 2345 UTC. He was in for about 20 minutes, peaked up to 599 at times. First time I have heard or worked Ecuador on 6 Meters via Es. Have worked it a number of times on F2 during both cycle 22 and 23 peaks.

Suspect it was Es rather than F2, as the solar flux was 75. Kp did reach 3, probably just enough to dampen northern Es paths and perhaps enhance Es closer to the equator. HC1HC is about 4,664 km from EM18 - two hops of 2,332 km each?"

Jon was using CW, by the way.

Sunspot numbers for June 24 through 30 were 13, 12, 0, 11, 11, 24, and 11 with a mean of 11.7. 10.7 cm flux was 74.4, 74.5, 74.5, 72.9, 73.9, 73.6 and 73.8 with a mean of 73.9. Estimated planetary
A indices were 7, 8, 15, 13, 7, 11 and 19 with a mean of 11.4.
Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 5, 8, 9, 12, 6, 8 and 15 with

There never was any arrest. There never was any deportation.

The trolls have been lying all along. I'm beginning to believe that everything they say has been a lie. I decided to do my own research.

> On Jul 2, 11:17 pm, Rick Armstrong<r...@porkpiehats.com> wrote:

"Rick Armstrong" (we'll get back to him in a minute)

I fired up the ADVANCED search function of Google and went looking for any references to Kramer's arrest or deportation. I used as my search criteria 'Steve Kramer deportation arrest Chiang Mai Thailand' but removed all the troll names to eliminate the troll posts from the search results.

The result was NOT ONE SINGLE HIT. Not a single mention anywhere of Kramer's being arrested or deported. Very strange, eh?

There are hundreds of reports of arrests of foreigners in Thailand in the Bangkok Post, the Nation, and many international newspapers. When I put in as criteria 'David Leonard Arthur deportation arrest Chiang Mai Thailand' I got back page after page of hits. I discovered the date he was captured, where he was arrested, where he was put in jail in which jail in Chiang Mai, when he was transferred to Bangkok, even when he arrived in Brisbane, Australia. This was written up daily for several weeks in the Bangkok Post and the Nation, two English language newspaper for Thailand, and was written up in the Canberra news as well.

I found this same sort of coverage for dozens of westerners arrested and deported from Thailand. Page after page of it in all newspapers.

But not a single word of arrest or deportation for Kramer. The trolls are lying.

More searching with the advanced search function shows that the name 'Rick Armstrong' has been used several times, and exposed several times too, as a sock puppet for Scott Koplin, a chronically unemployed mechanic on the list who frequents the scuba group.

The really interesting part is that with all the troll activity and all the cross-posting, none of them were going to the scuba newsgroup... until this sudden introduction of a thread by 'Rick Armstrong,' now suddenly cross-posted to rec.scuba as well.

Scott, I found one of your sock puppet posts where you posted under one name but screwed up and signed it with your own name at the bottom! Not the brightest crayon in the box, are we? I also found a picture of you in some scuba archives posing with a sound suppressed machine gun? Are you licensed for that?

I decided to do an ISP search before I went any further. Interestingly enough three of the troll IPs originate in the area of Belleview, Washington. That is the home area of Scott Koplin and K.Michael Young.

Again using the Advanced search function of Google, I began looking up the names of the people listed in another post, again removing posts made by these trolls from the search results.

Quite a few hits for David Leonard Arthur. Twice convicted of child sexual abuse in Australia, page one on Australia's Sex Offender's list.

Several hits about Scott Koplin. Besides being a drain on the state and chronically unemployed, he started his own business making some scuba related item but the business went belly up. I guess he got fired from his own business too.

Plenty of hits about Robert Johnson. It looks as if he was pretty much run out of business on a rail by the local business people in Chiang Mai, his business selling for next to nothing. He had to be physically removed from a meeting of the 'Chiang Mai Expats Club' when he threatened the lives of its members.

Not too much about Young, other than some comments made about him when he tried claiming knowledge of Micronesian cultural norms and got it completely wrong. I guess he was laughed out of the groups. There are 6 different listings for Michael Young in the Belleview, Washington area, but this being a weekend, I figure I'd wait until Monday to try calling. Skype makes it just about free, so why not?

Very little on Timothy Willis. I can find one who is listed as a teacher in a Japanese University, which according to some Usenet posts is where he is, but

To be fair, I decided to use the same Advanced search function on Google to look into Steve Kramer's history. Once again I removed all Usenet and newsgroup posts from the search criteria and used 'Steve Kramer Chiang Mai Photography Thailand' as search string.

THAT was illuminating!

I found a half dozen different magazine articles about him, I found magazine columns written by him, I found articles about his photography business (positive articles too!)in two different magazines, I found six months worth of photos/articles in airline magazines, I found both newspaper and magazine articles about his affiliation with the Royal Thai Tourist Police, I found his photos used as backgrounds in "Hash House Harrier" international magazines, numerous quotes found on many, many different company websites, etc., etc., etc.

One point of interest caught my eye. The trolls have been saying that all these different names were sock puppets he used, but I discovered that some of these same people were the ones who wrote the articles for the magazines, or were students in classes written about IN the magazine. Man, these troll can sure twist the truth!

Then I added in the troll names to his search. I found that all this negative noise is being made by 4-5 people. THAT'S ALL. They just chatter a lot, like a bunch of monkeys, and like monkeys, most of what comes out of them splatters and stinks.

Well, now I've done my homework. I know who to listen to and who to ignore. Krypsis was correct. The trolls are just nuts.

Perhaps you would provide the wonderful urls that you have discovered.

btw David, (Hope you're not the Paedo Dave friend of Kombats listed here) how is it with only a couple of posts since your registration you have made only posts about Steve Kramer.

I did see quite a few posts where people asked YOU to post urls to sites saying that Kramer WAS deported. You ignored them completely, just as Nurk_fred ignored my request for information about what Kramer did to him.

Largai, you are a fraud and a liar. Nothing you can say will change that now.

Michael Steele, Republican chairman and obvious lunatic, said:

==========
"If he's (Obama) such a student of history, has he not understood that, you know, that's the one thing you don't do is engage in a land war in Afghanistan? All right? Because everyone who's tried, over a thousand years of history, has failed," Steele said. "And there are reasons for that. There are other ways to engage in Afghanistan."

"This was a war of Obama's choosing," Steele said. "This is not something the United States has actively prosecuted or wanted to engage in."
==========

Are all politicians this retarded, or is he just trying to see how big a lie he can get away with?

Hey, idiot, I don't teach at a public school and the private corporation
I do teach for does random drug testing, so your wrong on both counts as usual, Jurk_dead2000! You are Steve Lare or so unoriginal that you're copying the rhetorical of RRS' biggest troglodyte. My teaching evaluations have been 3.96 out of 4 for several quarters in a role and I was just recognized as the best college lecturer in KY. What have you done in your

What are you trying to say Mike? I think I know. Are you saying Obama's is retarded for the Afghan war or Steele for saying what he did....or both of them are "window lickers"? Which I wouldn't disagree on either front. ;-)

Like Steele said, history shows what happens when an invading army goes into Afghanistan, why would we be any different that the Soviet Union? We actually have "rules of engagement". Heck even fictional Colonel Trautman (in one of those Rambo movies told the Soviet Commander the same thing - the ole' "we had our Vietnam and now you're going to have yours"). And yes Bryant (idiot) - like I said yearsssss ago when there was the "supposed collapse" of the USSR that you bought hook line and sinker and I said "nah baby nah- no such thing- the Bible say this" etc. etc. <heh> you know what I said. ;-) The Bible did prevail (imagine that) and the Word of God WAS right and YOU were wrong. Not shocking, but just saying.

What exactly do you mean M2?

Bwahahahahah - I am literally cracking up and had to go back and correct the wrong letters I typed....lol. Troglodyte...lol <sigh-pause> ....lol...are you trying to impress your boyfriends with that word? I heard that word for the first time in the 10th grade by the eeriest and wierdest of teachers I ever had - that as students- none of us (that I know of) could quite put a finger onto why we all felt he was "different" - we just knew as young kids that "something wasn't right". We (meaning all the students) later learned either eleven or twelve years after we graduated that indeed the feeling towards him was spot on when he made the newspapers. Troglodyte....oh quit it!!
<rolling my eyes>

Of course he was speaking of the prehistoric era and cavemen and cavewomen - I take it you mean the other definition of a recluse?
Dude, I feel I am safe in saying that Steve.....Ace to you....isn't a caveman or isn't a recluse, so are you going to admit that you are lying AGAIN or embellishing AGAIN? Just remember AGAIN, just because you say something doesn't mean it's so unless you have some proof.

So be careful if you want to turn that around (that proof statement) on me when I speak about you, follow me....jelly bean?

I am sure we will all be awaiting with fingies crossed for your proof or retraction of your statement. Troglodyte? That's the best you have to offer this group (or myself) to impress us or make us reach for a dictionary because your literary skills dwarfs us beneath you because we weren't busted for smoking illegal drugs in a hotel room with one of our students on a school sponsored event and later quit in disgrace? You still do Cheetos Bry? :-D

Gregg,

I will absolutely guarantee you that I don't smoke dope. I'm tired of your lies suggesting I do. Personally, I don't think there's anything wrong with doing so, but I make sure my students know that if they do, they need to stop. 95% of my students will be starting professional careers after graduating - they need to be prepared for substance abuse testing as a condition of employment and random drug tests on the technological jobs they'll be starting in.

If you send me your address, I'll be happy to send you copies of my quarterly blood tests from my physician. These tests have to be certified and will prove to you that you ought to shut your mouth before I actually take a slander action against you.
